Romantic literature in this country sustained a loss difficult to appraise when the delegate claimers decided to go in for politics instead of letters. Here are figures indicating the existence of a talent that applied in another field might have given the world another Pere Goriot, while the statistics as to Hoover delegates alone might easily have become another Count of Monte Cristo. The farm bloc rises in its wrath and "if the President won't right us, we know a man who will." That is more than we know.

43 DEAD, HUNDREDS INJURED AS QUAKE HITS BULGAR CITIES

Tchirdan, Near the Black Sea, With 30 Killed, Worst Sufferer.

PROPERTY LOSS HUGE; MANY MOSQUES CRASH

Only Small Portion of the Devastated Territory Is Yet Heard From.

Sofia, Bulgaria, April 14 (A.P.).—Bulgaria, Southern Roumania and the eastern section of Jugoslavia were shaken today by a heavy earthquake

The disturbance centered in southern Bulgaria between the Black Sea and the City of Philippopolis, with the town of Tchirpan as chief sufferer.

Thirty persons were killed and hundreds injured in Tchirpan; seven were killed at Borrissovgrad, and two at Zagora. A late report from Plovdiv said that four were killed there and dozens injured by the collapse of houses and mosques.

Only a portion of the affected territory had been heard from and there is great apprehension of a widespread catastrophe.

Public Buildings Fall.

Property damage was enormous. At Tchirpan all public buildings were either badly damaged or destroyed The railway station there is in ruins Houses and mosques crashed in numerous villages and there was particular damage at the village of Iavor, which is in the region between Tchirpan and Borrissovgrad.

Hot mineral springs, which abound in the affected region, increased their flow with heightened temperature after the quake.

Philippopolis, a busy commercial center of 85,000 inhabitants, reported that two persons were killed there when a mosque was wrecked. The city, which was the ancient capital of Thrace, was almost entirely destroyed by an earthquake in 1818. Today's shock was the heaviest felt in this region in nearly half a century.

Premier Liaptcheff is leaving Sofia for the devastated regions. In the neighborhood of Chirpu the quakes were reported continuing.

Other Countries Shaken.

Belgrade, Jugoslavia, April 14 (A.P.) Severe earthquake shocks were felt all over Slavonia this morning. The most severe lasted 6½ minutes. It was felt in Belgrade, but no material damage had been reported late today.

Bucharest, Roumania, April 14 (A.P.) A three-minute earthquake occurred here shortly before noon today The swaying buildings sent the people of Bucharest into the streets but no noticeable damage was reported. It was the first quake of such proportions in 40 years.

Constantinople, April 14 (A.P.).—A slight earth shock was felt in Constantinople at 11:15 o'clock this morning A more violent shock was felt in the surrounding country No casualties had been reported this afternoon.

SIX BIG STILLS SEIZED NEXT DOOR TO CHURCH

Police Raiders Find Complete Distillery Apparatus in Private Residence.

The congregation of the Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Protestant Church at First street and Rhode Island avenue northwest has been worshiping at services during the past four months unaware that one of the largest illicit liquor distilleries ever uncovered in a private residence in this city was in operation at 75 Rhode Island avenue northwest, directly next door to the church.

The police raiding squad, led by Sergt. O. J. Letterman, forced its way into the house last night and confiscated more than 2,000 gallons of peach mash, six 50-gallon stills, a quantity of gallon jars and approximately 50 boxes of dried peaches. No one was in the house when the squad entered. No liquor was found.

For the past week the raiding squad has had the house under surveillance. Each day a pretty woman about 30 years old would emerge from the residence with a little white dog and take it for a walk, Letterman said. Several well-dressed men and women entered the house during the week, but nothing happened to arouse the suspicion of the squad that there was any violation of the law.

2 Killed When Liner Grazes an Iceberg

Liverpool, April 14 (A.P.).—Two men were killed when the British steamship Montrose grazed an iceberg last Monday while en route to Liverpool from St. John, N. B. One of the men killed was Jack Walker, the ship's electrician

The bow of the vessel was badly damaged by the impact and the anchors were lost. The collision affected only the forward part of the ship, to which passengers had no access.

DUKE DEFIES PARENTS AND WEDS CAPITAL GIRL

MARRIED BY REGISTRAR

London, April 14 (A.P.).—Honeymoon plans were announced tonight for America's newest duchess, who, before her marriage today to the Duke de Nemours, of France, was Miss Marguerite Watson, of Washington, D. C. The marriage took place unexpectedly and in the face of what is understood to be opposition by parents of the duke who had picked out for him a bride of royal blood.

The couple will remain in Great Britain for a few days so that the bride may gain strength from her recent operation for appendicitis. Then they will go to France, where the duke eagerly looks forward to meeting his parents and obtaining forgiveness for disregarding their wishes.

In May the duke plans a visit to South Africa where he hopes—with his parents' consent—to take up sheep ranching. He says this appeals to him more than aviation, racing automobiles or any other interest which has occupied his time heretofore.

The new duchess also likes the open air life and has been quoted as saying that she is particularly fond of sheep.

MODIFIED MERGER PACT WINS CITIZEN FEDERATION VOTE

$50,000,000 Valuation Fare Base Conditioned on 5-Year Delay.

INQUIRY IS ORDERED ON CLAYTON CHARGE

Committee Created to Review "Putty Delegate" Speech of Brightwood Man.

A compromise on the pending merger plan was reached by the Federation of Citizens Associations last night in a prolonged meeting, at the conclusion of which both factions, those for and those against the merger, claimed victories with apparent basis in each case.

The $50,000,000 agreed valuation for rate making purposes was "accepted" under a half-hearted protest in which the federation described itself as "not wholly satisfied."

This agreement was then modified by a recommendation that the merged street car company should not have the advantage of the valuation by increased car fares for a period of five years.

The valuation position of the federation was further obscured by still a third recommendation that a new valuation be undertaken as soon as merger track changes have been completed and that the valuation be made effective as soon as completed.

Committee Is Restricted.

Whereas the federation several weeks ago sent its public utilities committee to oppose the companies' merger plan before the Public Utilities Commission unhampered by instructions, the federation last night specifically refused to send the committee before Congress on the same terms, but voted to restrict the representations of the committee to the details agreed to last night.

The committee was then given a vote of appreciation and confidence.

Debate was acrimonious in spots although expected sensations did not materialize. Charles I. Stengle, one of the merger group in the Citizens Advisory Council, on a question of personal privilege challenged statements reported in the press to have been made Friday night by William McK. Clayton, chairman of the committee, before the Brightwood Citizens Association, of which he is a member, accusing four members of the council as "having been reached" and referring to promerger federation delegates as "putty delegates." Stengle demanded that a committee be appointed to sift the charges and report to the federation.

Stengle Demands Inquiry.

Stengle moved that the committee consist of three members, two to be

Robber Suspect Shot In Foot During Chase

William Johnson, colored, 28 years old, of 146 Francis street southeast, was shot through the foot last night by Policeman R. F. Langdon of the Fifth Precinct, who was investigating an attempt to rob the grocery store of Mrs Fannie Gindes, at Fifth and L streets southeast.

Langdon, with other men of his precinct, had gone to Fifth and L streets after Mrs. Gindes had reported that a man had attempted to rob her at the point of a pistol. He was frightened off, she said. Langdon and the other policeman found Johnson loitering near by and after a chase of five blocks Langdon shot the man in the foot. Johnson was treated at Casualty Hospital, and then locked up, charged with attempted robbery and carrying a concealed weapon.

Congress May Hold Joint Hearings on Merger Pact

Capper and Zihlman Favor Proposal After Copies of Agreement Are Received From Utilities Commission—Would Speed Action, Chairman Says.

A joint hearing on the bill to authorize a traction merger here, with both Senate and House members sitting in, seemed probable yesterday. Such a hearing would save considerable time and, it is believed, could be completed well in advance of the adjournment of Congress.

Both Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, chairman of the Senate District committee, and Representative Zihlman (Republican), of Madyland, chairman of the House District committee, said they were in favor of a joint Senate and House hearing on the bill.

Two drafts of the merger bill were delivered at the Capitol yesterday afternoon by Earl V. Fisher, executive secretary of the Public Utilities Commission. One was turned over to the Vice President and one to the Speaker of the House. They now go to Capper and Zihlman, who will introduce them in their respective houses.

When he learned that a draft of the bill had arrived, Representative Zihlman announced that he would consult with his colleagues on the public utilities subcommittee tomorrow morning and determine how they feel about holding the joint hearing. If they are agreeable, he will take the matter up with Senator Capper.

Senator Capper said that he thought Zihlman's suggestion contained a great deal of merit, and he believed that the members of the Senate utilities subcommittee would endorse it. However, he decided that he would await word from Zihlman before discussing it with the other senators.

In view of the approaching adjournment, Zihlman is hoping that the hearings can be expedited. Like Representatives Hammer (Democrat), of North Carolina, and Gibson (Republican), of Vermont, however, he thinks that the

ILLINIOS UPHEAVAL, ENHANCING LOWDEN, HAS WIDE REACTION

G. O. P. Leaders Consider Peril of Disaffection in the Midwest.

COMPROMISE SOUGHT ON FARM RELIEF ACT

Strength of Former Governor Checks Hoover Advance in Eastern States.

By ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
Special to The Washington Post.

New York, April 14.—The political upheaval in Illinois last Tuesday made that State overnight a factor of prodigious, if not paramount, importance in the struggle for the Presidency now in progress. The politicians of both major parties are only beginning to perceive the far-reaching implications of that spectacular overturn of political fortune.

With his faction triumphant and the Illinois delegation to the Republican national convention behind him almost to a man, Frank Lowden stands forth as a formidable contender for the presidential nomination. The party leaders are impressed by the enhancement of his prestige as a candidate and the Eastern leaders are beginning to concede for the first time that his nomination is within the range of possibility

Illinois now forges to the front as the standard bearer of the midwestern revolt against the agricultural policy of the Coolidge administration and against the perpetuation of that policy by the Republican party And with the leaders of that revolt in the ascendancy in Illinois, I find the Eastern Republicans seriously considering for the first time the dangers of disaffection in the middle West.

Profound Result Seen.

Illinois looms large in the calculations of the Republican groups which will determine the choice of the party for President at Kansas City, for Illinois has more major presidential possibilities, not to mention vice presidential possibilities, than any other State. It has a leading contender for the Presidency in Lowden and it has two dark horses of promise. Until last Tuesday there was only one Illinois dark horse—Vice President Dawes. But the triumph of the Deneen faction in the Illinois primary so enhanced the prestige of Senator Deneen as to cause the Republican leaders to chalk his name up on the dark horse list.

The profound influence of the results of the Illinois primar on the Republican contest over the presidential nomination was demonstrated by the reaction of the members of the New York Republican State committee, who met here a couple of days ago. The Illinoise primray was the paramount topic of discussion among the committeemen Various theories of the probable effect of the Illinois upheaval on the presidential contest were advanced but there seemed to be general agreement that Lowden is now a force to be reckoned with in the convention.

There was also ample evidence that the aggrandizement of Lowden is operating to halt Hoover in the East. There was a check up of Hoover strength after

D. A. R. REGENTS PRAISE ACTIVITY FOR DEFENSE

MOVE TO RETIRE BONDS

Forty-eight State regents representing the 168,000 members of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, scattered throughout every state in the Union, in a resolution unanimously adopted yesterday at the annual national board of management meeting commended Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general, for "her courageous stand to maintain American ideals."

The resolution also commended Mrs. William Sherman Walker, of Washington State, chairman, of the D. A. R national defense committee, and members of the committee, for "the great service rendered to our country." It urged the committee to "continue to strengthen our national defense activities, which are the normal, wholesome development of a national defense policy established in 1916 and strengthened through each succeeding administration."

The resolution further stated that the D. A. R. was forced "to meet anti-religious activities, disguised efforts to destroy the home, maneuvers to abolish our defenses, schemes to corrupt

De Rivera to Marry Wealthy Senorita

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Madrid, April 14.—It is reliably reported tonight that Gen. Primo de Rivera, the Spanish dictator, will marry Senorita Nini Castillano, daughter of Countess De San Feliz, King Alfonso being the best man, and that the wedding will be performed at San Sebastian, May 2, the anniversary of Spanish independence.

Big Steamer Grounds In Cape Cod Canal

Sagamore, Mass., April 14 (A.P.).—The steamer New York of the Eastern Steamship Co., bound to New York from Boston, went aground in the Cape Cod Canal just east of the Sagamore Bridge about 8:30 this evening. There are 400 passengers aboard.

Capt. Harold L. Colbath, general manager of the canal, said that the steamship was not in the least danger and that it undoubtedly would slip off with the high tide about 2 a. m. Tow boats are standing by waiting to assist.

45 FAIL TO MAKE BONDS

Eighty-four men, women and high school students were arrested shortly before noon yesterday in a Sandino demonstratoin and parade along Pennsylvania avenue and North and South Executive avenues northwest.

The demonstrators were halted by detectives from police headquarters, led by Inspector William Shelby and Lieut. F. S. W. Burke at the Zero Mile Post on Executive avenue in the rear of the White House after they had almost completed a circuit of the Executive Grounds.

The paraders carried placards bearing inscriptions protesting against the "marine rule in Nicaragua." At detective headquarters where the demonstrators were taken all except the students were charged with violating article 8, section 4 of the United States Park regulations, which prohibits the parading with placards in Government parks. The students were held for investigation.

The demonstration was under the auspices of the United States section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, with Manuel Gomez, secretary, leading the parade. Almost all the participants gathered in Washington from New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New Jersey cities yesterday.

Among the Washingtonians there were four young high school girls. They

ICE BLOCKS SAVING OF FLIERS BY SHIPS; LITTLE HOPE BY AIR

Owners Refuse to Send Sealing Vessels to Greenly Island.

FROZEN HUMMOCKS ARE PERIL TO PLANES

Schiller Machine Is Damaged in Attempt to Reach Irish and German Airmen.

St. Johns, Newfoundland, April 14 (A.P.).—Men versed in the navigation of the Northern waters said today that the crew of the Junkers monoplane Bremen, marooned on ice-bound Greenly Island, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, after their flight from Dublin, can hope to get away from there only by air at present. Until the ice fields in that region begin to break up with the approach of summer, these navigators said, there will be no access to the island by sea.

The owners of sturdy Newfoundland sealing steamers today refused to order these craft to go to the island, asserting the risk was too great. It was said that the Canadian government steamer Montcalm, although built for such work, would not be able to pound her way through the floes as far as the Straits of Belle Isle for weeks.

Bowring Brothers, owners of the sealing steamers Nascopie, Viking, Ranger and Eagle, now hunting seals in the ice pack off the eastern coast of Newfoundland, said they could not take the risk of sending one of the ships into the Straits of Belle Isle at present since the vessel might be frozen fast in the ice field and remain there for weeks. The steamers carry crews of 250 men each and are laden with heavy cargoes of seals.

Planes Placed in Readiness.

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, April 15.—The three airmen who manned the westbound transatlantic monoplane Bremen tonight awaited on their haven, Greenly Island, the arrival of a rescue ship that is plowing through the frozen St. Lawrence River to the scene of their imprisonment.

Early in the day a score of planes were placed in readiness to make the hop to the little spot of rocky land in the Belle Isle Straits, between New Foundland and the southern tip of Labrador, where Baron Ehrenfried Guenther von Huenefeld, Capt. Herman Koehl and Col. James Fitzmaurice landed after their 36-hour flight from Ireland.

Canadian pilots said a flight at this time of year to the island had little chance of success, as ice hummocks made a landing there extremely hazardous. Notwithstanding the perils of the flight, however, one effort was made today. But disaster overtook the expedition when the plane, owned by the Canadian Transcontinental Airways, was forced to earth and damaged. It took off from Quebec City early in the morning. Duke Schiller, veteran Canadian pilot, was at the controls, according to fragmentary information which reached New York from Dr. Louis Cuisinier, president of the company, when the mishap occurred. The ship had got as far as Murray Bay, 100 miles North of Quebec.

Hope Pinned on Montcalm.

The only hope of the three fliers to leave Greenly Island within the next two days seemed to rest with the ice-breaking tug Montcalm. This ship, of the Canadian government service, was engaged in her usual patrol of preparing the Gulf of St. Lawrence for navigation when she was instructed today to proceed to Greenly Island.

The position of the ship before noon was 300 miles from Greenly Island, separated from it by vast irregular fields of ice. Early tonight Capt. Mercier reported his position in a radio dispatch as some 274 miles from his destination, at a point 44 miles south of the tip of Anticosti Island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

When the Montcalm turns back to civilization, she will have some 600 miles to travel in the Gulf of St. Lawrence before touching North Sidney, where railway contact can be established with Montreal and New York.

First reports from the radio station at Point Amour, on the mainland, which last night gave to a waiting world the news that the airmen were safe, told of a broken propeller blade and crushed landing gear.

Mechanics of the Junkers monoplane F-13, a sister ship of the Bremen, immediately started to work at Curtiss Field on new gear which they expected to take to the stranded fliers. But tonight this project was held in abeyance pending more definite word of the fliers' plight. "The engine of the Bremen is built to consume a solution of 90 per cent benzol," Fred Moelker, pilot of the F-13, said today, "and even if they were able to take off, which I doubt, it would be impossible to get fuel in that country."

The little hummock where the fliers are resting is 1,077 miles in an air line

BOARD OF EDUCATION FACING NEW SCHOOL BUILDING PROGRAM

Only $11,869,250 of $20,185,000 Estimates in 1926 Has Been Appropriated.

PLANS FOR 1930 BUDGET SOON TO BE FORMULATED

Citizens Will Meet on Tuesday to Discuss Needs of Their Neighborhoods.

With the five-year school building program little more than half completed, and but one year remaining under the original schedule provided by Congress, the Board of Education is now faced with the problem of drafting for 1930 a school budget of $8,315,750, or casting upon the scrap heap the program so auspiciously begun in 1926.

The course it will adopt will be determined, in all probability, at a conference with citizen delegates representative of the entire city, Tuesday night at the Franklin Administration Building. At that time civic leaders from virtually every community will voice the school needs of their respective neighborhoods.

For more than a year the eventual abandonment of the extensive schedule outlined in 1926 has been predicted in school circles, and at the annual conference of the board last year, Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou himself proposed that a new five-year building program be instituted in 1930, to complete the work left undone in the old.

Extension of Time Inevitable.

Although the delegates present voted for the adoption of such a policy, no steps were taken subsequently by the board or school officials to indicate their adherence to the plan. As only $11,869,250 of the $20,185,000 estimated cost of the original project has beeen appropriated by Congress however, it is held inevitable that an extension of time in which to complete the first program, or an entirely new program, must be devised.

No less than 30 school structures, both main buildings and needed additions, remain unappropriated for, leaving out of consideration some nineteen playground tracts for which provision was made in the original text.

Records show that the only year in which full appropriation was made for needed construction under the terms of the pact was the first, when Congress launched the program with a $4,013,000 appropriation. The following year school funds were cut to $2,450,000, increasing in 1928 to $2,794,250 and dropping again for 1929 to $2,612,000. The total funds voted under the plan are but 58.8 per cent of the total estimated cost.

Complete in Second Division.

In only the second division has the five-year program been carried to completion, and here but one item was provided, the purchase of a playground for the Morgan School.

But one other division, the fifth, can be said to be in any measure abreast of the program. Here three schools, the Park View, the Woodridge, and the Burroughs addition, have arisen since 1926. A $275,000 appropriation has been made for another, the Langdon. Provision for the Brookland-Woodridge Junior High School, however, has yet to be made.

Three buildings have yet to be provided for in the first division, including the proposed 12-room Reno structure, and additions to the Eaton and Janney Schools. The 1929 budget contains a 75,000 appropriation for erection of a Grant Road School in this group.

Three Planned, None Built.

The program originally called for construction of three schools in the third division, for which no appropriation has been made. These buildings have been designated as the Woodburn, the Bancroft and a proposed structure at Alaska avenue and Holly street.

Schools which must be erected in other divisions before the five-year building program may be brought to completion in 1930 are as follows:

Fourth division—The 16-room Abbott School.

Sixth division—The Kenilworth, a gymnasium and assembly hall addition to the Wheatley and a 12-room building in the vicinity of the Kingsman.

Seventh division—The Buchanan and the Lenox.

Eighth division—A new 12-room Fairbrother School, and a new Jefferson Junior High School.

In the Tenth Division.

Tenth division—The Military Road, Phillips, Reno and Garrison School structures.

Eleventh division—The Deanwood, Crummell and Slater-Langston schools

Twelfth division—The Harrison School and a gymnasium and assembly hall addition to the Douglass-Simmons.

Thirteenth division—The Giddings-Lincoln, the Randall, the Birney, the Syphax and a gymnasium and assembly hall addition to the Lovejoy.

In the high school group, a full appropriation has yet to be made for the new Business High School. Nor have funds for purchase of additional land for the Armstrong High School, and grading athletic fields at Western and Dunbar, been forthcoming.

George Roulhac Given Ten Years After Clearing John Butler of Robbery.

George Roulhac, colored, who confessed to committing a crime for which John Butler, colored, is now serving a ten-year sentence, was himself sentenced to serve ten years in prison yesterday by Justice Siddons in Criminal Court.

The offense charged against Butler was the robbery of Philip Tepper, 4601 Hunt place northwest, as the latter was coming out of his garage in the rear of the home on April 7, 1927. Roulhac confessed to committing this crime, and also confessed to robbing the Tepper store at the same place on October 4, 1927.

Steps have been taken by the district attorney's office to have Butler released from prison. Roulhac also confessed to several other housebreakings and larcenies and the total of ten years in prison was imposed.

Thaddeus O. Gay, colored, who also admitted his guilt in three housebreaking cases was sentenced to serve a total of eight years in prison. John F. Thomas and Ellsworth Pryor, jointly indicted with Gay, were sentenced to serve four years each in prison.

Walter Smith, colored police informer, who was trapped by the police, was sentenced to serve a year and a day in prison and was fined $150. Smith was sent by the police to buy liquor at a place where there was no liquor, and he afterward falsely swore to an affidavit that he made a purchase at this place.

WHITE HOUSE PICKETS REGISTERED BY POLICE

Henry Miller Service.

Eighty-four members of the All-American Anti-Imperialist League, who were arrested for picketing the White House yesterday in protest against the United States Marines supervising elections in Nicaragua, being booked at police headquarters. Lieut. Frank S. W. Burke is shown standing in the center supervising the registration of the prisoners.

DOWNTOWN CROWD SEES MAN CRUSHED TO DEATH

Hundreds at Scene When Victim Dies Beneath Street Car at Platform.

While hundreds of persons watched, an unidentified white man about 50 years old yesterday afternoon at 5:25 o'clock was killed by a Washington Railway & Electric Co. street car at the loading platform at Thirteenth and F streets northwest.

The man was pinned beneath the front trucks of the car. The rescue squad was summoned to remove him, but men in the crowd extricated him before the squad arrived. He was taken to Emergency Hospital in the rescue squad wagon, where he was pronounced dead. His skull was fractured.

Police were unable to say whether the man fell or was accidentally pushed off the loading platform into the path of the street car. Motorman S. M. Embrey, 30 years old, Bethesda, Md., who was in charge of the car, told police he saw the man fall and that he applied his emergency brakes, but that it was impossible to stop before hitting the man. An inquest will be held Monday at 9:30 o'clock.

A large crowd of pedestrians and motorists witnessed the accident. None, however, could say how it occurred. Policeman E. C. Helms, of the First Precinct, is making an investigation.

The man was approximately 5 feet 6 or 7 inches tall and weighed about 160 pounds. He wore dark working clothes, a dary gray overcoat and low tan shoes. His head was slightly bald and his hair gray. A stubby gray mustache covered his upper lip. He wore a ring on the little finger of the left hand.

Contractor's Wife Sues Him.

Desertion and cruelty are charged against Paul E. Serene, contractor, of 1209 North Capitol street in a petition for limited divorce filed yesterday in Equity Court by Mrs. Elizabeth F. Serene, 55 M street northwest. They were married March 23, 1926. One month later, Mrs. Serene says, her husband began to treat her cruelly. Attorneys Dickey & Kriz appeared for her.

POLICE ARREST 84 SANDINO MARCHERS

were Anna Rich, 15 years old, 3540 Fourteenth street northwest, a Central High School student; Ella Mendelsohn, 13 years old, 407 Rhode Island avenue northeast; Sophie Minkin, 15 years old, 1316 Belmont street northwest, and Sarah Deskan, 16 years old, 200 Canan street northwest. They were released in custody of their parents.

The girls told police they received a notice of the parade stating that only the leaders would be arrested, if any were taken into custody. A number of boys and girls from Baltimore and Philadelphia also participated. Some of them stated they were offered a free trip and sight-seeing tour of Washington if they marched in the parade. They added they had no interest in the demonstration other than that.

Others of the girls arrested asserted they were sympathetic with the movement to recall the Marines. Miss Isabel Kleinman, 17 years old, of Philadelphia, stated she had some friends who were Marines, and she was interested in their behalf. The United States has not declared war in Nicaragua, and has no business sacrificing the Marines, she added.

The parade was orderly, the police stated. It started at the rear of the State, War and Navy Building, and proceeded up to Pennsylvania avenue. When it reached the mile post in the rear of the White House the detectives interfered, turned the marchers about and headed them for the District Building. After being booked, they were sent to the various precincts. It required fifteen patrol wagons to take them to the precincts. Thirty-nine of those arrested obtained their release by putting up $25 collateral.

The placards bore the following inscriptions: "We demand the immediate recall of the Mariens from Nicaragua." "Millions unemployed while United States funds go for conquest." "Why not help the farmers here instead of the bankers in Nicaragua?" "Wall street, not Sandino, is the real bandit in Nicaragua." "Defeat the war against Nicaragua." "We do not appeal to the White House, but to the masses against the White House." "Support Sandino against Wall street and its politicians." "Imperialism means world war."

Manuel Gomez, at a meeting held last night in Musicians' Hall, 1006 E street northwest, declared the picketers were arrested earlier in the day because they were "creating sympathy for Sandino, a Nicaraguan bandit, contrary to the policy of the State Department, as was stated in a letter to the clerk of the court." The charge of violating a section of the park regulations was only a technical one, he added.

During the meeting a collection was take in an effort to raise enough funds to secure the release of the remaining 45 persons who were arrested in the demonstration and were unable to put up collateral. Max Shactman, editor of the Liberty Defender, declared that the United States had no more right to intervene in Nicaragua than the Polish president had to intervene in a Chicago primary election on behalf of the Polish populatoin of that city.

Benjamin C. Marsh, one of the Nicaraguan sympathizers attending the meeting, charged that Coolidge was an "anarchist and that he was usurping the right of Congress by sending armed forces into a country." He declared that the farmers throughout the country opposed a policy of intervention, and that Coolidge did well "not to choose to run again."

Two Southeast Stores Looted by Thieves

Two stores in the building at 516 Eighth street southeast were entered last night and articles valued at over $50 were taken, it was reported to police yesterday morning.

Nevin V. Hepner, manager of the Southeast Bowling Alley, reported that cigars and cigarettes valued at $46 were stolen from the candy store in the bowling alley. Harry S. Marine, manager of the Nate Parts Factory, on the third floor, told police clothing had been taken from the factory.

EIGHT ARRESTS MADE IN RAID BY DETECTIVES

Twenty-five Others Escape, but $426 and Alleged Gaming Slips Are Seized.

Eight persons were arrested yesterday afternoon and about 25 others made their escape through windows in a raid Detective G. R. Browning, of the First Precinct, made by himself on the premises at 803 Eighth street northwest.

Joseph F. Murray, 45 years old, was held on a charge of permitting gaming. The remainder were held as witnesses. Browning confiscated some alleged gaming slips and $426 in bills. Neighbors became suspicious when they saw a large number of persons entering a house that had previously been vacant, and notified the police.

Joseph Azerelo, 29 years old, 932 Third street northeast, was arrested on a charge of sale and illegal possession of intoxicants in a raid upon the billiard room at 314 Ninth street northwest. Five quarts of whisky are alleged to have been confiscated by Detectives James E. Kane, J. R. LeFoe and George R. Browning in the raid upon the place.

Man Suffers Injuries In Fall Down Stairs

Clarence Ticer, 48 years old, 1918 Eighteenth street northwest, was found unconscious yesterday morning at the foot of a stairway in the apartment building in which he lives.

He was removed to Emergency Hospital, where it was stated he had suffered concussion of the brain. Richard Wathen, 631 Park road northwest, discovered the injured man.

Jewish Center Concert.

A concert and mass meeting to benefit Jewish colonization in Soviet Russia will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest, at 8 o'clock. Wendrow and Pecker, a team of the Vilna Art Theater, will perform and an illustrated lecture on recent developments of Jewish life in Soviet Russia will be given.

38 KILLED, 20 HURT IN DANCE EXPLOSION; CAUSE IS MYSTERY

"GAS" TANK IS INTACT; HAD BEEN SUSPECTED

West Plains, Mo., April 14 (A.P.).—Thirty-eight persons are known to have been killed and 20 injured in an explosion which demolished a dance hall here last night. Twenty bodies had been positively identified early tonight.

A coroner's jury, hastily summoned by Richard Green, prosecuting attorney, could not agree on the cause of the explosion and adjourned until Wednesday. A gasoline tank supposed to have exploded was found intact.

Loss to Exceed $150,000.

Two buildings adjoining the garage and dance hall also were destroyed. Estimates of property damage ranged upward from $150,000.

Thirty or 40 couples attended the dance, but some were not in the hall at the time of the blast. Whether all escaped who were sleeping in second-story apartments in the buildings adjoining the garage had not been determined late today. Searchers believed a few more bodies would be found in the ruins.

The revised list of identified dead follows:

List of the Missing.

The missing include:

Mrs. Mary Adair, Mrs. Francis Drago, manager Western Union; Mrs. Wallace Rogers, Pleasanton, Kans.; Mrs. Robert Murphy, Springfield, Mo.; Miss Dimple Martin, West Plains, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Martin, who were killed; Miss Ruth Fisher, high school student; Otto Kellett, Martin Hill, high school student; Esco Riley, Boyd Garner, Mammoth Springs, Ark.; Charles Murk, 12; Carson McCelland.

Injured Found Far Away.

Many of the injured were picked up on the streets far from the scene of the blast. H. C. Allen, merchant, was blown 55 feet and found with both legs broken and arm torn off.

The intense heat of the fire and total darkness caused when the power plant was damaged, hindered rescuers. Soon after the explosion the walls of the building collapsed.

The dance was being held on the second floor of a two-story building. The ground floor was a garage and motor car sales rooms.

Several score persons had just left a moving picture theater located in the same block, and many of them, knowing their friends and relatives were attending the dance, made frantic efforts to enter the wrecked and burning structure.

A rain early in the evening had reduced attendance at the dance, which was a weekly affair. The injured were picked up in the streets or were taken from the windows of the upper story as the flames licked their way through the tottering walls.

Westplains, the county seat of Howell County, is the largest town in south central Missouri, and is the shipping point for one of the largest peach districts in the middle West. It is located about 20 miles from the Arkansas line.

National Guardsmen from the local unit were called out to assist in the rescue work and preserve order.

Mrs. John Roche Howland, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth Legburns, Miss Dorothy Haxall, Miss Mariana Robinson, Miss Meredith Todd, of Washington; Miss Olivia Gazzam, of Philadelphia, a sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Alexander McW Wolfe.

43 KILLED, HUNDREDS HURT IN EARTHQUAKE

quipa in southern Peru says that ten persons have lost their lives in a series of earthquakes which have been shaking the region for some days.

The earth tremors began April 9 and continued spasmodically until yesterday, but news of the disturbances was not received until today when El Commercio received a special dispatch from Macusani, a town in the Province of Carabaya.

Founded By Philip.

The region affected by yesterday's quake in Bulgaria is near the Black Sea, Burgas being an important seaport of Eastern Rumelia.

Philippopolis is the largest town of eastern Rumelia and is a busy commercial center. It is the seat of a Greek archibishop. It was founded by Philip of Macedon, and under the Romans was the capital of the Province of Thrace.

Star Zagora, 50 miles northeast of Philippopolis, is a thriving town on the slope of the Balkan Mountains. Near it are hot mineral baths.

Blind Man Sails Alone Seeking Dog as Guide

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—A 20-year-old blind youth sailed alone today on the liner Ausonia for Switzerland in search of a dog which may be trained to guide him and others similarly afflicted.

Morris S. Frank, of Nashville, Tenn., is making the trip with the assistance of Mrs. George Morris Eustis, niece of Thomas Hitchcock, polo star, who has established breeding kennels for German shepherd dogs at Mont Pelerin, Switzerland.

If Frank's efforts are successful he will bring one dog back with him, and later obtain 40 with a trainer for use in this country. The dog, Frank said, is to be held with strap by its master and through various movements is to guide its master through traffic, away from obstacles and up and down stairs.

SNOWS AND NEAR-ZERO WEATHER IN MIDWEST

Fall of 18 Inches in Minnesota; 6 Above Zero Is South Dakota Mark.

DRIFTS BLOCK HIGHWAYS

Chicago, April 14 (A.P.).—Spring today meant 18 inches of snow in Minnesota, a temperature of six degrees above zero in South Dakota, and snow and freezing weather in Illinois, North Dakota, Wisconsin and Iowa.

Unpaved highways in Wisconsin and Iowa, softened by thaws were buried under snow that snowplows were unable to clear because the roads were too soft to bear the machines.

Believing that winter had passed snow fences, used to break drifting snow, had been removed in most of the Northwest and as a result virtually all highways were covered with drifts. In Marathon County, Wisconsin, only one road was open. In the vicinity of Chippewa Falls trains were being operated with two locomotives each.

The unseasonal storm swept in from the Southwest, rain turning to snow yesterday. St. Paul and Minneapolis had a 13-inch snowfall, while from Deadwood, S. Dak., and Owatonna, Minn., came reports of 15 to 18 inches. Snow fell intermittently in North Dakota and Illinois today, the temperature falling steadily in Illinois. Subfreezing weather is predicted for several days in this State.

High winds accompanied colder weather in Iowa. Eight motorists were reported to have collided near Wood River when their drivers were blinded by dust blown from a wheat field.

Bus service in Minnesota and Wisconsin was, in many instances, discontinued. One driver returned to Minneapolis to report drifts seven feet high covering the highways. Wire communication in the State affected by the storm was damaged but to only a fraction of the extent of damage done in Nebraska and Iowa by a blizzard a week ago.

REVOLUTION IN TIBET ATTRIBUTED TO REDS

Grand Llama's Soldiers Said to Have Been Massacred at Phomo.

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Paris, April 14.—A revolution reported to have been incited by Russian Communist agents, it is rumored, has broken out in Tibet, according to private messages received in religious circles here today.

French Catholics have maintained missionaries on the outskirts and along the frontiers of Tibet for more than eight years, and from the outlying posts of the Indian-Chinese frontier have received letters stating that Chinese caravans returning to the sacred city of Lhasa brought news of revolts.

The populace of Phomo, directly south of Lhasa, near the Bhutan frontier, massacred the grand lama's soldiers, including priests, and inhabitants of the countryside refused to aid the authorities and quell the uprising, it was reported.

Outbreaks have been reported in the region of Kukunor, northeast Tibet, near Mongolia, and uprisings were reported at Menkong, in the southeast corner, adjacent to China.

Intense Heat Wave In Society Islands

Papeete, Tahiti, April 14 (A.P.).—The longest and most intensive heat for many years has been felt in the South Pacific islands this year. The society Islands have suffered from drought, little moisture having fallen during the usually copious rainy season. Many of the larger streams dried up for the first time in memory, but rains in the mountains have started them again. Vanilla and cocoanut crops, in consequence of the drought, will be smaller than usual.

Britain Not to Keep "Alice" Manuscript

London, April 14 (A.P.).—The British museum authorities decided at today's meeting to take no action in the matter of saving the manuscript of "Alice in Wonderland" for the nation under the offer of Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, of Philadelphia, who had offered to turn it over at the price he paid for it, £15,400.

Dr. Rosenbach also had offered to contribute £500 toward a fund for purchase of the manuscript by the British museum.

Goitre Not a Disease

Milwaukee Doctor Makes Remarkable Discovery

Milwaukee, Wis.—It has been brought to light by scientific research that goitre is not a disease, and is not to be treated as such. Dr. A. A. Rock, Dept. 734, Box 737, Milwaukee, Wis., a prominent goitre specialist for over 24 years, has perfected a different method of treatment for his patients that has proved remarkably successful. This same method is now being used for a home treatment of goitre cases all over the country with astonishing results. The doctor states that goitre is a condition which grows worse with neglect, and recommends immediate attention, no matter how small the growth may appear. He strongly opposes needless operations. Dr. Rock is the author of a book that tells in a simple way about treating goitre at home. He has published this book at his own expense, and will send a copy free to an one interested. Write him today.—Adv.

ALL ITALY IN CHAOS, FRONTIER REPORTS TO AUSTRIA ASSERT

Mussolini Is to Seize Power of King, It Is Stated, When Word Comes.

BOMB OUTRAGE IS LAID TO FASCISTI BACKERS

Victor Emmanuel, Returning From Milan to Rome, Has Triumphal Entry.

Agram, Austria, April 14 (A.P.).—Newspaper dispatches from Rakek, Italy, on the Italian-Jugoslav frontier, quote travelers as saying that panic and chaos reign throughout Italy. The police, aided by Fascist militia, are said to have inaugurated a reign of terror in an effort to get even with "enemies of Fascism."

Hundreds of persons suspected of being anti-Fascist, are being arrested daily in almost every town of Italy and thrown into overcrowded prisons.

One traveler brought a report that the bomb outrage at Milan was the work of extremist Fascists themselves, who were trying to settle their account with the reigning dynasty. This report had it that Mussolini had withheld from king Victor Emmanuel until the last minute his decision not to go to Milan.

Other travelers allege that Mussolini has completely terrorized Victor Emmanuel and is only waiting for proposals from his own black-shirt followers to assume kingly power himself.

Bomb Suspect Pursued.

Como, Italy, April 14 (A.P.).—A young man, Romolo Tranquilli, was arrested here after a considerable chase through the woods and police today thought they were on the trail of the perpetrators of Thursday's bomb outrage at Milan. Tranquilli comes from Pescina, near Aquila, in the province of Abruzzi.

He was found to have a false identification card under the name of Renato Zoppi.. He said this was given him by persons whose names were unknown to him and who employed him on various commissions a fortnight ago. The police said these were communists.

Tranquilli also had a map of Milan showing the fair grounds, where the bombing occurred, with several spots marked. He said that was an itinerary he had mapped out for himself. Investigators were skeptical.

He came to Como Thursday afternoon and it is believed he was trying to make his way to the frontier.

Triumphal Return by King.

Rome, April 14 (A.P.).—King Victor Emmanuel, returning from Milan where he escaped death in a bomb outrage, today made a triumphal entry into the capital.

The route from the station to the Quirinal Palace was thronged by vociferous crowds. The noise and enthusiasm reached its climax when the monarch appeared on the balcony of the palace smiling and saluting in acknowledgment.

The city was bedecked with flags as if for a national fete. Shops and schools were closed to allow all the people to take part in the demonstration of thanksgiving.

Noted Mexican Flier Downed in Desert

Calexico, Calif., April 14 (A.P.).—Capt. Emilio Carranza, Mexico's long-distance, nonstop flier, was forced down in the desert near Ajo, Ariz., today, by a broken oil line after losing his way en route from Empalme, Sonora, to Calexico, on a test flight. He reported by telephone from Ajo late today that neither he nor his passenger were injured.

When reports were made of Carranza having been forced down a relief party was sent to his aid and the plane was located about 15 miles from Ajo. Although the two men were missing, they later were discovered heading for Ajo. Carranza said that another plane would be sent to the scene for him.

Service at Sea For Titanic Victims.

United States Coast Guard Cutter Modoc, April 14 (A.P.).—In memory of the victims of the sinking of the steamship Titanic, the crew of the cutter Modoc today held special services near the location of the Titanic disaster of sixteen years ago.

LONDON AND BERLIN HEARTILY APPROVE U.S. NOTE ON PACT

Great Satisfaction Is Voiced Semiofficially in the German Capital.

DIPLOMATS AND PRESS IN BRITAIN ENTHUSIASTIC

Careful Study by Cabinet and Dominion Governments Is Intended.

Berlin, April 14 (A.P.).—Semiofficial announcement was made today that the German government has received Secretary Kellogg's antiwar proposal and the covering Franco-American correspondence with the greatest satisfaction, especially as the Washington initiative was in no wise directed against the objects and tendencies of the League of Nations.

Diplomatsche Korrespondenz, which reflects the views of the foreign office, expresses the hope that the American proposal might be studied by all the great powers to dispel French scruples which are based preeminently on consideration for the statutes of the League of Nations.

German approval of the Kellogg proposal is expected as soon as possible after careful deliberation on the details. The proposal was semiofficially described as a powerful impetus for creating peace and security within Europe and as likely to lead to a significant turning point in the history of nations.

Warmly Received in London.

London, April 14 (A.P.).—Secretary Kellogg's note on the subject of the outlawry of war has been warmly received by British diplomats, who, however, are unable to make detailed comment in the absence of Sir Austen Chamberlain, the foreign secretary.

It was pointed out today that such an important communication not only required careful study before a considered opinion could be reached, but that the views of the dominion governments must also be sought.

It was stated, however, that the principles underlying the note are assured a warm welcome from the British government, whose policy always has been to eliminate every possible chance of wars. If consideration of the proposal takes some time it must not be thought that the government's attitude is in any way lukewarm.

The note will be thoroughly examined by foreign office experts and as soon as Sir Austen returns the cabinet will consider the matter, after which the dominion governments will be consulted.

Praised by London Papers.

The mutual engagement as proposed would be a tremendous step toward peace, the Times said. "The United States has generously assumed great responsibility in making an offer of a scope so far-reaching that the responsibility is now shared by those to whom the offer was made," the paper asserted. "Their response must be equal to the occasion. * * * The action of the American government stimulates hope and marks a turning point in international politics."

The Liberal Daily News said the chance now offered was so important and so full of hope that the British government should give it most sympathetic consideration. The paper thought the proposal provided an effective bridge between the members of the League of Nations and the United States.

The Daily Chronicle, Liberal, considered that the position of the members of the league ought not to be an obstacle to an agreement renouncing war. "The people of this country," it said, "will certainly desire that all the weight of Great Britain be thrown in the scales to secure agreement."

British Willingness Cited.

The Independent Daily Telegraph said the powers addressed must ask themselves whether an achievement of the suggested tremendous moral effect is worth the price of throwing over the whole system of safeguarding the peace of which the covenant of the league is the foundation. The paper added: "It can be said with emphasis that Great Britain's willingness to participate in the common effort to abolish war is not less sincere than that of the United States."

The Conservative Morning Post saw difficulties, but not insuperable obstacles. It said: "If there is any hesitation in accepting these amiable overtures, it is because no government desires to enter on engagements which could not be kept without peril to the vital interests of its people."

Mrs. Harrison Is Wed To Banker in France

Paris, April 14 (A.P.).—Mrs. Elizabeth Wentmore Harrison and Alexander Fitz-James Graham Watson, investment banker, of Edinburgh and London, were married today at Rambouillet, where the bride has a country home.

The Rambouillet ceremony was civil and a religious ceremony followed at the American Episcopal Procathedral in Paris. Mrs. Harrison is the former wife of Francis Burton Harrison, one-time Governor General of the Philippines.

Richard Dix Rallies; Recovery Is Expected

Hollywood, Calif., April 14 (A.P.).—Richard Dix, film star, who has been critically ill of pneumonia following an emergency operation for appendicitis last Tuesday, rallied today and hopes for his recovery were held out by his physician, who said "barring unforeseen complications, he will recover."

Duelist Sent to Jail For Biting Adversary

Budapest, Hungary, April 14 (A.P.).—For biting his adversary's nose, ear and cheek, Bela Erdelyi, Hungary's champion duelist, who has fought 26 duels, today was sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment.

Erdelyi's antagonist was a former friend, Stephan Elek, and their sword duel was fought with unparalleled ferocity. During the first onslaught both men tumbled to the ground where they grappled violently with each other.

Their four seconds attempted to disengage them, but were themselves dragged to the ground. It was during the general melee that Erdelyi attempted to stab his opponent and then bit him.

HUSBAND OF ACTRESS IS HELD IN HER DEATH

INQUIRY BY HER FATHER

Los Angeles, April 14 (A.P.).—A morals charge was placed today against Arthur F. Evans, 29, to enable officers to hold him while the supposed suicide a year ago of his actress wife, Helen St. Clair Evans, is being sifted with the aid of the girl's father.

Evans, who is alleged to have been found living with a girl under age, was lodged in jail last night on charges of suspicion of murder, suspicion of violating the narcotic act and suspicion of committing a statutory offense.

Mrs. Evans was found dead in her Hollywood apartment. Her husband declared she had taken poison after a quarrel.

Mrs. Evans' father, Albert O. Daniels, a beauty shop proprietor of New York, was informed that the actress had appealed to police for protection from her husband two days before her death. He urged authorities to investigate and came to Los Angeles last fall to begin a private inquiry.

Evans is alleged to have admitted serving time in Elmira Prison, N. Y., for fraud.

Miss Knapp Accepts Service of Subpena

Middlebury, Vt., April 14 (A.P.).—Miss Clara B. Knapp today accepted service of a subpena for her appearance at the grand jury investigation into the conduct of the 1925 New York State census by her stepmother, Mrs. Florence E. S Knapp, former secretary of state of New York.

The subpena directs Miss Knapp to appear as a witness before the grand jury at Albany on Monday. She is a teacher of home economics at the college. She had been in seclusion for several days.

Alberta Coal Miners To Strike on May 1

Lethbridge, Alta., April 14 (A.P.).—Members of the Mine Workers Union of Canada in the southern Alberta coal fields have voted overwhelmingly to strike unless their demands are met by the coal operators. The vote was 3 to 1 to lay down tools on May 1.

The principal demand of the miners is recognition of the all-Canadian union following the breaking away from the United Mine Workers of America two years ago.

The new union claims about 7,000 members in Alberta and is now organizing on Vancouver Island.

ATTRACTIVE HOME FOR SALE

Ideally Situated in Picturesque Massachusetts Avenue Park

A PERFECT gem of a home built on a hill in a wonderful natural landscape setting. On every hand giant oaks rear their lofty heads like so many sentinels standing guard over the property.

You can not help but enthuse over its clever and charming interior arrangement. The spacious and well proportioned living room is lighted on both sides by a row of casement windows, those facing east extend to the floor and lead out onto a lovely tiled terrace from which there is a delightful view. At one end of the living room is a large fireplace flanked by a pair of recessed book shelves. At the other end is a raised balcony with ornamental wrought iron railing. Opening from this balcony is the large dining room, enclosed stairway leading to the second floor, the main front entrance and hallway to the kitchen.

On the second floor are the bedrooms including a large master bedroom with fireplace and private bath with tiled shower. A second bathroom is provided for the other bedrooms.

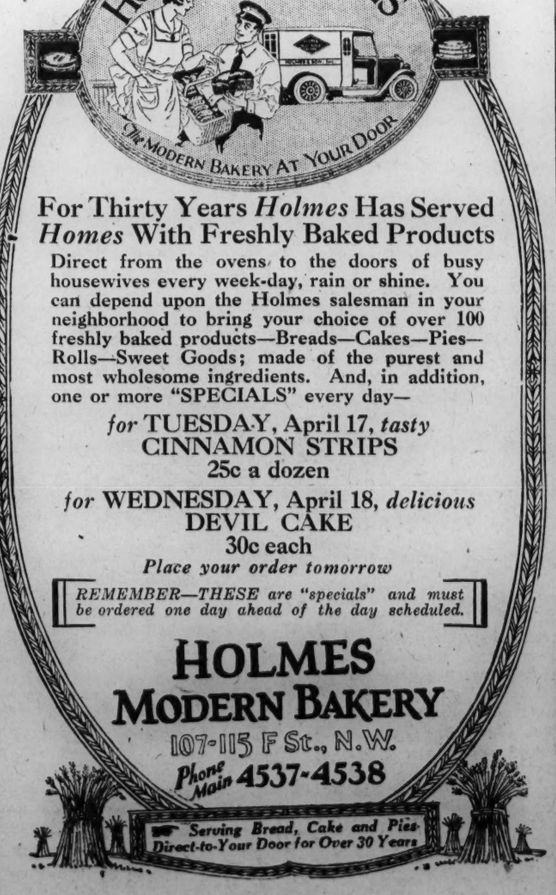

A garage, built integral with the house, has an entrance leading direct into the cellar. There is a separate sound-proof room in the cellar containing the oil heater; also a large enclosed fruit room.

This house received highest honorable mention in the contest held by the Board of Trade last spring

CAMPAIGN IN OHIO SETTLES INTO DULL RACE FOR DELEGATES

Hoover Men Seem Unable to Overcome Lethargy Due to Willis' Death.

CLAIMS OF OPPONENTS ARE HARD TO VERIFY

Viewing Struggle as Mere Faction Clash, Many Voters May Ignore Primary.

By HERBERT R. MENGERT.
Special to The Washington Post.

Columbus, Ohio, April 14.—Quiet has succeeded the tumult in the Ohio primary. The pall cast on the contest by the sudden death of United States Senator Frank B. Willis in the midst of his homecoming celebration at Delaware on the last day of March has not been lifted. The struggle for delegates goes on in the name of Senator Willis, while the followers of Herbert C. Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, are making great efforts to turn the Hoover sentiment that existed here prior to Senator Willis' death into votes. But it is an uphill job.

Present indications are that the number of ballots to be cast is to be very small. More especially, the slump in interest has hit the large city centers in which mass voting is emotional to a great degree. The life has gone out of the Ohio primary unless nearly all observers are mistaken.

In such circumstances the course of the political organizations or "machines" is far more important than it was when interest ran higher. The Willis managers, or rather the directors of the effort for an uninstructed delegation in Senator Willis' name, contend that there was a noticeable shift of sentiment before the death of the senator. Others affect to doubt that statement and still do not concede that the Willis men are to capture a majority of the districts. The claims to date are for Hoover to get at least 30 delegates, as seen by Col. Thad H. Brown, of Columbus, the Hoover manager, while the Willis forces assert that only the three Cleveland and two Cincinnati districts are in doubt.

Truth Hard to Learn.

Between these claims the truth may be somewhere, but it is very difficult to ascertain, probably more difficult than any primary contest in years. On streets, in hotel lobbies, clubs and meeting places generally the primary contest is about the last subject discussed. It has come to be an affair largely of professional or perennial politicians.

There are developments, however, that are well known. First of these is that the Hoover canvass is to end in a blaze of advertising glory in the newspapers and by means of pamphlets which have been circulated widely. Then, too, the newspapers in the majority are with Hoover and expect to give an exhibition of propaganda material in the final days. The Willis men plead poverty in telling why they can not match the Hoover publicity efforts and assert that while the newspapers carry the news, they have few organs of propaganda in the larger cities. Their principal efforts are through the Week, a periodical published in Columbus. It has been caustic in its criticism of Hoover. In the current issue today it calls upon those who directed the attack on Senator Willis to "wipe off the board," and describes him a martyr to the "cause of true Republicanism." Of his death it says:

"Under the strain of the venomous assault, though his spirit never faltered, the tender sensibilities of that son of Ohio gave way and he laid down his life, a sacrific to spleen."

Viewed as Conspiracy.

This is a sample of the messages carried by the senator's followers in this canvass, and not a meeting is held but the theme is enlarged upon. The campaign itself is called a "conspiracy" to "deliver the Republican party to a foreign invader."

The Hoover forces have paid little attention to this sort of propaganda. They were content to say that they had made no personal attacks on the Senator and did not have to recall a single piece of literature that was issued prior to his death. The present appeal by pamphlet is a friendly review of Hoover's life and accomplishments and an endeavor to answer attacks upon Hoover, particularly those that dealt with his Americanism and his Republicanism, his food administration, in so far as it concerns the farmers, and his attitude on the League of Nations. The Hoover appeal is to be the subject of discussion by the memorial orator for Senator Willis at Delaware, Col. Ralph D. Cole, Findlay, at a final rally of the Willis forces in a state-wide meeting here on April 17, a week before the primary.

Farm Relief Propaganda.

The contest, too, has been the occasion for much propaganda on the farm relief question. The Hoover men have insisted that Hoover is favorable to the cause of agriculture, a position which is challenged by the Willis adherents. One peculiar effect of the canvass has been that all of the Republican county organizations and the State machine with the exception of the portions in Cleveland and Cincinnati have espoused the cause of the McNary-Haugen bill which was anathema only a few months ago. This is done notwithstanding the attitude of President Coolidge and of Senator Simeon D. Fess, Yellow Springs, only Republican Senator from Ohio at present and temporary chairman-to-be at Kansas City.

There are peculiar reactions to this new course. Many Republican editors who are urging the uninstructed delegates as likely to vote for former Gov. Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, or Vice President Charles G. Dawes and who assert that these men represent farm relief vary their appeals a bit on other days by condemning the McNary-Haugen bill as unsound. Nevertheless, the Republican organization, at least during the primary campaign, is lined up for the farm relief bill. If a majority of the Willis uninstructed delegates should be elected they are likely to continue on that course unless the issue is removed in the final passage of the present or compromise legislation.

Determined on Dawes.

The regular Republican slate of delegates is really determined to nominate Dawes and is to play with Lowden only long enough to stop Hoover if that is possible. In the country districts the delegates who declared for Lowden say they have had the most favorable reactions while in the cities the Willis men say that poeple in their ward and precinct meetings "go wild" over Dawes. They have discarded the "draft Coolidge" talk as not profitable, especially after the Illinois primary and the involuntary association of the President's name with the losing fight of "Big Bill" Thompson. In one district, the Nineteenth, centering around Youngstown, the Willis delegates use the name of Charles E. Hughes, but this is said to be due to the appeal to the Welsh vote in that section. The Hoover delegates have called them to book for citing a name not to be considered.

Invasion of outside speakers in the interest of Hoover has led to retorts by Willis forces who ask whether no Ohioans can be found to champion the cause of the Secretary of Commerce. Col. Carmi A. Thompson, the Willis manager, asserted that Ohio never did take advice from "foreign speakers" and he added it will not do so now.

In the diatribes from the Willis forces on those who are carrying the Hoover banners attacks have been directed on Representative Theodore E. Burton. He is described as "returning to an unseemly factional fray."

The description of an "unseemly factional fray" probably best explains why there is likely to be a light vote in many districts. Many persons have come to regard the contest as merely one between two sets of politicians in which they are not much interested, a fight to control the party organization reins in the State, with nominations to be made later. But for the injection of the personality of Gen. Dawes plus the personal appeal of Hoover the contest would be no different than the meeting of the party committees with factions battling for control.

In the larger cities, the prohibition issue is probably the cause for the greatest loss of interest. Senator Willis was the one man in Ohio public life who antagonized the liberal voters without apology. In the liberal cities tens of thousands of voters would have turned out to register disapproval of this particular phase of his policies had the senator lived. With his death this question passed out of the domain of practical politics. There is a certain incentive for the radical followers of prohibition to lay wreaths on his tomb in the shape of more or less meaningless preference votes. There is little disposition of the opponents to register disapproval. Thus the campaign in Ohio, a most unusual affair from many aspects, lags at the finish.

Hoover and Smith Gain Delegates During Week

Tammany Chief Pays Visit To Smith at Vacation Home

George Olvany and Other New York Leaders Gather For Political Conferences at Biltmore, N. C. Governor's Statement on Candidacy Awaited.

Asheville, N. C., April 14 (A.P.).—A political touch was given the vacation here of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, by the arrival today of George Olvany, Tammany leader, who stopped off for an overnight visit.

Olvany, who is one of Smith's chief political advisers, has been on vacation in Cuba and Florida. He put in his appearance here today on his way home, accompanied by a group of friends which included several who have a hand in Democratic party affairs in New York.

In the party, which went to the Biltmore Forest Country Club, where the governor came yesterday for a fortnight's rest, were George H. Boutillier, vice president of the Long Island Railroad; Surrogate James J. Foley, of New York, and his brother, F. J. Foley; Paul Comstock, of Richmond, Ind.; Bernard Gimbel, of New York; M. H. Plank, of Harrisburg, Pa., and A. J. Foran, of Flemington, N. J.

Olvany planned to continue northward with his companions tomorrow but before his departure it was indicated that he would discuss the political situation with Gov. Smith, particularly the meeting Tuesday of the Democratic State executive committee in New York.

One of the purposes of that meeting is to select the eight delegates-at-large from New York who will have a half vote each at the Houston convention. This group will round out the State's delegation of 90, which will go into the convention pledged to a man to support Smith for the presidential nomination.

Added significance has been given the Tuesday meeting because of the likelihood that it would be made the occasion for formally projecting the governor into the Democratic presidential contest. Thus far he has avoided a direct declaration of candidacy, although he did take steps, as required by law, to enable Democrats in Massachusetts, Michigan and South Dakota to vote for him in presidential primaries.

The expectation is that the New York committee will take a stand regarding Smith as a presidential candidate that will call for an acknowledgment from the governor and probably furnish an opportunity to state his position on various issues. Such a statement from him is expected within a few weeks, perhaps before he returns to New York.

Taking advantage of the opportunity to rest, the governor slept late today, waiting until after luncheon to put in a round of golf. During the morning it had rained, but by the time Smith and three men who accompanied him here—W. F. Kenny, W. H. Todd and James J. Riordan—teed off, it had cleared off.

Tonight he left the country club, which is his vacation home, for the second time since his arrival to be a guest at a dinner at the nearby estate of Senator and Mrs. Gerry, of Rhode Island.

Last night the governor surprised city firemen at a station here and one at Biltmore by paying unexpected calls. He looked the two firehouses over, remarked that he was a volunteer fireman in New York and offered to lend a hand in fighting fires any time his help was needed.

HANDICAPS OF G. O. P. PICTURED BY BURTON

Chances of Success Are "Not So Roseate," He Says in Youngstown Talk.

Youngstown, Ohio, April 14 (A.P.).—Declaring chances for Republican presidential success this year "are not so roseate" as they were eight and four years ago, Representative Theodore E. Burton, of Cleveland, in an address here tonight urged the nomination of Herbert Hoover, because he is confident Hoover would not only be able to obtain the support of Republicans, but also the independent voters and many Democrats.

Natural reactions against a party that has been in power for a number of years coupled with a "record of corruption by men in high places," were given by Mr. Burton as contributing factors against possible Republican success. Though he declared the Coolidge administration to be "clear of corruption" he said it had to be admitted that some of President Harding's appointments "were most unfortunate."

In addition to Mr. Hoover's popularity with all classes of voters, Mr. Burton said he favors his nomination "because of his unusual equipment for the office."

Arlington Address Urged on Coolidge

(Associated Press.)

Col. John McElroy, of the Grand Army of the Republic, urged President Coolidge yesterday to deliver his Memorial Day address on May 30 at Arlington, as has been the custom in past years. President Coolidge is considering delivering this year's speech at Gettysburg, Pa.

President Coolidge informed him, Col. McElroy said, that he would make his final choice between the two places in the next few days.

PARTY HARMONY PLEA MADE BY D. I. WALSH

Senator, in Kansas City, Asks Democrats to End All Bitterness of Past.

Kansas City, April 14 (A.P.).—Harmony within the Democratic party, that the ideals fostered by Jefferson, Cleveland and Wilson "might triumph over the forces of conservatism, reaction and exploitation," was urged tonight by Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, in an address to the Young Democratic Jefferson Club of Missouri.

"I urge in the name of party harmony," the senator said, "that Democrats from all parts of the Nation sweep aside the feelings of bitterness that belong to the buried past; discard the acrimony of factionalism, and subordinate for the time being personal aspiration and political ambition for the welfare and interest of the party. Let us sweep intolerance away. Tolerance is the underpinning of democracy. Without it no party can live long and no nation retain its greatness."

The Republicans, the senator said, have differences, but they do not air them at their national conventions, and suggested the Democrats might learn a lesson.

Senator Walsh suggested a party program that would stand for liberty; would attack privilege; devise a constructive foreign policy; establish a respectable merchant marine; bring relief to the farmers and protect the rights of the common citizen.

G. O. P. ORGANIZATION VICTOR IN DELAWARE

Carries Primaries for State Convention Delegates in All but Two Districts.

Wilmington, Del., April 14 (A.P.).—The organization wing of the Republican party in Delaware, of which Senator Coleman duPont is the recognized leader, was victorious throughout the State at the party primaries today to elect delegates to the State convention to be held in Dover next Tuesday. The State convention in turn will elect delegates and alternates to the Republican national convention.

Wherever there were contests for State delegates or county committeemen, who were chosen at the same time, the organization was successful except in two legislative districts, one in Wilmington and one in rural Newcastle County. There were no contests in Kent and Sussex Counties.

Today's primary contests, party leaders said, will therefore have no bearing on the program of the State convention which, it was predicted, will select an uninstructed delegation to the national convention.

Coolidge Would Halt Diamond Smuggling

(Associated Press.)

President Coolidge recommended to Congress yesterday that a special unit of expert investigators be created in the customs service for the prevention of diamond smuggling.

The proposal, approved by the Bureau of the Budget, called for an estimated expenditure of $103,720. In addition, the President asked the appropriation of $439,840 for the employment of additional guards and searching squads at the port of New York and for an increase in the water patrol along adjacent rivers, together with the necessary equipment to carry out their work.

COOLIDGE, WITH 326 CONVENTION VOTES, SEEN KING-MAKER

Presidential Group Will Name Republican Candidate, Politicians Believe.

HOOVER AND LOWDEN ARE 90 BALLOTS APART

Question Is, Whom Executive Will Favor as Selection in Kansas City.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

With 326 votes in his pocket through no effort of his own and only a mere gesture necessary to get the vast bulk of the others, President Coolidge himself looms as the real king maker of 1928, the term that is being freely applied to Secretary Mellon.

As the situation stands now these 326 votes, at least, will be cast for the President on the first ballot, as compared with 352 for Secretary Hoover, 262 for Lowden and 159 for the field. As said before a bare word or so would cause them all, practically, to flock to the Coolidge banner, but this word is not expected to be said.

The point is that these 326 votes are those that will be pressed upon the President and that only 90 votes now separate the rightful claims of Hoover and Lowden. They represent 326 delegates who either still have hopes that the President can be prevailed upon to run or are not definitely determined whether Hoover, Lowden or somebody would stand the best chance of succeeding him.

Coolidge Men to Control.

The question is upon whom they will finally determine, assuming that the President does not respond to them, and in the answer to this question would seem to lie the party's nominee.

It has been frequently represented that Mr. Coolidge will take no part in the contest, that he will remain absolutely neutral. That being the case, he would have nothing to do with the disposition of these 326 votes and after all he would not be the king-maker. But in the first place Mr. Coolidge, himself, has never said that he planned to keep hands off and the representations to this effect have been very vague. And in the second place, the President has persistently avoided saying that he would not permit himself to be drafted, leaving the inescapable conclusion that while he may very well insist upon his desire to retire, he at least does not desire to release his hold on the situation. That there may be several reasons for this attitude is easily understood. One that comes first to mind is the inclination on the part of Congress right now to run completely away from him on such matters as farm relief, tax reduction and flood control.

It is conceivable that he might be forced to veto all three of these matters and then decide to go before the country for its approval. Admittedly farm relief and flood control are as two vital economic questions as have come before the country in 50 years.

Importance of F. W. Stearns.

But assuming that he vetoes the farm relief bill and lets it go at that and that flood control is worked out satisfactorily and that there would be no reason why he should have any direct personal interest in what the convention does, can any disinterest be rightfully attributed to those who groomed him and finally made him President, the group that has its spokesman in Frank W. Stearns. With 326 delegates determined to vote for Mr. Coolidge, and in some instances, the cards so shuffled as to insure such a vote as this, it would seem apparent that this Stearns group, so to speak, intends to have something to say about the nominee.

This being the case, Mr. Coolidge is likely to appear eventually in the role of king-maker, though he might personally dislike to do so because any influence that Mr. Stearns and his group or W. M. Butler might wield at the convention will be as the purported representatives of the President. They would hardly have much influence in their own right.

Secretary Mellon's part is not to be minimized. He will have 79 delegates in his hand and as the greatest "Secretary of the Treasury since Alexander Hamilton" he is not without ramified strings that can be pulled. But it is not likely that the Secretary will be working apart from the others. The chances are that the President makers, would-be and real, will be grouped under President Coolidge's hold on the situation, making the last word in all matters if not the directing genius.

Whom Will Coolidge Select.

Now comes the question of whom the President will select, or better perhaps the group that is really the interested party and which is working under his protection, apparently with his consent, will select.

The Hoover workers are working hard to drive home the point that their candidate is really the only one that represents the Coolidge policies. In so far as farm relief is concerned they are right and that stands out in the popular mind as the test. For this reason the man in the street in the East would say that Hoover will be the nominee.

But it remains to be seen whether the group that the President represents, henceforth for want of a better term to be called the President's group, considers farm relief as the one matter upon which their next presidential choice must turn. As a matter of fact, farm relief is an issue primarily between Hoover and Lowden. That is, the President's veto of the McNary-Haugen bill at the last session is generally assumed to have been at the instance of Mr. Hoover and also on the advice of Secretary Mellon.

It does not necessarily follow, then, that Mr. Coolidge after heeding this advice will turn around and say that the man who gave it is the only one who is qualified to succeed him in the White House. It might very reasonably be the President's attitude that Mr. Hoover made his bed and now should lie in it.

The truth is probably that the President's group, the influences that will handle those 326 votes, look upon the McNary-Haugen bill as but an angle to be considered in a many-angled matter. One thing, the restiveness of the middle West must be considered along with the Eastern viewpoints. It would seem that their choice would be one who best included both.

And insofar as Lowden's chances are concerned as compared with those of Hoover, remember that the East has never before looked upon him as "radical" and there is a strong likelihood that the type of mind represented by those 326 votes does not consider him radical now, notwithstanding his advocacy of the McNary-Haugen bill. The amazing thing to men like Senator Borah, is that Lowden ever sold himself as the "friend of the farmer." You should hear Senator James A. Reed's comment on this. But he seems to have done it. There is no escaping that.

7 of 9 New Mexico Votes for Hoover

Santa Fe, N. Mex., April 14 (A.P.).—New Mexico's nine delegates to the Republican national convention at Kansas City, selected at the State convention here today, were uninstructed. Seven of them, however, favor Herbert Hoover for the nomination. One is a supporter of Frank O Lowden, while the other has not committed himself.

Former United States Senator H. O. Bursum is the delegate favoring Lowden. Percy Williams, of Silver City, has not indicated his preference.

Lang Shows Handiwork.

Leipzig, Germany—Anton Lang, impersonator of Christ at the Oberammergau Passion plays, exhibited handshaped ceramics at the street fair here, and said he sells many to Chicago department stores.

DEMOCRATIC FEUD HERE INTENSIFIED BY SUGRUE

Costello's Attack on Darr Brings Reply From Smith Club Secretary.

ALL ARE FOR GOVERNOR

The feud between District Democrats was intensified last night when P. A. Sugrus, secretary of the Al Smith Club, issued a scathing reply to a statement issued earlier in the day by John F. Costello, the Democratic national committeeman.

Sugrue declared that Costello's statement was actually his "swan song," and charged him with having "besmirched the Democracy of the District."

Costello, in his statement earlier, charged that Charles W. Darr, president of the Al Smith Club, was "trying to take the membership of the club on one of his personally conducted buggy rides right into the march of muddy politics."

Sugrue said that Costello's statement was absolutely false. He said that he himself had organized the club, but added that the club really belongs to the supporters of Gov. Smith. At the same time he declared that Mr. Darr needed no defense.

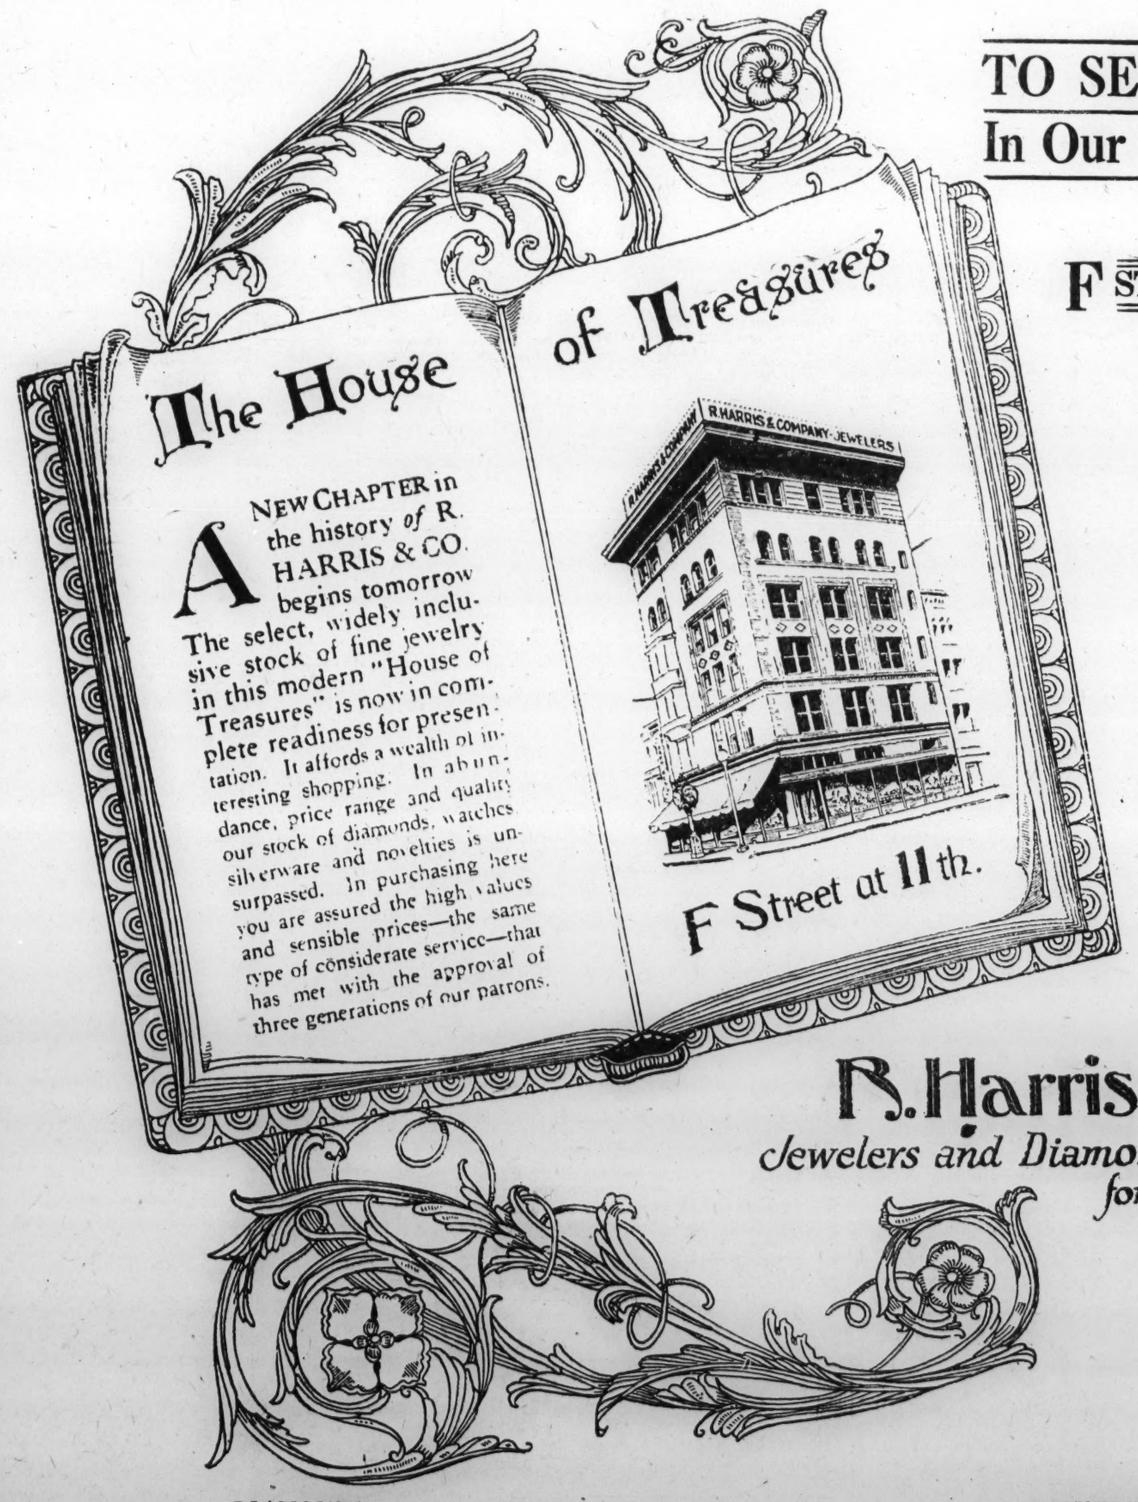

The feud between members of the club and Costello broke out Friday night when Darr said he understood seats for the Houston convention had been offered for sale. Costello yesterday morning branded this as a "deliberate, malicious falsehood."

Although Costello has not joined the Al Smith Club, he and his associates have come out whole-heartedly for the New York governor.

RIGID ENFORCEMENT, HAUGEN FARM BILL, WATSON'S KEYNOTE

Address, Prepared for Old Neighbors, Opens Campaign of Senator.

HOOVER NOT MENTIONED BY INDIANA SENATOR

Opposition to League and Advocacy of All-American Canal Expressed.

Winchester, Ind., April 14 (A.P.).—Farm relief as proposed in the McNary-Haugen bill and "rigid" law enforcement were high points of a platform outlined here today in a speech prepared by Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, for the opening of his contest with Secretary Hoover for the delegates of this State to the Republican presidential convention.

In his address to citizens of his birthplace here, the veteran Indiana senator discussed national issues, lauding the administration of President Coolidge, but making no reference to his contest with Secretary Hoover. The address covered a wide range of topics and included the following propositions:

Maintenance of the protective tariff system, opposition to American adherence to League of Nations and the World Court, encouragement of negotiations looking to the renunciation of war, maintenance of an "adequate" navy, adherence to the Monroe Doctrine in Latin-American affairs, development of a privately-owner and operated merchant marine, flood control legislation under national responsibility, further restriction of immigration, development of inland waterways including favor toward the All-American canal as compared to the proposed St. Lawrence River canal opening the Lakes to the ocean, and pensions.

Haugen Bill Advocated.

While praising the administration of President Coolidge as one rendering "tremendous service to the people," Senator Watson's platform differed in one main essential from administration views—the McNary-Haugen farm bill, which the President has indicated he will veto. On this issue, Watson recalled that the Republican party was on record for farm relief, and added that while the President has not seen fit to approve this measure, he has "made known his great desire to see the enactment of some form of farm relief legislation."

The Indiana senator's address emphasized that farmers have "largely agreed" on the McNary-Haugen legislation, and said Congress had listened, usually with favor, to the requests of labor, railroads, the manufacturers and the Antisaloon League.

As for law enforcement, he declared the "Constitution is the supreme law of the land and every part of it must be rigidly maintained and legally enforced.

Nullification Destructive.

"We believe," the address continued, "that all law-abiding citizens, and after all they constitute the great majority of our people, will stand by any administration that religiously enforces every law, and that assertion we can make to the everlasting credit of our people.

"Law-breaking is but nullification and nullification, carried to its logical conclusion, means the destruction of all government. The Constitution must be enforced. It holds within its terms the very gem of liberty and upon it must rest, if they are to be secured for the future, the pillars of the Republic."

Senator Watson is the only Republican presidential nomination candidate not yet approached by Senator Borah, of Idaho, with his prohibition questionnaire. Other than to thank old neighbors for their consideration of him as a presidential contender, the address made no reference to his candidacy.

While expressing favor toward the all-American canal, Mr. Watson said he was "decidedly in favor" of a waterway "either by the St. Lawrence River or by an all-American" route.

258 Delegates for Hoover, 185 for Lowden Claimed

Nomination of Secretary on First or Second Ballot Is Declared Indicated by Forces of Californian in Statement Here.

Illinoisan's Nomination Not Later Than Fourth Ballot, Predicted by Manager Buck in Review of Situation.

(Associated Press.)

The Washington Hoover-for-President committee last night issued a statement claiming 258 delegates to the national convention for their candidate. It listed them as follows:

	Delegates selected.	For Hoover.
Georgia	16	16
Hawaii	2	2
Iowa	29	2
Kentucky	29	29
Louisiana	12	12
Maine	15	15
Michigan	33	33
Minnesota	27	7
Mississippi	12	12
Missouri	39	12
Nebraska	19	7
New Hampshire	11	11
New Mexico	9	8
New York	90	47
North Carolina	14	7
Philippine Islands	2	2
Rhode Island	13	13
Virginia	15	15
Wisconsin	26	8
Totals	413	258

"In addition to the above," the statement said, "66 delegates either pledged, instructed, or who have expressed a preference for some other candidate as a first choice, will vote for Mr. Hoover as soon as they are released. It is significant that many of the delegates who are for Mr. Hoover second choice come from agricultural States. However, every indication points to Mr. Hoover's nomination on the first or second ballot. The Hoover sentiment is not local, but comes from every section of the country and from all classes of our people."

The statement also listed 61 delegates as having been selected in Illinois, 11 in Idaho, 23 in Kansas, 13 in North Dakota, and 11 in South Carolina, but claimed none of these for Hoover.

(Associated Press.)

The Republican preconvention campaign was reviewed from the standpoint of Frank O. Lowden here yesterday by Clarence F. Buck, manager for the former Illinois Governor, in his pursuit of the nomination. He said that 185 delegates have been pledged to Lowden to date, and predicted his nomination at the Kansas City convention "not later than the fourth ballot."

Noting that Lowden had not filed in States where "favorite sons" were contesting for delegates, Buck said that his candidate would not oppose Senator Goff in West Virginia.

Buck said he had heard that the majority of the New England and Pennsylvania delegates would go to Kansas City uninstructed, and added: "I've been told that Secretary Mellon said he wants the Pennsylvania delegation to go to the convention and vote for a man they think can be elected. If that is true, it satisfies us."

Asked who would be chairman of the Illinois convention delegation, Buck said that question had not been discussed. Both Vice President Dawes and Senator Deneen, of that State, had been mentioned in this connection. Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, recently nominated as a Republican candidate for representative at large from Illinois, was mentioned by Buck as likely to be a member of the delegation.

Discussing the Lowden outlook, Buck said, "We're not going to have 500 delegates, but we're going to have a good block. We make no claims of delegates outside of those that are pledged. I would rather go into the convention right now with the delegates that we have than with twice that number after a lot of these knock-down and drag-out fights."

Turning to the Ohio political situation following the death of Senator Willis, Buck said the Lowden forces were satisfied "with things in Ohio as they are right now." He numbered delegate candidates that had been pledged to Lowden as second choice to Willis at 39, and said he understood that 9 other former Willis delegates were similarly inclined.

Buck doubted that Lowden would answer the prohibition questionnaire submitted to him by Senator Borah, of Idaho, remarking that the former Illinois Governor could well stand on his record for law enforcement. He's a stickler for the Constitution," he added.

CLASH IN SOCIALIST CONVENTION LOOMS ON BEER AND WINE

George H. Goebel, of Newark, Is Made the Permanent Chairman of Sessions.

OLD PARTIES ASSAILED IN PREAMBLE ADOPTED

Industrial Control of the Nation Declared Given to Plutocracy.

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—A difference of opinion among delegates to the Socialist National convention over the attitude of the party toward prohibition indicated today the probability of a fight over the expected proposal of a plank favoring local option on light wines and beer. Formation of a fraternal party organization, with ritual and degrees, was voted down. Committees on platform, resolutions and ways and means, each with seven members, and a committee of three for the Young People's Socialist League, were selected.

George H. Goebel, of Newark, N. J., was chosen permanent chairman as the convention organized, with Dr. William H. Van Essen, of Pittsburgh, and William H. Henry, of Indiana, as secretaries. William O'Toole, of Boston, was selected sergeant-at-arms.

Preamble is Adopted.

A preamble to the party platform was adopted, attacking both major parties as having passed industrial control of the Nation into the hands of a plutocracy, stressing "political scandals," unemployment and the condition of the farmers, and mentioning the "invasion of sister republics by our armed forces, even without congressional sanction."

"Under the alternate rule of the dominant parties," the preamble said, "the industrial equipment of the Nation has passed into the absolute control of a plutocracy, which exacts an annual tribute of many billions of dollars from the producers.

"The rich, though comparatively few in numbers, control the government. They own the machinery of gathering and disseminating news and moulding public opinion. They subsidize seats of learning and even religious and moral agencies. Unafraid of organized resistance, they stretch out their greedy hands over the still undeveloped resources of the Nation—the land, the mines, the forests and the water power of every State. * * *

Bribery Declared Rife.

"The ruling plutocracy and its twin political parties have become self confident and reckless, so contemptuous of public opinion that they have thrown off all disguise of decency. Bribery in highest governmental circles is rife, rampant and unashamed. Public office is bartered for cash, sister republics are invaded by our armed forces, even without congressional sanction, and terrorized and oppressed at the behest of American bankers. * * *

"The Socialist party reaffirms its adherence to the one fundamental principle which unites Socialists of all lands—collective ownership of natural resources and basic industries and their democratic management for the use and benefit of all instead of the private profits of a privileged few."

Tomorrow's activities will include morning and afternoon sessions, with a dinner in the evening.

MARSH DENIES IOWA CHARGES OF HEFLIN

No Outside Money Spent in State; Senator's Talk Is Used "Effectively."

Waterloo, Iowa, April 14 (A.P.).—Wilbur W. Marsh, of Waterloo, treasurer of the Iowa Smith-for-President Club and former treasurer of the Democratic national committee, today sent Senator Heflin, of Alabama, a telegram denying that money from outside the State had been used in Smith's behalf, and stating that the books of the club were open for inspection at any time. Marsh's telegram read:

"I have read your charges that money was corruptly used in Iowa to effect results so favorable to Gov. Smith. I am treasurer of the Iowa Smith-for-President Club and my records are open for your inspection or that of your representatives at any time. I solemnly state that not one penny was received from outside the State; that the total collected will not amount to $1 a voting precinct for the 2,400 precincts in the State, and this was given by more than 150 people.

"Money was spent for postage, telegrams, telephone and traveling expenses of three men who worked without pay and no one of these worked for as much as two weeks. In addition to this, we circulated extracts from your speeches, which were very effective, for which we are grateful."

Harrison Indorsed By State Committee

Jackson, Miss., April 14 (A.P.).—Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, was indorsed as the Democratic nominee for President by the Mississippi State Democratic executive committee today. A resolution was adopted commending him to the Democrats of the Nation.

The State Democratic convention to name delegates to the national convention at Houston will be held here June 5, the committee decided. The resolution was adopted unanimously. Senator Harrison previously had been indorsed as the Democratic presidential nominee by the State legislature.

Hoover Gains Two Votes From Denver

Denver, Colo., April 14 (A.P.).—Herbert Hoover gained two votes today in his campaign for the Republican nomination for President when the convention of the First Congressional district of Denver chose two delegates and instructed them to support the candidacy of the Secretary of Commerce.

Beary, adjutant general of Pennsylvania, president of the association, tomorrow morning and officers attending the meeting will be received by President Coolidge at the executive office.

NAVAL RESERVIST ORDERED TO HAWAII

Lieut. Comdr Mudge to Represent District With Fleet in Islands.

Washington naval reservists will be represented in the naval maneuvers next month by Lieut. Comdr. Frederick L. Mudge, 1347 Jefferson street northwest, who has been ordered to report to the commander of the battleship Arizona, battle fleet, at San Francisco, not later than April 17.

He will sail on the Arizona with the battle fleet next day, and will be assigned to regular duties, with a limited number of reserve officers selected from the country at large to participate in the maneuvers.

The battle fleet en route to Hawaii will be engaged in tactical exercises with light cruiser division 3 of the scouting fleet now on its way to Hawaii via the Panama Canal, and scheduled to arrive with the battle fleet on or about April 26. The maneuvers will terminate in June, the scouting division returning to the Atlantic Coast and the battle fleet to the Pacific.

Patent Commissioner Sued.

The International Cigar Machinery Co., of New York, filed suit yesterday in Equity Court against Thomas E. Robertson, Commissioner of Patents to compel the issuance of patents concerning cigar filler cutters of the "fresh work" type. Through Attorneys Dodge, Prescott and Pill, the plaintiff says it is the assignee of Willford J. Hawkins, inventor of the devices involved and that Mr. Robertson has unlawfully refused to issue letters patent.

CAPITOL CLOSE-UPS

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

DEEP down in the Senate debate on the McNary-Haugen bill, virtually unnoticed in the knowledge that the measure will be passed by both houses, is the answer to those who argue that Senator Borah, of Idaho, can not be considered as a possible compromise presidential candidate. His opposition to the bill, some observers contend, precludes the party from turning to him to bridge that gap between the Middle West and the East.

But a study of the senator's attitude will disclose that he proposed an outright subsidy to the farmers. He proposed to pass the McNary-Haugen bill just as it stood with the exception that instead of making the farmers pay the equalization fee, the Government should pay it.

It is the Idahoan's contention that the plan provided in the bill is at best an experiment. Rather than make the farmers take the gamble he would have the Government do it.

Of course, at this stage when it is a question of being for or against the McNary-Haugen bill, the senator's proposal is not likely to be heard, but in the event he should come in for consideration as a compromise presidential candidate it would seem that he has qualified as a friend of the farmer as being "agricultural-minded."

* * * *

With the friends of the various presidential candidates becoming increasingly active it is getting to be more and more difficult to tell just what is going on out in the hinterland. It would seem that the selection of delegates in this State and that would be such a definite and tangible matter that the result would be easily understood. Yet there is considerable confusion about some of the States.

The report came through from Idaho that the delegates there had named Senator Borah as their first choice and Secretary Hoover as their second. Subsequently definite word came from the leaders in the State declaring that no second choice had been named; that there had been no discussion of the Secretary of Commerce, in fact.

The Reed headquarters has similarly challenged the report from Oklahoma that Smith won the control of the delegation there. A telegram is cited from former Senator Gore, State chairman, saying that Reed will have the delegation under the unit rule.

No one here had any reason not to believe the reports from Iowa that the New Yorker had triumphed in the Corn Belt State. However, the man he was supposed to have triumphed over, E. T. Meredith, still insists that the victory was his, and Wilbur Marsh, former treasurer of the party, who had previously predicted a Smith victory, now says that when the recent county results go through the mill of the State convention Reed will be found to have shown surprising strength. There seems to be no doubt in the confusion, he says, that Meredith lost out.

* * * *

Among other things that contributed to Meredith's defeat, observers here say, is his opposition to the McNary-Haugen bill. As a publisher of a farm journal he is said to have consistently opposed the farm relief measure in the State where it is supposed to have its greatest strength.

* * * *

Far be it from us at this time to close the door to Senator Reed's chances of getting the nomination, but in view of the strides being made by the New York governor, and if it were not for the fact that the senator will soon be back in Washington, we would like to propose him for the vice presidential nomination. Wouldn't that make a team, though? Smith and Reed or Reed and Smith. The two of them together out arousing the country.

But as we said before, we are not proposing this second place for the senator—because we've got to live in this town.

We once heard Senator Robinson, of Indiana, refer to the Missourian as the "venerable gentleman," and the rattle of the Senate chamber roof that followed. Robinson in a lengthy tirade accused the Missouri senator of about every commission and omission that he could think of. But when Reed arose to reply it was the term "venerable" that drew his wrath, and the Indiana senator was figuratively skinned and hung up on one of the Senate chandeliers.

So we are not proposing Reed for Vice President. As a matter of plain fact, if the anti-Smith delegations should rally around him in the first balloting when he will have his own State and other delegations, such as those from Oklahoma and Kansas and scattered votes, he would have a formidable strength that might grow as the balloting increased. Regardless of the controversy about Oklahoma, it is understood that he is at least to have the first support from the delegation.

* * * *

The fly in his ointment is that the Southern delegates are all split up behind various candidates, and while they are making up their mind at the convention as to the one man they should center upon, the free lance delegates from the Republican West will have looked over the situation and not seeing any one formidable opponent of the New York governor, will jump on the bandwagon.

* * * *

Southern editorial comment occasioned by the senator's tour is quite heartening to his friends, though. The Memphis Press-Scimitar, a Scripps-Howard paper supporting Smith, or, rather supporting him in the event the Republicans do not hear the "people's call" and nominate Hoover—we believe that is the way it is—had this to say of the Missourian:

"Jim Reed, of Missouri, is our idea of the correct living definition of the phrase, 'Straightforward American'."

* * * *

We don't understand the reasoning behind the "Hoover-Tilson," the "Hoover-Fuller," and the "Hoover-Moses" tickets. Only recently Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, much to the chagrin of Gov. Fuller's secretary, enunciated the "Hoover-Tilson" ticket. The friends of Gov. Fuller are represented as working to place him on the ticket with the Secretary of Commerce, and the friends of Senator Moses are booming him in this wise.

They are all undoubtedly looking upon Mr. Hoover as a "Western" candidate. It is true that he comes from California, but he is of the Eastern mind and it is a safe bet that if he is the nominee the managers will consider him as an Eastern candidate and look Westward for the running mate. Therefore, those having the interests of Tilson, Senator Moses and Gov. Fuller at heart should turn to Lowden or Curtis or somebody out that way for presidential choice.

D. A. R. CONVENTION OPENS TOMORROW; 4,000 WILL ATTEND

Silver Bugle to Start Ceremonies Which Will Inaugurate Thirty-seventh Congress.

COOLIDGE TO ADDRESS ASSEMBLY IN EVENING

Mrs. Brosseau Issues Statement, Replying to Blacklist Charges.

"Assembly," sounded on a silver bugle by Arthur S. Whitcomb, second leader of the United States Marine Band, will call together more than 4,000 delegates and alternates in the New Auditorium sharply at 10 a. m. tomorrow for the opening session of the thirty-seventh continental congress of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Shortly after the bugle sounds will come the procession of vice presidents general, State regents and the President general, Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, escorted by more than 100 American girl pages, representing every State in the Union. These pages will be dressed in white and will be preceded by the chief page bearing high the Star-Spangled Banner.

After the congress is called to order by Mrs. Brosseau, Mrs. Matthew Brewster, of New Orleans, chaplain general, will read scripture and offer prayer, followed by the "salute to the flag" led by Mrs. Charles Brand, of Ohio, wife of Representative Brand, of Ohio, national chairman of the correct use of the flag committee. William Tyler Page, chief clerk of the House of Representatives, will then lead the assemblage in the recital of "The American's Creed," which he wrote.

Stress Patriotic Ideals.

The annual address of Mrs. Brosseau will then be given by her, in which she will stress, it is said, the patriotic ideals of the society and the constructive work of this body of 165,000 outstanding American women.

Mrs. Daniel Manning, of Buffalo, N. Y., honorary president general, senior in that post, is then scheduled for a greeting, but it is understood that Mrs. Manning will not ttend because of illness. Greetings will then be given by Mrs. Josiah A Van Orsdel, national president of the Children of the American Revolution; Commissioner Sidney F. Taliaferro, of the District of Columbia; Ernest E Rogers, president general of the Sons of the American Revolution, and Vice Commander Yountz, of the American Legion.

The afternoon session tomorrow will be devoted to the hearing of reports from the national officers, and at the formal opening session at night President Coolidge will be the principal speaker. In addition to the President, addresses will be made by Sir Esme Howard, Ambassador of Great Britain and dean of the Diplomatic Corps and Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis.

Pilgrimage to Mount Vernon.

High points of the program for the week will include President Coolidge's address tomorrow night, the pilgrimage to Mount Vernon on Tuesday of the entire Congress to lay wreaths on the tombs of George and Martha Washington; the election of seven vice presidents general on Thursday night and the pilgrimage on Friday to Washington Cathedral and the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Social big moments of the week will be the reception by the President General Mrs. Brosseau and her national board of management to the congress on Tuesday night in Memorial Continental Hall, a reception and dance at the Willard Hotel on Tuesday for the pages of the congress; many teas and receptions during the week, including those by Mrs. David Reed, wife of Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the Secretary of Commerce. Because of Mrs. Coolidge's absence so much recently from Washington on account of the illness of her mother, there will be no reception at the White House this year for the delegates as customary.

One of the striking features of the congress is the formal opening of the Friendship Garden, which has been planted in the grounds of D. A. R. Hall by vice presidents general and State regents of this administration in honor of Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general.

Went From North Church.

This plan was suggested by Mrs. Lowell F. Hobart, organizing secretary of the D. A. R., of Cincinnati, Ohio. Thus far 21 vice presidents general and many of the State regents have sent bulbs and plants to the garden. From Massachusetts have come plants from old North Church. Georgia has sent plants from Meadow Garden, home of George Walton, signer of the Declaration of Independence; Mrs. Hobart gave iris, jonquils and tulips from her Milford Garden, near Cincinnati; Alaska contributed forget-me-nots, its State flower, and Texas sent seeds of blue bonnets, its State flower, while pansies came from Longfellow's garden in Maine. The District of Columbia has contributed many chrysanthemum plants to the Grace H. Brosseau Friendship Garden, while Connecticut has filled the court connecting Memorial Continental Hall and the Administration Building with tulips in their president general's honor.

Since Friday the delegations have been arriving from all sections of the country and registering at the credential booths in the new auditorium, where a large force of workers under the direction of Miss Margaret Barnett, chairman of credentials, of Pennsylvania, issued the badges and other instructions to the delegates.

The first formal reply of Mrs. Brosseau to the sundry attacks of Mrs Helen Tufts Baille, of Boston, Mass. and a group of supporters on the present administration for the purported circulation of an alleged black list of unpatriotic speakers to prevent their appearing on D. A. R. platforms is made in the form of a statement placed in the hands of each delegate as she registers.

Statement by Mrs. Brosseau.

Mrs. Brosseau's statement is as follows:

'My dear member: Through the press of the country and upon the lecture platform has spoken one, Mrs. Helen Tufts Baille, of Cambridge, Mass., in condemnation of Mrs. William Sherman Walker, vice president general and chairman of national defense, and myself as your president general.

"Not satisfied with these public attacks, she has formed a self-appointed committee of lay members of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and under the caption, 'Our Threatened Heritage,' has issued a pamphlet which she has given to the newspapers and circulated freely within and without the organization.

"The following women constitute the personnel of this 'committee of protest' and with each name is hereby given the record of membership as contained in the official files of the National Society.

"Mrs. William Franklin Anderson, Paul Revere Chapter, Mass; admitted, 1923; has held no office in organization.

"Mrs. Charles A. Eastman, Betty Allen Chapter, Mass.; admitted, 1925; has held no office in organization.

"Miss Anna Dill Gamble, member at large; admitted, 1899; has held no chapter, State or national privileges.

"Mrs. Daniel Howard, Abigail Walcott Ellsworth Chapter; admitted, 1920; has held no office in organization.

"Mrs. Daniel Philip Klinedinst, Irondequoit Chapter, New York; admitted, 1909; has held no office in organization.

"Mrs. William D. McRae, Mercy Warren Chapter, admitted, 1923; has held no office in organization.

"Mrs. George L. Munn, Submit Clark Chapter; admitted, 1895; chapter registrar at organization, 1895; vice regent, 1902; regent, 1903-04; State vice regent, 1905-06.

"Mrs Jeanie Maury Coyle Patten, Thirteen Colonies Chapter; has held no office in organization; admitted 1897.

"Mrs. Dallas Lore Sharp, Old Colony Chapter; has held no office in organization; admitted 1916.

"Mrs John F. Pember, Anna Adams Tufts Chapter, Massachusetts; vice regent, 1902; admitted 1901; resigned February 1, 1908; reinstated October 18, 1924.

"Mrs. William Lyon Phelps, Eve Lear Chapter, Connecticut; first vice regent, May, 1923-24; present second vice regent; admitted 1922.

"Mrs. Edward Tallmadge Root, Anna Adams Tufts Chapter, Massachusetts; has held no office in organization; admitted 1921.

"Mrs. Augustus B. Tripp, Parson Roby Chapter, Massachusetts; has held no office in organization; admitted 1924.

"Mrs. Hendrik Vossema, Bunker Hill Chapter, Massachusetts; has held no office in organization; admitted 1908.

"Mrs. Helen M. Tufts Baille, Ann Adams Tufts Chapter, Cambridge, Mass.; has held no office in organization; admitted 1916; resigned 1921; reinstated 1925.

Right of Defense Claimed.

"The pamphlet I have steadfastly refused to comment upon through the medium of the press, but to the members of this organization I assert the right of defense upon the grounds of my own long service.

"In the language more forcible than courteous or cautions, this committee asserts that I am 'hypnotized' and 'under foreign domination.' This refers to the director of the Key Men of America, a man well known for his long and sturdy fight against radicalism.

"The charge of hypnotism I pass by in the silent contempt which it deserves, but I wish to state most emphatically that no man or woman during the two years of my administration has dominated me.

"The common problems of the National Society I have taken to the National Board of Management and together we have worked out their solution. My State Regents have not only been my advisers, but my own personal friends as well.

"With all my being I resent the insult—the innuendo—contained in the statement that I am "either unwilling or unable to repudiate this domination."

"Not one of the women on this 'committee' is known to me personally. Therefore their 'combined judgment could hardly be said to be reliable, and such a verdict would seem to come with poor grace from this particular group.

"The protest is based upon the following premises, which I will touch upon in this reply:

Praise for Mrs. Walker.

"First, the appearance of Mrs. Walker before the House Naval Affairs Committee in February is cited for rebuke I beg to inform you that she went in response to the request of the Naval affairs committee and no patriotic American woman could have done less. Had I not been in the far West attending State conferences I would have been there myself.

"Our society has not only gone on record for the past twelve years as in favor of adequate national defense, but in 1927 the thirty-sixth Continental Congress unanimously endorsed the 5-5-3 ratio established by the Washington conference for the limitation of armament.

"In the meantime, you know that a 71-ship administration program was submitted. All the world knows that we had fallen far behind the other powers in our naval strength, because we had practically ceased to build new vessels, while the other countries had forged ahead with their construction of cruisers and submarines. Hence, the administration program involved a policy which was intended to bring our standard more nearly up to the 5-5-3 ratio agreement of 1922.

"Do you not see, therefore, that Mrs Walker was well within her rights when she appeared before the naval affairs committee?

"The suggestion that the question should have been presented to the chapters for referendum is entirely out of order, since the majority vote of Continental Congress has ever been the final word of our society, as all those who are familiar with its workings know.

Adequate Defense Never Debatable.

"Furthermore, the question of adequate defense of our nation should never be debated by loyal Americans, and least of all by members of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

"The Constitution provides for an Army and a Navy, of which our President is commander in chief, and that should be sufficient.

"The alleged blacklist to which Mrs Baille and her committee have given such wide publicity hardly needs discussion. Suffice to say that this society has never compiled and does not issue an official blacklist, and the phrase has never had a place in our vocabulary.

"However, you may rest assured that State leaders are within their legal and moral rights when they advise their chapters regarding speakers whom they consider, because of publicly expressed views, as out of harmony with our avowed purposes.

"The real offense lies with any one who maliciously reveals to the world private state matters and thereby becomes disloyal to chapter, State and national.

"The fact that this committee is circulating the pamphlet among the members of other organizations makes the act of the protest doubly reprehensible.

"In this remarkable document issued by the self-styled protest committee, not only is censure heaped upon the national officers of the Daughters of the American Revolution, but even the Government does not escape.

"With subtle reference to our use of the flag and a call for new leadership the tirade ends.

"The Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution has been so potent in its work against the subversive forces that it is now subjected to attack with the hope of destroying its effectiveness through disintegration within the ranks.

It rests with you, fellow members, to stamp out this disaffection through loyalty to your organization in its stand for home and country.

"Faithfully yours.

"(GRACE H. BROSSEAU
"(Mrs. ALFRED J. BROSSEAU),
"President General, N. S. D. A. R."

CITIZENS FEDERATION VOTES FOR MODIFIED MERGER PLAN

appointed by Clayton. The motion was unanimously adopted and President James G. Yaden appointed C. A. Barker chairman and Clayton appointed Louis Gelbman and Herbert Wilson as members of the committee.

Hugh M. Frampton moved a vote of confidence in the council, but the resolution was declared out of order in view of the action on the Stengle motion.

Yaden Backs Valuation.

Yaden left the chair and, taking the floor, came out flat for the first time in favor of the agreed $50,000,000 valuation for rate purposes and indicated that the street car companies would be "chained and shackled" if not permitted to raise their carfares for ten years. The debate was on the valuation paragrah and he held that the recommendation of the public utilities committee meant that there would be no chance of changed fares for ten years because it would take that long to get a new valuation if the $50,000,000 agreed valuation was discarded. He said:

"Right here you're about to sound the death knell of merger, if any one pays any attention to what you are doing. This valuation for rate making purposes can not be completed for ten years. If you provide that there be no change of fare in ten years you will tie the hands of the companies with chains and shackles for that period. They will not accept it. And this when everyone knows that they can go before the commission and get an increased fare any time they want to within 60 to 90 days."

Clayton and Roberts Stirred.

Both Clayton and Roberts leaped to their feet shouting:

"That is not so."

Yaden started across the room at Clayton and Harry N. Stull who was in the chair pounded with the gavel for order. As order was restored Clayton was heard to shout at Yaden:

"You know that isn't true."

The debate occurred on a report from the utilities committee which had considered in detail the pending merger as modified by the Public Utilities Commission. The report contained definite criticisms of the plan as now drawn. George C. Havenner was armed with a substitute for all but two of the provisions of the report modifying the criticisms.

Most important of the paragraphs referred to the valuation, upon which the committee reported:

"The committee being satisfied that a $50,000,000 valuation for merger purposes is much too high, believes that no change should be permitted in the rates of fare in the District of Columbia until the publication of a proper revaluation to be commenced immediately after the track reconstruction incidental to rerouting is completed."

Havenner Offers Substitute.

Havenner moved a substitute that said the $50,000,000 valuation was "not wholly satisfactory" but would be accepted if fares were not advanced for three years and that a revaluatoin should be begun at once and placed in effect at the end of the ten years for which the agreed valuation holds.

Kenneth P. Armstrong moved still another substitute, similar to Havenner's except that it omitted the ten years making the term of the agreed $50,000,000 indefinite and provided no increase of fare for five years.

The federation voted down Havenner's amendment by a vote of 29 to 19, and appeared ready to adopt the committee's recommendation by a similar vote, but W. A. Roberts, vice chairman of the committee, who up to last night conducted a spectacular fight for weeks against the merger, split with Clayton, chairman of the committee, polled his committee against Clayton and agreed to the Armstrong substitute. It carried by a vote of 26 to 15. Roberts swaying more than the six votes necessary to defeat it and win for the committee paragraph.

Text of Report Adopted.

The report as adopted by the federation instructing its committee, follows:

"The federation approves the removal from the proposed street car merger plan of the perpetual fixed rate base and rate of return.

"The federation approves the attitude of the public utilities commission in declining to nominate the three so-called public directors in the manner provided in the original Wilson plan.

"Further modification of paragraph 10 of the merger agreement, the 'power clause,' is recommended to:

"a. Prohibit the purchase of power for resale by the new company.

"b. Provide for the fixing of the rate at which power must be sold by the Potomac Electric Power Co. to the new company, by the Public Utilities Commission with a reservation of the right to refix the rate in its discretion.

(c) Compel the accounting for all property operated by the Potomac Electric Power Co. under lease from the new company as "property used but not owned" by it. Provision should be required in the terms of the lease for the amortization in the power charge of leased property retired from service. This clause is intended to prohibit the inclusion in the rate base of the street car companies of the value of power plant equipment and structures leased to and operated by the Potomac Electric Power Co. There is every indication in the testimony of the witnesses for the company that the enormously more efficient power producing apparatus of the Potomac Electric Power Co. will replace within a very few years the antiquated plant now operated by the Capital Traction Co. The expressed intention of the carrier under the unification agreement is to retain the value of the power plant being used by the Potomac Electric Power Co under lease in the rate-making value of the street car system, at the same time purchasing power for operation from the Potomac Electric Power Co. at a rate which would provide for retirement of apparatus used in the production of the power.

"The federation is not wholly satisfied with $50,000,000 as a rate base for merger purposes but is willing to accept the same for merger purposes provided that no change be permitted in the rates of fare in the District of Columbia until completion of a proper revaluation to be commenced immediately after the track reconstruction incidental to rerouting has been completed and in any event within five years.

Free Transfers Approved.

"Paragraph 5 of the Commission's letter relating to traffic policemen, paving and bridges is satisfactory to the federation. We indorse free transfers between streets cars and between buses and between street cars and buses, excepting de luxe buses.

"We believe we should maintain our position relative to inclusion of a labor dispute clause in the charter of the new company and of a clause providing for half fares for school children. Should some legal obstacle be in the way of having these two clauses included in the necessary merger legislation then the committee believes that the federation should recommend and urge separate legislation to take care of these two matters.

"VII. No mention is made of the limitation of the life of the merger agreement in the Public Utilities Commission's letter. The committee feels that its original specifications with regard to a monopoly of transportation, limited to a period of 50 years, are reasonable and necessary to safeguard the rights of the citizens of the District of Columbia and that they should be included in a merger agreement. The limitations upon monopoly permitting service by others if the opportunity to serve is declined by the new company, are imperative and should be urged in connection with legislation regarding merger.

Federal Charter Demanded.

"VIII. Inasmuch as the highways in the District of Columbia are Federal property and the functions of the Federal Government are inevitably dependent upon the continued and satisfactory operation of the public utilities no unification should be approved unless the new company operates under a Federal charter and is subject to the will of Congress.

"IX. The committee recommends that it be directed to appear before the appropriate congressional committees in support of the recommendations herein contained."

Those who spoke in criticism of the companies' merger plan included Clayton, Roberts, E. J. Brennan and Louis Gelbman. Those who urged modification of the committee's criticisms included Yaden, Havenner, Armstrong, Col. Henry C. Newcomer, Harry N. Stull and Frampton. Jesse C. Suter, one of the pro merger leaders, was absent He is working on salary for the street car companies' merger plan but has been instructed by the association he represents in the federation to vote against the merger.

FIRE PERILS DELEGATES TO D. A. R. CONVENTION

$500 IS ESTIMATED LOSS

Thirty-two delegates to the Daughters of the American Revolution convention here, stopping at Kern's Hotel, 1912 G street northwest, were routed from their beds early yesterday morning by a two-alarm fire which broke out in the basement of the building.

Robert Downs, 35 years old, 1220 G street northwest, a butler, and James Jeffries, colored, 54 years old, 2221 F street northwest, a porter, were overcome by smoke and slightly burned by the flames. They were treated at Emergency Hospital, where their condition was reported last night to be satisfactory.

Mrs. Edith K. Kern, proprietress of the hotel, was awakened about 3 o'clock yesterday morning by dense smoke in her room. Jumping up, she called to Jeffries to go to the basement and put out the fire. Then she ran through the corridors of the hotel arousing the guests.

Jeffries was overcome by the smoke when he reached the basement. Charles Higham, for 25 years chief of the Middletown (N. Y.) Volunteer Fire Department, a guest at the Kern Annex, 1913 G street northwest, turned in the alarm after being aroused by the cries of the women.

When firemen arrived they found many of the guests on the top floor standing on window ledges ready to leap to the ground. Ladders were hoisted to the coping and the women brought down to safety. Jeffries and Downs were found in the basement after the firemen had penetrated to the center of the blaze. The damage to the building was estimated at $500.

REGENTS OF D. A. R. INDORSE DEFENSE

The resolution was offered by Mrs. John B. Heron, vice president general of Pennsylvania, and was passed with great enthusiasm.

The largest number of members ever admitted at a single board meeting were received yesterday when 2,800 applications were passed upon favorably, and 117 members were reinstated, making the total membership of the D. A. R. now well above 168,000 in all. Eighteen new chapters were also received.

Motions were adopted recommending that the Continental Congress pass legislation retiring the $1,000,000 bond issue on Continental Hall and the $2,500,000 auditorium authorized by the D. A. R. in the grounds in the rear of Memorial Continental Hall.

It was reported that more than $650,000 was on hand in cash and that in all probability the gifts at the congress will raise the fund to at least $1,000,000.

Another resolution adopted yesterday recommended that the congress authorize Mrs. Brosseau, the president general, to start the actual building operations as soon as the $1,000,000 is in hand.

Praise was expressed for the work of Mrs. Russell B. Magna, chairman of the finance committee for Constitution Hall for her services in this regard.

The proposal to build a Mount Vernon Memorial Highway as part of the nation-wide celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington in 1932, also was indorsed in a resolution.

Miss Florence Trumbull, daughter of the Governor of Connecticut and Mrs. Trumbull, who with her father and mother is a guest at the White House, will serve as personal page to Mrs. Brosseau, the president general, during the congress.

Miss Trumbull's engagement to Mr. John Coolidge, son of the President and Mrs. Coolidge, has been persistently rumored. Miss Bina Deneen, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Deneen, of Illinois, also is a personal page to Mrs. Brosseau.

Sidelights on D. A. R. Congress

Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general, is one of the most traveled women in the country as she has been virtually in every State in the Union during the past year and has just returned from a tour of the West. She was much feted by the California D. A. R.

One of the important projects to be discussed at this congress is the pensioning of Spanish-American War nurses who did not serve the required 90 days to receive Government pensions. The nurses of the Spanish-American War were known as the D. A. R. Hospital Corps and were mobilized under the direction of a committee of the D. A. R. They were nurses recommended by their hospitals and by the D. A. R.

Some of the most valiant of these nurses did not serve the required 90 days because the Spanish-American War was a short one, but did as splendid work as those who come under the 90-day limit.

The proposal which will be brought before the congress will be that the money being released by the increasing number of deaths of real daughters pensioned by the D. A. R. be applied to the D. A. R. nurses' fund. In a short time all the real daughters of the American Revolution will be gone and this fund set aside for them could be used for another purpose.

Mrs. Lucy E. Morriss, San Jose, Calif., who was recommended for service by Mrs. Harriet Scribner, of the District of Columbia, and served 76 days of intensive service, will be one of the first recommended for the pension, it is understood. The D. A. R. Hospital committee during the Spanish-American War was composed of women, some of whom are still active in the society.

The committee included Dr. Anita Newcomb Magee, director; Miss Mary Desha, assistant director; Mrs. Daniel Manning, honorary chairman; Mrs. Amos G. Draper, treasurer, and Mrs. Francis Nash.

Mrs. Henry B. Joy, candidate for vice president general from Michigan, has served the society in many capacities and is always a prominent figure at the congresses, having been for several years chairman of the committee on revision of the constitution, a member of the credentials committee, chairman of the resolutions and rules committee. Mr. Joy has been engaged in patriotic work before, during and since the war. She established one of the first centers for training women in occupational therapy so that they could teach the returned World War soldiers Mrs. Joy was one of the members of the national committee and a ranking officer in the National Service Schools, organized under the Woman's Naval Service to train women for war service in the things women are called upon to do during a war.

Miss Natalie Summer Lincoln, editor of the D. A. R. Magazine, is also identified with the local newspaper group and is the author of mystery stories. Miss Lincoln lives in the District of Columbia, but is a member of the Connecticut delegation to the congress.

Mrs. William Sherman Walker, vice president general from the State of Washington, is chairman of the national defense committee of the D. A. R., and has done most effective work in carrying forward the campaign for national defense and the upholding of patriotic ideals for which the society was founded. Mrs. Walker has been mentioned for Senator from the State of Washington.

Mrs. George Barnett, wife of the war time major general commandant of the United States Marine Corps, is being "groomed" for a place on the national board. Mrs. Barnett who is known as "The Little Mother of the Marines," is well versed in the art of organization and discipline. Mrs. Barnett was honorary commandant of the National Service Schools during the war.

Mrs. William Cumming Story, honorary president general, is known as the "lady in purple," for she always wears purple or lavender or soft shades of orchid.

There are special chairs at the back of the platform presented during their administration by admiring D. A. R. for each honorary president general. The honorary presidents general are Mrs. Story, Mrs. George Thatcher Guernsey, Mrs. George Maynard Minor, and Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook.

Two of the valuable possessions of the D. A. R. hang in the auditorium at Memorial Continental Hall, the Rembrandt Peele portrait of George Washington and the bas relief solid silver plaque of the Declaration of Independence presented to the society by Mrs. Brosseau.

The Woman's City Club entertained at a tea yesterday afternoon for the visiting members of the D. A. R. and local D. A. R. The members of the club who are D. A. Rs. were the special hostesses. The clubhouse courtesies have been extended to the delegates and officers during the congress.

The National Society of Children of the American Revolution, an offspring of the D. A. R. and under its sponsorship, will hold its meetings beginning Tuesday, at the Red Cross Building. Mrs. Josiah Van Orsdel, wife of Justice Van Orsdel, of the District Court, the national president, will preside.

Mrs. Emma Fox, parliamentarian of the congress, has served in this capacity for eleven years. Mrs. Fox arrived yesterday from her home in Detroit. As an author and educator Mrs. Fox has an international reputation. She is the author of a text book on "Parliamentary Usage for Women's Clubs," which is the authority for the procedure for many years of the club in the United States and national organizations, men and women. Mrs. Fox was one of the early workers for woman suffrage.

Mrs. James M. Willey, retiring State regent of the District of Columbia, will report for her State on Americanization and patriotic education lines. The local D. A. R. pays the salaries of special Americanization teachers among foreign-born of the District.

Mrs. Brooke Gwathmey White, jr., Florida's candidate for vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is the youngest member of the national board of the organization, in annual convention here next week.

In the last three months Mrs White has made 22 speeches in the interest of national defense, and will be one of the speakers at the dinner of the D. A. R next Saturday night.

Mrs. White came to Washington from Atlanta, where she was a member of the official party at the Stone Mountain unveiling. She and Mr. White are both natives of Virginia, although Mrs. White has lived in Florida since early childhood. She is a member of the Colonial Dames. As State regent, Mrs White heads the Florida delegation.

A. M. E. Conference To Meet Wednesday

The Baltimore annual conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church will convene at the Metropolitan Church Wednesday in its 111th session. Bishop J. Albert Johnson will preside. During the five-day conference approximately 200 delegates are expected to attend. Bishop Sampson Brooks, of West Africa, and Bishop John Hurst, of Baltimore, will make special addresses during the session.

A testimonial will be given Bishop Johnson Thursday night. Appointments to the various pastorates will be read next Sunday night.

Catholic U. Graduate Paris Prize Finalist

T. H. Locraft, a graduate of the Catholic University's department of architecture, has been selected as one of the five finalists for the current Paris prize competition. The prize is one of the most important open to architectural students of the United States and is an annual competition held under the auspices of the Beaux Arts Institute of Design. The finalists are chosen through a series of elimination contests and the winners of the final test is awarded the privilege of two years study abroad, entering the Ecoles des Beaux Arts in Paris.

Mr. Locraft recently won the prix d'emulation offered by the Societe des Architectes Siplomes par le Gouvernement Francais for the best work done by a student of the Beaux Arts Institute of Design. James F. Hogan, another former C. U. student, recently won the Fontainebleau prize, which provides for three months of travel and study abroad. Three of the seven scholarships awarded during the last three years have been won by Catholic University architectural school graduates.

Cosmopolitan Club Has Ladies' Night

A few brief remarks by Edward Rule, president, opened the first of the season ladies' nights of the Cosmopolitan Club in the Carlton Hotel last night, when the club put on an elaborate program.

Preceding the cabaret dinner dance, a social hour was held, during which members, their wives and guests became acquainted with one another. Upon the call of Roy Crampton, chairman of the entertainment committee, those in attendance filed into the Carlton Night Club, which was especially decorated for the evening. During dinner, various forms of entertainment were presented, which was followed by dancing. Over 100 persons attended and voted the ladies' night the best held in recent months.

Miss P. C. Keeler Wed To Watson B. Miller

Watson B. Miller, 50 years old, of Lanham, Md., World War veteran and chairman of the national rehabilitation committee of the American Legion, and Miss Phyllis C. Keeler, 29 years old, of the Commodore Apartments, Seventeenth and T streets northwest, were married yesterday afternoon.

The ceremony, which was attended by only intimate friends of the newlyweds, was performed by the Rev. Charles T Warner, rector of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, at the home of the bride. Mr. Miller is a brother of Kirk Miller, of the sporting department of the Washington Times.

Esperantists to Meet Here.

Citizens Indorse Healing Arts Bill

Passage of the Copeland bill to regulate the practice of "the healing arts" in Washington, was urged last night by the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association, in a resolution adopted at their meeting in the Mount Pleasant Library.

On recommendation of Dr. Arthur A. Chenay, the association adopted a resolution of regret on the transfer of Capt. F. M. Cornwell from the Tenth Precinct. A subsequent resolution took a similar stand on the transfer of Sergt. T. S. Lake from the precinct

MRS. BUSCH CHOSEN PEN WOMEN'S HEAD BY LARGE MAJORITY

AUTHORS ARE HONORED AT ANNUAL BREAKFAST

D. A. R. Continental Hall Visited; Place Wreath on Unknown's Tomb Today.

Mrs. Clarence M. Busch, of Miami and Washington, yesterday was elected president of the National League of American Pen Women at the closing session of its biennial convention held at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Busch received a large majority over her two rival candidates, Mrs. Edward Nelson Dingley, of Washington, and Mrs. Clara K. Heflebower, of Ohio, on the first ballot.

Although president of the Florida branch of the league, which placed her name in nomination, Mrs. Busch is a native of this city and still maintains her home here. The newly elected president is a member of the Washington Club, and the board of trustees of the Garfield Memorial Hospital, both of this city.

This city also won four other national officers in yesterday's election. They are Dr. Mary Meek Atkeson, first vice president; Mrs. Daniel C. Chace, recording secretary; Mrs. Victoria Saber Stevenson, treasurer, and Mrs. Eugene Elizabeth Collister, historian.

Other Officers Chosen.

Other officers elected were Mrs. Alice Ames Winters, of Minnesota, second vice president; Mme. Olga Samaroff, of Philadelphia, third vice president; Mrs. Jessie Wilder, of New York, fourth vice president; Miss Bernice Downing, of California, fifth vice president; Mrs. Frances Diehl, of Pittsburgh, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Margaret Scrugs Carruth, of Texas, auditor, and Mrs. Elizabeth Zimmerman, of Baltimore, librarian. The election for registrar resulted in a three cornered tie, which late last night had not been broken.

Secondary only to the elections in interest was the annual authors' breakfast, held yesterday noon at the Willard Hotel. Coralee De Long Maxwell, whose "Little Mischief" won the 1928 sculpture prize in the National League of American Pen Women's national contest, and Gena Branscombe, whose "The Pilgrims of Destiny" won the dramatic choral contest, were presented with their prizes.

Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton, the retiring national president, was toastmaster, and among the especially invited guests who were at the speakers' table were Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the United States Army; Hewitt H. Howland, editor of Century Magazine; Mary Roberts Rinehart, Julia Dent Grant, the Princess Cantacuzene, Sallie V. H. Pickett, president of the Women's National Press Club; Angela Morgan, Bonnie Busch and the five national vice presidents of the league.

Senator Capper Speaker.

Alethea H. Platt, Rose O'Neill, Martha Ostenso, Dr. Charles Greeley Abbot, Gena Branscombe, Alice Ames Winter, David Seabury, Joseph W. Lippincott and Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, spoke.

The breakfast was followed by a business session, during which final reports were received from the credential, registration and nominations committee, headed by Maude Guthrie, Jean Stephenson and Florence Ward, respectively.

During the time that the polls were open plans for a national clubhouse were presented by Harriet Hawley Locher, chairman of the committee; and the reports of the by-laws revision and resolutions committees were taken up.

After announcement of the results of the election last night, May Folwell Hoisington, national chairman of poetry, conducted the second session of the poets' forum.

On the invitation of Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the newly elected officers and visiting delegates paid a short visit to the Memorial Continental Hall.

Reception This Afternoon.

This morning at 11 o'clock delegates to the convention will go to Arlington National Cemetery to place a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, in behalf of the league. The ceremonies will be in charge of Mrs. Charles Fisher Taylor, national custodian of flags, and Mrs. Alfred Franklin Smith.

A musicale will be held at Memorial Continental Hall this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and a reception to the newly elected officers will be given at the Willard Hotel from 5 to 6:30 o'clock. In honor of Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton, the retiring president, and the 1928 music contest prize winners, Mrs. Dorothy Demuth Watson, will give a reception at 8:45 o'clock, at her residence, 1605 Kennedy street.

Two Tugs Tow Whale, Flung Ashore, to Sea

Wrightsville Beach, N. C., April 14 (A.P.).—Cheers rang out yesterday as the 60-ton whale, left on the beach by the waves nine days ago, finally was towed out to sea by two powerful tugs after nearly a week of effort to move the carcass and prepare it for the State museum at Raleigh.

Thousands came here to see the giant sea mammal. In the last few days strenuous complaints had been made by residents that the decaying bulk was becoming a nuisance. The county board of health threatened to act, but when the tugs Southport and Stone No. 6 steamed out to sea today with the whale in tow, this was not necessary. A tunnel had to be dug under the whale before the tugs, after straining for two hours, could move it.

Gov. Byrd and Moore Speak at Culpeper

Special to The Washington Post.

Culpeper, Va., April 14.—Gov. Harry F. Byrd and Representative R. Walton Moore, of Virginia, spoke today at the formal opening of the new Culpeper Municipal Building, which was made one of the gala events in the town's history.

Business and industry joined in the carnival spirit and the parades, along with school children and other organizations. Athletic and musical contests were conducted with suitable prizes offered. Later a community dinner was served in the new building. The celebration was closed tonight with a brilliantly lighted parade, patriotic songs and recitations.

NUN IS TO CELEBRATE 60 YEARS AS TEACHER

Sister Gertrude Will Renew Her Vows Wednesday at Bethesda Monastery.

HIGH HONORS AWAIT HER

The diamond jubilee, sixtieth anniversary mass of Sister Gertrude will be celebrated Wednesday at 9:30 a. m., at the Visitation Monastery, Bethesda, Md. At the mass the sister, daughter of the late William Leonard and Elizabeth Fletcher, of this city, will make a solemn renewal of her vows.

The Right Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore, will celebrate the mass, with the Rev. Thomas G. Smyth, pastor of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, as deacon, and the Rev. Edward L. Buckey, pastor of St. Matthew's, as subdeacon. The Rev. James O'Connor, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes, will be master of ceremonies. The sermon will be preached by the Very Rev. Francis P. Lyons, president of St. Paul's College.

Sister Gertrude entered the Visitation Convent, on the corner of Tenth and G streets, in August, 1866, and was professed in 1868. In 1877 the sisters moved to their convent and school, Connecticut avenue and L streets, taking in the entire block on which a few years ago was erected the Mayflower Hotel and adjacent buildings. There she taught for 42 years.

In 1919 the convent closed its school and entered upon the observance of the primitive rule drawn up in 1610 by St. Francis de Sales and St. Jane de Chantal. A tract of land was purchased at Bethesda, Md., a convent was built on more monastic lines, and on June 26, 1924, Archbishop Curley established ecclesiastical inclosure.

Sister Gertrude always taught little children. During her 60 years of teaching she became endeared to hundreds of pupils who passed on to higher grades and out into the world, many of whom will return on Wednesday to hear her make her solemn renewal of vows and to pay loving respects to a teacher who has passed nearly three-quarters of a century within the sacred precincts of the cloister.

STORE CLUB ADMITS FEW NEW MEMBERS

Ten new members were admitted to the Twenty Year Club of Woodward & Lothrop store employes at the club's annual good fellowship dinner last night in the Raleigh Hotel. The club is composed of employes who have been in the service of the store for 20 years or more.

Dr. Otis Smith, director of the United States Geological Survey, was the principal speaker. The major portion of the program was given over to a minstrel show by employes of the store and a concert by the Woodlothian orchestra. Donald Woodward, president of the store, was toastmaster. The committee in charge of the banquet comprised J. P. Hayden, chairman; F. P. Scott, Miss E. Johnson, Mrs. M. C. Cornelius, C. F. Gray and J. W. S. Hardey.

The new members admitted were I. C. Kollock, William E McArdle, Miss M. Fleming, Mrs. M. A. Neubauer, J. A. Buete, Mrs. S. G. Fisher, A. Barsamian, J. J. Gleason, Miss M. Roche and C. H. Bishop, manager of the New York office of the firm. The club now has a membership of 125.

Bride, 46 Days in Detention House, Waits Deportation

Woman, Charged With Illegal Entry and Arrested on Honeymoon, Wants to Go Back to Canada, as Visits of Husband, 17, Grow Fewer.

While her future hangs in the balance and the ponderous legal machinery of two nations is in motion to effect her deportation, Mrs. Olga T. Lyons, 22-year-old bride of a 17-year-old Interstate Commerce Commission employe, is today completing her forty-sixth day of incarceration at the House of Detention. She is charged with illegal entry to this country from Canada and was arrested while on her honeymoon at the home of her husband's parents at Manassas, Va.

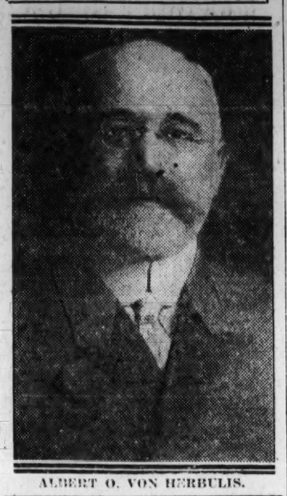

Mrs. Lyons, formerly Miss Tabor, was married to John W. Lyons, jr., early this year after she had been warned that her status warranted immediate deportation, according to officials of the Baltimore immigration office. The young woman is said to be a native of Spring Hill, Nova Scotia. She is charged with violation of the non-quota visa regulations, which provide for the registry and examination of those intending to take up residence here, although a passport is not required.

The brief married life of the couple, as revealed on the visitors' book of the House of Detention, disclosed a waning of ardor on the part of the young bridegroom, who is a rare caller at the hapless wife's enforced abode. She has had few visitors and declined yesterday to see reporters.

Silence also rules the household of young Lyons, who, with his father, lives at the Flagler Apartments, 738 Twenty-second street northwest. His father recently declined to discuss the case and also declined to reveal his son's whereabouts. Lyons senior is a telegrapher at the Navy Department communications office.

Policewomen who have Mrs. Lyons in custody say the girl has declared herself anxious to return to her native land. She was recently told by immigration officers that she will soon have her wish gratified, according to a House of Detention official.

ARCHITECT DEAD

ALBERT O. VON HERBULIS.

MISS BOXLEY IS NAMED APPLE BLOSSOM QUEEN

EDUCATED IN WASHINGTON

Winchester, Va., April 14.—Miss Mary Wise Boxley, member of a socially prominent family of Roanoke, Va., will ride in state as "Queen Shenandoah V" at the fifth annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, to be held at Winchester early in May, it was announced today by the committee in charge of arrangements for the celebration that has for several years attracted tens of thousands of visitors from many parts of the country to this city, nestling in the extreme northern tip of Virginia.

Miss Boxley, described as a Virginia beauty of the decidedly brunette type, tall, slender and of excellent figure and remarkable poise, is a daughter of William W. Boxley, prominently identified with financial and railroad contracting interests at Roanoke and vice president of two banks. Her mother is the former Miss Willey Saunders, of Richmond, Va. Miss Boxley, who is in her early twenties, is a leader in the younger social set and recently took a star role in a play "Captain Applejack," given by the Junior League at Hollins College.

She was graduated at the National Cathedral School, Washington, in 1925, traveled and studied abroad the following year, and returned to the Cathedral School in 1927 for a post-graduate course in fine arts.

The Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival is held at Winchester annually when the great apple orchards of the Shenandoah - Cumberland - Potomac fruit district are in full bloom. There are approximately 11,000,000 apple trees in the district from around Gettysburg, Pa., on the north, down to the Roanoke section in southwest Virginia, with Winchester midway. Six main north-south and east-west highways converge at Winchester.

In last year's festival parade there were more than 250 artistic floats and decorated motor cars, corps of cadets from many military schools and 8,000 school children, while scattered among the marching units were 32 bands, headed by the United States Navy Band, here again this spring. The dates for the two-day celebration are to be announced in a few days.

Court Orders Wine Returned.

James Corvelli, 1119 I street northwest, from whom ten barrels of wine and other assorted liquors were seized January 3 in a raid by the police and prohibition agents, was awarded an order for the return of his property yesterday by Judge Gus A. Schuldt in Police Court. The raid was made after an alleged sale. Attorney George P. Lemm, counsel for Corvelli, contended that the seizure was illegal.

A. O. VON HERBULIS DIES ON FALLS CHURCH, VA., CAR

Prominent Architect Is Victim of an Attack of Acute Heart Disease.

RITES AWAIT CHILDREN

Albert O. Von Herbulis, one of the foremost architects of the country, died suddenly yesterday near the Highway Bridge on a Washington-Virginia Railway car bound for his home in West Falls Church, Va. He was removed to the Emergency Hospital, but physicians pronounced him dead of an acute heart attack.

Mr. Von Herbulis was a native of Budapest, and came to the United States in 1880 after graduating from the Military Academy of Vienna and the Polyclinic University of Vienna. He designed many cathedrals, schools, hospitals and similar building throughout the country, including the St. Helena Cathedral at Helena, Mont.; the University of Ottawa, Ottawa, Canada; the Pensacola Hospital, Pensacola, Fla.; the University of Notre Dame, in Indiana; the Catholic University in this city, and many other notable buildings.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs Amilia Ritter Von Herbulis; one daughter, Mrs. Arthur Gardes, of Texas, and five sons, Otto, Walter and William, of this city, and Edward and Albert, of Sanford, Fla.

Queen Mary's Nephew Dies of Auto Injury

Belleville-sur-Saon, France, April 15 (A.P.).—Viscount Trematon, only son and heir of the Earl of Athlone, governor general of South Africa, and a nephew of Queen Mary, died early today in a hospital here as the result of injuries he suffered in a motor accident April 2. He was 21 years old.

(The viscount was driving the car accompanied by two fellow students of Cambridge University. The car crashed into a tree, killing Kenneth Madocke, one of the students.)

WILLIAM C. MATTHEWS EULOGIZED AT RITES

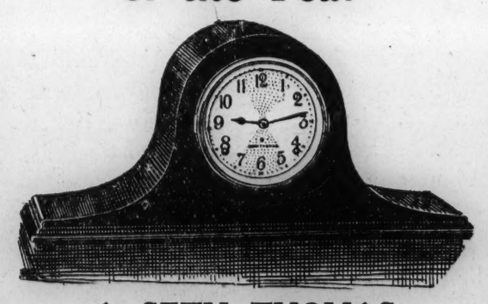

Special Assistant Attorney General to Be Buried in Boston Tomorrow.

Funeral services for William C. Matthews, colored special assistant to the Attorney General, who died here Monday at the Curtis Sanitorium, 1927 Seventeenth street, were held yesterday at McGuire's Chapel, the Rev. W. H. Thomas officiating. A brief eulogy was delivered by Dr. Emmett J. Scott, who was associated with the deceased at Tuskegee Institute. Judge Gustave A. Iverson, Assistant Attorney General, also spoke at the services.

Matthews, who was an assistant district attorney under President Taft and had charge of the national organization of the negro vote in the 1924 Republican campaign, served during the past two years in San Francisco as special assistant to Mr. Sargent. Mrs. Matthews, summoned from Berkeley, Calif., accompanied the body to Boston, where burial services will be held tomorrow.

COLONIAL AMERICAN HOME REPRESENTED IN POST EXHIBITION

BRIDGE SPANS STREAM THROUGH FRONT YARD

All of the Garages Are Fully Equipped, Even to Motor Cars.

One week from today the six homes forming The Washington Post "Home Beautiful" educational exhibit will be furnished and opened for public inspection.

The decorators in charge, headed by Mrs. R. H. Thomas, of Richmond, Va., have practically completed the selection of furnishings and all that remains to be done is to have them delivered and arranged in the different homes.

It will be a revelation to many to see how completely each detail of home furnishing has been remembered in the furnishing of the many rooms.

It is the purpose of the exhibit to eliminate all advertising features and to make the home look like homes that are actually being lived in, and that the imaginary occupant has invited an unusually large number of friends to inspect his new home. To carry out this illusion, all tags will be removed and there will be no advertising cards to mar the beauty of the homes. The "Home Beautiful" exhibit being purely an educational movement to show by concrete examples the newest and most up to date developments in the art of home furnishings, the merchants who are lending the equipment for each house are doing so in the whole spirit of cooperation to carry out the educational idea.

The $42,500 dwelling, located corner of Forty-fifth and Garfield streets, Wesley Heights, has been built by W. C. & A. N. Miller, developers of Wesley Heights, especially for this exhibit.

Stream in Front Yard.

It is unusual, as far as present-day homes go, inasmuch as it has been designed to represent the early American farmhouse. Outside, as well as inside, this feature has been carried out.

It is located on a corner lot of particularly large size. The first thing to attract the eye is a bridge that spans a small stream of water which runs through the front yard, and next to this is a spring with a springhouse built over it, all of which makes for attractiveness and makes one long to live again the early days of his life which were spent on the farm.

The house is built of brick with wide front porch extending across the entire front of the house. From this porch the house is entered into a reception hall. The living room, with wide, open fireplace built of brick is to the left as you enter. The dining room is at the back of the house and is entered through a single archway from the front hall. The kitchen and butler's pantry are next to the dining room.

The two-car garage is built as part of the house, but in a separate wing and over this is the library, which is a large room with stone floor and built-in book shelves all around the room. This room also has an open fireplace, and when furnished will perhaps be one of the most inviting rooms in the whole exhibit.

Motor equipment in the way of Buick automobiles, furnished by Stanley H. Horner, Inc., will be found in the garage as they will in all the garages of the other homes.

On the second floor are four large bed chambers and two modern tiled baths. The third floor is finished and has several attractive rooms.

This home is being entirely furnished from the stocks of Dulin & Martin, under the supervision of this firm's interior decorating department, and who have also dictated the wall and woodwork decoration throughout the house.

Early U. S. Furniture.

The furnishings will be carried out entirely in the early American period and much of the furniture and all of the floor coverings have been especially bought to make this house, when furnished, true to type. It is perhaps the most unique house ever offered for public inspection in Washington, and its furnishings will have a broad appeal to those interested in the earlier periods.

Mrs. R. H. Thomas, who has conducted many similar exhibits in the large cities of the country, is certain that Wesley Heights is the most beautiful subdivision she has visited from the Atlantic to the Pacific, a fact of which Washingtonians should be most proud.

There are five other homes in the exhibit, each one furnished in keeping with the price of the house on a sensible budget for furnishing investment, and one of them is priced as low as $12,950. All six houses will be open next Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock, and the public is invited to visit them as guests of The Washington Post and cooperating merchants. Each will be furnished in good taste from some of the finest stocks offered by Washington merchants.

Every attempt has been made to invade these homes with an air of hospitality and "homeness." There will be a reception committee on hand to bid you welcome and to explain every detail of the homes.

Locations of Houses.

The six houses will be open daily from 1 to 10 p. m., beginning April 22 and continue through April 29. You may visit the houses as often as you wish as guests of The Washington Post and cooperating merchants.

House No. 1—Valued at $47,500, located at 3838 Cathedral avenue, built and loaned by Charles D. Sager, realtor and home builder. Draperies, furniture and floor coverings to be supplied by W. & J. Sloane.

House No. 2—Located corner Forty-fifth and Garfield streets, Wesley Heights, valued at $42,500, built and loaned by W. C. & A. N. Miller, realtors and home builders. To be furnished by Dulin & Martin under supervision of this firm's interior decorating department.

House No. 3—Located 125 Hesketh avenue, Chevy Chase, valued at $29,750, built and loaned by J. E. Douglass Co., realtors and home builders. To be completely furnished from the stocks of the Hecht Co.

House No. 4—Valued at $27,500, located 3020 Courtland street, Woodley Park, built and loaned by Wardman, realtor and home builder. Furniture to be supplied by Kaufman Furniture Co.

House No. 5—Valued at $12,950, located 6801 Forty-fifth street, Leland, Chevy Chase, built and loaned by M. & R. B. Warren, realtors and home builders. To be furnished by W. B. Moses & Sons.

Cooperative apartment—Valued at $35,000, located in cooperatively owned apartment building, 1661 Crescent place, loaned by M. & R. B. Warren. To be furnished for the exhibit by W. & J. Sloane.

TRIAL OF SINCLAIR AWAITS COURT RULE ON CALLING DOHENY

Justice Bailey Expected to Decide Tomorrow Whether to Admit Evidence.

GOVERNMENT WANTS HIM TO TELL OF FALL VISIT

Admission of Elk Hills Lease Testimony Is Also Held Under Advisement.

(Associated Press.)

With all the sensational phases that marked the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy mistrial eliminated, the case of Harry F. Sinclair, charged with defrauding the Government in the lease of Teapot Dome, awaited over the week-end a ruling by Justice Jennings Bailey on two offers of evidence by the Government.

The prosecution rested Friday four and a quarter days after the trial started, about one-third the time it took to submit the Fall-Sinclair evidence to the jury, and which was uncompleted when the mistrial was declared last October. The dropping of the mystery features of the case, the ruling out of much documentary evidence, and the expeditious handling of the trial by Justice Bailey, accounted for the greater rapidity.

Elimination of the entire question of the Continental Trading Co.'s 33,000,000-barrel oil deal, which furnished several surprises at the previous trial, and the decision of M. T. Everhart to testify, abandoning his previous refusal, left the Government with but few facts to prove.

Helped By Everhart.

At the outset the defense admitted that Sinclair paid $233,000 to Fall for one-third interest in the Tres Ritos Cattle & Land Co., his large New Mexico ranch, and thus prevented the prosecution from going into the Continental deal, which brought in millions of dollars in oil profits that were invested in Liberty bonds, some of which the Government charges reached Fall as a bribe from Sinclair after he got the naval oil reserve.

Everhart, son-in-law of Fall, removed another mystery in the case when he testified that he had received $233,000 in Liberty bonds from Sinclair, delivered them to Fall and then took them to Pueblo, Colo., where he paid the debts on the ranch company and Fall's private notes.

He insisted the payment was for one-third interest in the Fall ranch, this contention thus reaching the jury from the Government's own witness.

Everhart also admitted he had received $35,000 more from the oil man, but insisted it was for improvement of the property of which Sinclair was then part owner.

Trend of the Testimony.

Much of the testimony introduced at the Fall-Sinclair trial concerned only acts of Fall and could not be used against the oil operator. However, the Government introduced much testimony that others had made efforts to obtain all or part of the Teapot Dome lease and that their efforts were without success. Those witnesses said that the negotiations between Fall and Sinclair had been surrounded with secrecy.

On the ruling of Justice Bailey will depend whether the Government will call Edward L. Doheny, jr., as a witness to tell of his alleged trip carrying $100,000 from his father to Fall in a "little black satchel." A bribery indictment against him was nolle prossed Friday to permit him to testify.

The questions Justice Bailey has under consideration are whether the Government shall be allowed to introduce testimony on a payment of $25,000 in Liberty bonds to Fall and whether it can introduce testimony concerning the Elk Hills lease given to the elder Doheny.

Both transactions, it is said, took place after the time charged in the indictment that the conspiracy was under way and the defense contended could not be used against Sinclair.

SENATORS TO REPORT ON FOREIGN SERVICE

Committee Has Been Inquiring Into Charges of Favoritism in State Department.

(Associated Press.)

After several weeks of secret hearings, a special Senate committee is prepared to recommend some legislation for administration of the foreign service of the State Department.

The hearings, which were carefully guarded, were instigated at the request of Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, who charged favoritism in the department's promotion system. The charge is understood to have grown out of rivalries between the consular and Diplomatic Corps, which were merged under the Rogers act of 1924.

Members of the Senate committee included Senator Harrison and Senators Moses, New Hampshire, and Reed, Pennsylvania. They expect to present a report to the Senate foreign relations committee this week.

Bill Honors Reed Yellow Fever Savant

(Associated Press.)

Congressional recognition of Maj. Walter Reed and those associated with him in investigating the cause, and means of transmission of yellow fever, was proposed yesterday in a bill by Representative Wainwright, Republican, New York.

The bill would direct the Secretary of War to have published annually in the Army Register a roll of honor of the names of Reed and his 20 associates in the experiments, with a description of the part they played. It also would provide for the payment of $250 monthly for the remainder of their lives to the survivors of the group, or to various designated relatives.

Annie E. L. Beaman, who died March 21, left an estate valued at about $155,000, according to the petition for letters testamentary filed yesterday in Probate Court by Louis Lovett, Norman Lovett and Robert S. Bright, executors. The estate includes premises 2322 Massachusetts avenue northwest. The deceased was survived by a brother, Antoine DeB. Lovett, and her sisters, Charlotte, Louisa and Caroline DeB. L. Lovett, the sole heirs at law.

GENERAL ELECTRIC Refrigerator

There isn't a bit of exposed machinery in the General Electric Refrigerator. It's all sealed inside one airtight steel casing—mounted on top of the cabinet. There isn't any mechanism under the box, inside it—or down in the basement.

To such remarkable simplicity have the engineers of General Electric brought the domestic refrigerator. For fifteen years they worked. They built thousands of refrigerators. Tested them in the laboratory and in homes. Changed them, improved them, perfected them... until this final example of simplicity and efficiency was evolved. It was primarily an electrical problem. And so it was solved, as one would expect, by the world's outstanding group of electrical engineers and scientists.

You are cordially invited to come in today and study the many models. Notice how quietly they operate. How roomy and strong the cabinets are. Remember, too, that they use very little current to make all the ice you need and keep the temperature always below the 50° danger point.

Sold on time, if you prefer. Send for an interesting descriptive booklet.

The NEW SIX $1295

120-inch wheelbase, 4-door Sport Sedan, $1295

The same quality as the famous Model 115.

Starting right with the motor which is the famous Lycoming Six—not built to a price but to certain definite lasting quality specifications. Equipped with thermostatic water control insuring even motor temperatures, Bohnalite steel-strut aluminum pistons, your greatest guarantee against piston slaps and scores. Lynite connecting rods, the greatest possible guarantee against bearing troubles due to their lighter weight and great tensile strength. Schebler double jet carburetor. All costly features to be found in our Eights but made a part of the Six in order to give it the same long life, smoothness and performance which we have obtained in the Eights.

Bijur chassis lubrication, a slight pressure of a lever lubricates the springs, spring shackles, steering knuckles, clutch throwout bearing, water pump, fan and other parts. This expensive equipment is to be had as standard only on Auburn, Packard and Rolls Royce.

The same costly internal expanding hydraulic four wheel brakes with special compensating cylinder which guarantees positive equalization for an indefinite period. Brakes which we believe vary less with weather and road conditions than any other brake in the world.

The same steering gear principle as developed for our large cars, which must be handled and driven on the road to be appreciated, as there is no other gear of comparable qualities.

120 inch wheelbase—chassis springs of alloy steel—four Lovejoy Hydraulic shock absorbers standard equipment, the best guarantee you can buy of continued, indefinite shock rebound control. These features insure the utmost in long life and easy riding over any road conditions.

All closed bodies have all glass at non-reflecting angles with Auburn's famous mono control Brewster windshield, offering real ventilation, plus the non-glare features for night driving. Genuine plate glass is used throughout. The last word in detail finish including hammered silver finish hardware, unique instrument panel design with a complete component of instruments. The same exclusive steering wheel controls as found on the larger car. The new theft proof electro lock. Custom type door construction. Body upholstery springs of the deluxe noiseless type, with upholstery of genuine mohair of unusual design. Rubber covered clutch, brake and accelerator pedals, and special padded rubber front compartment mat.

All of the above are details but all are things that make a motor car last—make for motor car satisfaction and the miles of perfect service it will give.

We could talk for hours on the value and performance of this new Six. To fully appreciate its wonderful qualities, however, all we ask is that you see the car, ride in it and drive it and if it does not sell itself you will not be asked to buy.

The usual twilight music and at-home hour will be held at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets, this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Mrs. Maurine Baxley will be the hostess.

At the Elizabeth Somers Vesper Service, 1104 M street, this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock, there will be a special speaker and Richard Davis, violinist, 10-year-old son of Mrs. Frank R. Davis, of the Chapter Council, will play.

The World Fellowship Luncheon for the month will be held on Thursday at 12:30 o'clock in the fourth floor dining room. Mrs. William S. Culbertson, wife of the American Minister to Roumania and formerly a member of the board of directors of the Washington Association, and Miss Ingaborg Ohlsson, of Sweden, will bring greetings. Dr. Taisa Stadnichenko, formerly a teacher at Vassar and now with the International Research Institute, will speak on Russia. All who desire to come are asked to have their reservations in by noon on Wednesday.

The monthly meeting of the board of directors will take place on Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock, Seventeenth and K streets.

Committee meetings during the week include the rooms registry on Tuesday morning at 11:30 and on Friday the publicity-finance committee at 12 noon.

There were many visitors in Washington during the Easter season who used the various Y. W. C. A. centers, and among those who registered in the guest book at Seventeenth and K streets were Mrs. Mabel Hopper and Miss Mori Yoshiko, of Tokyo, Japan; Miss Elizabeth A. Wakefield, of Minneapolis; Mrs. Morgan G. Bulkeley, jr., of Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. Wesley Norris and daughter, of Dallas, Tex.; Dr. and Mrs. Burr, of South Manchester, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Faelth, of Kansas City; Miss Emma E. Berleb, of New York; Mrs. Philip E. Browning, of the board of trustees in New Haven, Conn.; Mrs. Boulding and daughter, of Windsor, Conn., where Mrs. Boulding is on the board; Miss Ruth A. Doud, industrial secretary, and Miss Robinson, membership secretary, from Scranton, Pa.

Miss Mary McKinnon will speak to the girls of the Y. W. C. A. at Gallaudet at 7 o'clock this evening.

The poster committee will meet Tuesday, at 5 p. m., in the board room, instead of the usual third Thursday.

Thirty-five girls from Gallaudet College will spend their spring vacation at Kamp Kahlert from Wednesday until Monday, April 23. Miss Minnie V. Sandberg and Miss Mary Fox will be the hostesses from the Y. W. C. A. staff.

Industrial Department.

A group of club girls from the industrial department of the Y. W. C. A. in Lancaster, Pa., are in Washington today, and will be guided in their sightseeing by the industrial department here. Miss Pauline Kahl, president of the Industrial Federation of Clubs in Lancaster, is in charge of the group.

Wednesday the K. E. Y. Club will meet for supper at 6:30 and afterward will have a bowling party.

The Greek Club will hold its regular business meeting Thursday at 2:30.

The Thursday Club will give a supper party on the roof Thursday at 6 p. m., which will be followed by recreation. Girls employed in homes are cordially invited to join in the good times regularly planned for Thursday afternoons and evenings.

Many association members will be interested to learn of the marriage of Miss Charlotte Leicht, of Bremen, Germany, who has been a club member in the industrial department for several years, to John A. Vaughn, assistant professor of chemistry, at Oberlin College, Ohio. They will make their home in Lorraine, Ohio.

Business and Professional Department.

This afternoon, the Blue Triangle Club will meet at the home of Miss Peggy Wallace in Takoma Park and from there will go on a hike through the woods, where they will have a picnic supper.

Tomorrow night at 8 o'clock the booklovers' section will meet in the assembly room on the fourth floor. Miss Alice Hutchins Drake will speak on "The Spring Book List." Every one interested in "what to read" is cordially invited to attend.

The monthly music hour of the Tuesday Club group will be held Tuesday evening at 7 p. m. in the assembly room on the fourth floor. The special soloist for the occasion will be Mr. Carlos A. Baumback, of the Mexican Embassy. The Amicitia, Hitika, Premiere, Tip Top and Wohelo Clubs will have supper together at 6:15.

The Blue Triangle Club of young girls in business will devote its program hour on Thursday night this week to social service work. Mrs. Stephanie B. Martin, of the Associated Charities, will speak to them. At 8 p. m. the girls will start some handcraft work under the direction of Miss Mildred Louden.

Girl Reserves.

Girl Reserve Club meetings in the schools will be resumed tomorrow afternoon, when the Adelphi Club of Western High School will meet at 2:45.

The clubs at Powell, Columbia, Langley and Macfarland Junior High Schools will meet on Tuesday afternoon.

On Wednesday at noon, the Dennison School Girl Reserve Council will meet for luncheon to plan for the meetings of the four clubs that afternoon at 2 o'clock. On that afternoon also the Girl Reserve Club of Fillmore School will take a hike, and the Tri-Hi Club of Business High School will have a party in the Girl Reserve clubrooms at 3 o'clock.

On Thursday the clubs at Stuart Junior High School will hike to the Washington Monument, the three clubs at Jefferson will meet at 2:15 at the school, and Les Camarades and Fidelis Clubs of Eastern will have social service meetings at 2:45.

Friday at 3 p. m. Bon Secour Club of Central High School will entertain the members of the faculty at tea, and at 3 o'clock Semper Fidelis Club of Tech will present a program of music at the Home for the Blind.

Saturday will be a big day for all junior high and grade school Girl Reserves, for they are invited to an all day picnic and hike to Vacation Lodge, Cherrydale, Va.

The girls will meet at Key Bridge in Rosslyn at 11 a. m. and will be directed to Cherrydale cars by the hostesses from Macfarland Junior High School. It is only necessary to bring 32 cents for car fare and a picnic lunch. Miss Cook and Miss McDowell, assisted by school advisers, will be in charge of the girls.

Chapters.

The Princeton Chapter will meet tomorrow at 2 p. m., at the home of Mrs. M. G. Copeland, 2709 Woodley road. Mrs. Harold E. Doyle, chairman of the Kamp Kahlert committee, will talk on Vacation Lodge and Kamp Kahlert.

The Cleveland Park Chapter will have a birthday party and candy sale, which was postponed, tomorrow at the home of the president, Mrs. Arthur B. Heaton, 3320 Highland place. Mrs. T. E. Brown, president of the Washington Association and Miss Mignonette O. Buckingham, the founder of the chapter, will be the guests.

Park View Chapter will meet at Seventeenth and K streets in the board room tomorrow at 2 p. m. Miss Hettie P. Anderson, general secretary, will talk on Kamp Kahlert and Vacation Lodge. This meeting was postponed from April 9.

The Bloomingdale Chapter will meet at the home of Mrs. Warren Hadley, 2332 First street northwest, at 8 p. m.

The Georgetown Chapter will meet at the Presbyterian Chapel on P street, near Thirty-first, at 2 p. m. on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Harold E. Doyle will talk to this chapter also on Kamp Kahlert and Vacation Lodge.

COSTES AND LEBRIX, ENDING GLOBE TOUR CHEERED IN FRANCE

Fliers Complete 35,000-Mile Trip, All in Air Except Pacific Crossing.

MEMBERS OF CABINET JOIN IN DRINKING TOASTS

Wonderful Experience, Say Airmen, but Paris Surely "Does Look Good."

Paris, April 14 (A.P.).—The flying Frenchmen, Dieudonne Costes and Joseph Lebris, came home this evening from their air odyssey over 35,000 miles of land and sea—over Africa, the two Americas, Asia, Europe and a wide expanse of the South Atlantic.

Speeding to Paris in six days from far-away Tokyo, on the other side of the earth, they brought their biplane down upon the green field of Le Bourget just before dusk—the noise of their motor drowned by the sound of 1,000 gallic "Bravos" and "Vivas."

Two squadrons of French military planes escorted them on their last few miles over the familiar territory that stretches southeastward from Paris. On the ground there was a band of music, and there were cheers, the waving of hats and handkerchiefs, laughter and joyful tears.

Cabinet Members Present.

It was out of a cloudy, gray and dripping sky that Costes piloted the "Nungesser-Coli" to the landing field, ending a pilgrimage around the world, all of it through air, except the crossing of the Pacific. Every member of the French cabinet who is in Paris, except the ever-occupied premier, M. Poincare, was at Le Bourget to welcome the new national heroes. So also were the aces of French aviation, whose achievements Costes and Lebrix have exceeded, the veteran Louis Berliot, Pelletier Doisy, the popular "Pivolo" Drouhin, Capt. Arrachart, and the youthful Sergt. Detroyat, who hopes to fly from Paris to New York alone in a monoplane modeled after Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis."

Although only those with passes were admitted to the airdrome, there were enough of them to break through the police barriers, just as they did the night Lindbergh landed. Outside the field there were tens of thousands more. The Nungesser-Coli came down beautifully in the midst of the two squadrons of escort planes. Costes had this to say: "It has been a marvelous experience, but Paris surely does look good."

Toasts Drunk to Fliers.

When the ministers and their fellow fliers had shaken their hands, Costes and Lebrix were escorted to a hangar decorated with the flags of the 30 or more lands they visited in their flight. Toasts were drung to their fresh glory then through the highways crowded with the cheering thousands they were led away to Paris, to real French food again, and to a long, long sleep between cool, clean linen sheets.

Lebrix expressed his joy over landing at the very place of their departure after a six months' trip which carried the French colors around the world. They brought back the same airplane, with its motor intact.

80 Women Answer Ad to Fly Ocean

London, April 14 (A.P.).—The Daily Mail today said that F. P. Young, an airplane designer, who recently advertised for a woman or man to accompany him on a flight from London to New York in July, has received more than 400 applications, 80 of them from women. Young proposes to travel in a flying boat of his own design. It will have six engines, four of which will always be kept in reserve.

President Congratulates Aviators Through Canada

Ottawa, Ontario, April 14 (A.P.).—Through the United States Legation at Ottawa the congratulations of President Coolidge and the people of the United States on the first western non-stop flight of the Atlantic has been transmitted to the Bremen aviators on the lonely island in Belle Isle Straits.

The United States Embassy today asked the Canadian government to transmit the following message from President Coolidge to Capt. Koehl of the Bremen:

"The President asks that the Canadian government be so good as to transmit to Capt. Koehl his heartiest congratulations for the magnificent flight through storm and sleet across the north Atlantic. The President also asks that Capt. Koehl convey to Col. Fitzmaurice, his copilot, and to Baron Huenfeld, his fellow countryman, an expression of the admiration of the people of America."

The Canadian authorities also transmitted today the following messages:

"The War Department and the Army of the United States proffer sincere congratulations on the achievement of spanning the Atlantic from east to west. The accomplishment notably attests the skill and courage of the Bremen's crew.

"DWIGHT F. DAVIS.
"Secretary of War."

"On behalf of the Army Air Corps I send you hearty greetings and warmest congratulations on the first successful nonstop flight westward across the Atlantic. It is an accomplishment of which the whole world is supremely proud.

"TRUBEE F. DAVISON.
"Assistant Secretary of War."

Mothers of Nungesser And Coli in Greetings

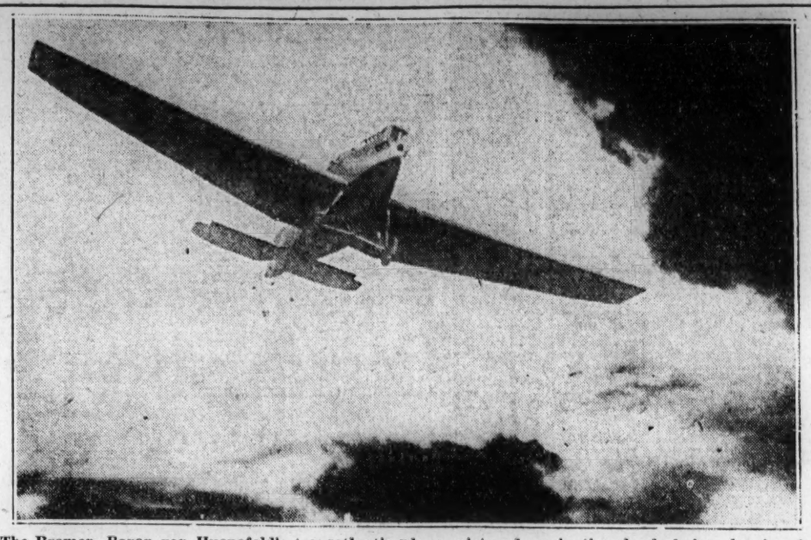

Paris, April 14 (A.P.).—Mme. Nungesser told reporters tonight that she joyed in the success of Costes and Lebrix. At the same time she added that she felt keenly the disappointment that her son was not the first to succeed in transatlantic Westward flight.

"I am convinced that Charles still lives," she said. "Something tells me that he will come back—perhaps in another month, perhaps not for a year. But I am sure I shall again clasp my son in my arms.

Marseilles, France, April 14 (A.P.).—Mme. Coli, whose son, Francis, with Charles Nungesser, lost his life in a transatlantic attempt, telegraphed congratulations to Costes and Lebrix on the success of their flight in a plane named The Coli-Nungesser. At the same time she took occasion to discuss the flight of the Bremen.

"The success of the Germans in crossing the ocean proved that my son was right when he declared that the feat was possible," she said. "Already in 1921 he had traced out the route they followed. If honor goes to the Germans for the first Westward crossing of the Atlantic on that route, the honor for the first attempt must go to my son and to Capt. Nungesser."

LINDBERGH "RESCUERS" FIND FLIER AT LUNCH

Landing Made on Plateau as Airman Seeks Larger Place for Take-Off.

WILLIAMS FIELD SMALL

Williams, Ariz., April 14 (A.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh gave residents of Williams a brief period of anxiety today when he hopped off from the local airport without announcing his plans and then landed 6 miles away in an isolated wooded section.

First reports were that the famous flier had been forced down in his new monoplane, giving rise to fears that he might have been injured. All available automobiles were rushed to the scene, but on arrival the "Lone Eagle's" would-be-rescuers found the plane resting undamaged on the level ground.

In the window of the ship there was a note penciled by Lindbergh: "Gone to lunch."

Lindbergh was found a few hundred yards away eating luncheon at a ranch house whose owner had not yet recovered from the shock of being called upon to play host to the noted airman.

Meanwhile it was whispered about Williams that Lindbergh wanted to work on his plane and decided to do it out in the "sticks" where he wouldn't be bothered by crowding hero worshipers. Whether the report was true or not, the flier found a sizeable gathering about his ship when he returned from his luncheon.

Lindbergh denied being forced down, and declared that what he was looking for was a field with a runway big enough to successfully take off with two passengers and a full load of gasoline. The Williams field, he said, was not long enough. The flier came down on the Coconino Plateau, between the Cockscomb and Bill Williams Mountains. He said he expected to leave later in the day for the now familiar "unannounced destination."

Lindbergh first made a short flight from the local field, then returned for the take-off to his plateau retreat.

H. M. Bixby and Harry Hall Knight, of St. Louis, who accompanied Lindbergh on his flight here from California yesterday, remained in Williams while the flier worked with his plane.

Algiers and Return Nonstop Flight Off

Paris, April 14 (A.P.).—Lieut. Michael de Troyat, aspirant for transatlantic flight honors, today abandoned an attempt to fly to Algiers and return without stopping. He returned shortly after starting from Le Bourget because of motor trouble. The flight was to be a test of his all-metal plane, in which he intends to fly from Paris to New York this year.

Big Help to Aviation Seen by Lindbergh

Williams, Ariz., April 14 (A.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, told by the Associated Press of the successful westward spanning of the north Atlantic by the German plane Bremen, was highly pleased.

"It will help aviation a great deal by stimulating the public's confidence in flying," he said.

6 Press Planes Hired To Get Story of Flight

Curtiss Field, N. Y., April 14 (A.P.).—M. M. Merrill, general manager at this commercial flying field, announced tonight that six planes chartered by newspapers were being prepared to fly into Canada tomorrow to get as near as possible to Greenly Island in the Straits of Belle Isle, where the transatlantic monoplane Bremen is marooned.

One newspaper plane passed through New York today from Philadelphia on the same mission. It was a Fairchild cabin plane owned by the Ludington Flying Service and piloted by Robert Hewitt, accompanied by his mechanic, John Buscher.

Merrill did not believe that the Curtiss planes would be able to land on Greenly Island, but it was believed they might make landings on the mainland not far away and that the newspaper men might be able to establish some form of communication from there to the island.

SCORN FOR NAVIGATION BLAMED FOR FAILURES

Capable Pilots "Look Down" on Science, Says Lieut. Comdr. Green.

BYRD'S CARE IS PRAISED

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—Lieut. Comdr. Fitzhugh Green, U. S. N., retired, today attributed the forced landing of the transatlantic plane Bremen far to the north of its course at least in part to what he said was a general feeling among expert pilots that scientific navigation was just a bit beneath them.

Commander Green was referred to by Commander Richard E. Byrd in his book "Skyward" as one of the greatest living Arctic authorities.

"In connection with long flights of the past year," Commander Green told the Associated Press, "there has been a general tendency on the part of supremely capable pilots to look down a bit on the navigational end of their undertakings. Some of them have scoffed a bit at Commander Byrd for the emphasis he has laid on the absolute necessity for painstaking preparation and constant attention to navigation.

"The pilots of the west-east flights were not bothered so much by compass variation because they had the magnetic pole behind them and the deviations were not so great, but flying westward there is a constant and considerable compass variation, which, unless taken into exact account, would lead the plane northward to Labrador.

"I believe that this is what took the Bremen to Greenly Island, far north of its course, and I think it very likely that this accounts for some of the mysterious disappearances of planes in the past.

"Besides compass variation, there is drift to be taken into account. Customary winds over the ocean cause a drift to the northward, which must be taken into account if one would stay on his course."

Baroness Did Not Know Son Was Flying Atlantic

Aged Mother of Huenefeld Was Told Only When Report of Nova Scotia Sighting Was Received; Joy Later Was Turned to Worry.

Berlin, April 14 (A.P.).—Baron von Huenefeld's aged mother did not know until last night, when the alleged sighting of the Bremen over Nova Scotia was reported, that her son was on his great adventure. Her joy changed to grave anxiety when the rumor proved unfounded, but she was persuaded by her other son, Hans, to retire about midnight before the news of the forced landing on Greenly Island was received.

Hans remained at the telephone. He had the first intimation of the Bremen's landing at 3 a. m., but preferred not to wake his mother until confirmation came.

"The disappointment about Nova Scotia was too keen," he said. "I did not want mother to go through it a second time. Even after the confirmation was received at 4 o'clock I did not waken her still wanting to leave room for possible error. Finally at 6 o'clock I told her. Naturally, she was overjoyed."

Baroness Huenefeld is now awaiting direct word from her son, but neither she nor his brother Hans has made any plans about going to the United States.

"My brother made no arrangements beyond the flight," Hans said. "It is, therefore, too early to say anything about his or our further plans."

The mother is in poor health. As a talisman there is a gilded horseshoe over the door of her apartment.

Mrs. Hermann Koehl, wife of Capt. Koehl, copilot of the Bremen, received the news of the fliers' safe landing with gratification this morning.

After remarking that a load had been lifted from her mind, she and her mother retired. They implored the ministry of posts, telephones and telegraphs to shield them from inquirers so they might enjoy a needed sleep.

To all attempting to call "Suedering 2899," telephone girls were instructed to reply: "The subscriber wishes not to be disturbed."

Dublin, April 14 (A.P.).—When Commandant James C. Fitzmaurice flew the ocean from east to west he accomplished his life's ambition, and should be satisfied, the proud and happy young wife of the Irish member of the Bremen's crew told the Associated Press in an interview today.

Mrs. Fitzmaurice related how "Fitz" came to be a member of the first successful transatlantic airplane expedition westward.

"We were at tea one evening when Herr Klose (chief mechanic of the Bremen) entered, looked at me seriously and said: 'I have come to speak of something which concerns you, Mrs. Fitzmaurice.' Speaking English with difficulty, he went on, 'We would consider it a great honor if Fitz would come with us on the flight.'

"I replied that I would not stand in his way. Fitz's eyes jumped in his head, and he left his tea unfinished.

"My huband had complete confidence in the Bremen's ability to cross the Atlantic. He had only one fear and that was his ability to take off without mishap. The undercarriage was so light and the load so heavy that he was nervous on this score. But once off, he had the fullest confidence of completing the journey.

"Often he pointed out to me the stars whereby his course could be directed. We were always looking at the stars," she added, smiling.

Commandant Fitzmaurice, his wife said, has great faith in the future of civil aviation and would like to devote himself to it. He often spoke of the importance of Ireland in the future of the world's aviation.

CRITICS OF SEA FLIGHT IN GERMANY RESTRAINED

Regular Traffic Practicable, It Is Held, Only by Planes With Several Motors.

DISCOURAGE EMULATION

Berlin, April 14 (A.P.).—Lufthansa, the German aviation organization which vented its disapproval of Capt. Hermann Koehl's abandonment of his place as one of their night fliers to steer the Bremen to Ireland today issued a cordial statement congratulating him. The statement said:

While Germany's jubilation over the crossing of the Atlantic by a German plane continued today, it lacked the enthusiasm prompted by last night's erroneous reports that the aviators had reached Mitchel field. Instead there was considerable technical discussion of what had actually been accomplished.

Dr. Rumpler, of the Rumpler works, appraised the flight as a "sporting event of the greatest significance" because it demonstrated that an east to west flight, even with strong head winds, was possible. He added, however, that regular transoceanic air traffic is practicable only with multimotored planes of enough speed to insure independence of wind and weather.

Maj. von Tschudi, dean of German aviators, said: "The courage of the fliers deserves unbounded admiration, but experts should not encourage emulation of Capt. Koehl, who undertook a transocean flight without adequate means."

The flight of the Bremen as an airplane made of aluminum was hailed by the Boerson Courier as a victory for the all-metal over the wooden plane, which it believed would exert a big influence on future plane construction.

Aerial Parade Today For Koehl's Birthday

Berlin, April 14 (A.P.).—In honor of Capt. Hermann Koehl's fortieth birthday an aerial parade has been arranged for tomorrow noon by the German Association of Airmen.

All planes available have been asked to report at the Staaken Airdome outside of Berlin to start for the center of the city at 11:45 a. m., reaching Wilhelmstrasse and Unter Den Linden at noon.

Under the plan the great aerial parade will perform evolutions over the homes of President von Hindenberg, Capt. Koehl and Baron von Huenefeld's mother.

DIRIGIBLE ON FIRST LEG OF POLAR TRIP

Gen. Nobile's Italia Leaves Milan; To Stop at Stolph, in Germany.

Milan, Sunday, April 15 (A.P.).—The Italian dirigible Italia left Baggio airdrome at 2 o'clock this morning for Stolph, Germany, the first stage of its transpolar flight.

A more ambitious program than that of the "Norge" in which Gen. Nobile went to the North Pole in 1926 has been mapped out for the present trip. Nobile has made arrangements to remain in the polar regions through the remainder of spring and well into the summer. With a base established at Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, Nobile plans several flights, one to ascertain whether there is more land on either side of the route followed by Peary.

A party of 200 made up of scientists, officers, mechanics and soldiers will be directed by Nobile. An oaken cross presented by Pope Pius will be carried to the pole and dropped there from the dirigible.

Wisconsin Governor Would Fly in Bremen

Madison, Wis., April 14 (A.P.).—Gov. Fred R. Zimmerman, aviation enthusiast, wants to fly with the crew of the Bremen if they come to Wisconsin in their plane.

The governor sent a telegram to the fliers to Mitchel Field, inviting them to come to Wisconsin. He also expressed the desire to fly into the State with them from some point at which they might stop before coming here.

Junkers Expert Decides Plane Can Not Get Through

Mitchel Field, L. I., April 14 (A.P.).—Charles A. Levine, who flew to Germany with Clarence Chamberlin, today offered the use of his transatlantic plane, the Columbia, for the relief of the crew of the Bremen, stranded on Greenly Island.

Fred Melchior, Junkers aircraft expert, said that while the offer was much appreciated it probably would not be accepted.

He pointed out that while the Columbia has a much greater cruising area than the F-13, sister ship of the Bremen, if the latter were flown to the island its parts might be substituted for those broken on the Bremen. The Bremen could then continue its flight to New York, while the F-13 would await improvement in weather.

Reports of weather conditions today over the area between New York and Greenly Island were so unfavorable that Mr. Melchior said that no flight would be made. Fliers here thought it would be two or three days before a plane would be able to get through.

Byrd and His Aids Consider Trip Over Ocean Splendid Venture Against Odds.

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—New York's voice called across a thousand miles tonight to welcome to America the three men who brought the German monoplane Bremen across the Atlantic.

In the broadcasting studio of radio Station WOR, a group of German-Americans, among them August Koehl, uncle of the Bremen's pilot, put on the air a welcoming program which may have been heard by the three airmen through the Canadian government station near Greenly Island where they were forced down yesterday.

Mr. Koehl, musician and composer conducted an orchestra playing the "Victory March" he had written in honor of the Bremen's achievement. Speakers included Dr. Francis M. Schipp, president of the German Press Club, and editor of the New York Staats-Zeitung; David Maier, editor of the American Monthly; former Judge Charles Oberwager, president of the United German Society of New York, and George Sylvester Vierick, founder of the American Monthly.

Millions Are Stirred.

Stirred as they had not been since Col. Charles A. Lindbergh flew to Paris nearly a year ago, New York's millions today were planning such a welcome as only he received when the crew of the Bremen finally reach the city.

Since Thursday morning, when the news came that Capt. Hermann Koehl, Col. James Fitzmaurice and Baron von Huenefeld had hopped off from Dublin for New York enthusiasm had been steadily mounting. When word came that the three flyers had landed safely at Greenly Island, the whole city joined in the tumult of thanksgiving.

"I knew they'd make it," was the cry reflecting the spirit of optimism that had prevailed throughout the long, anxious hours.

Men prominent in aviation hailed the feat as a distinct triumph.

"A splendid venture, and, considering the tremendous odds, a great achievement in the annals of flying," Commander Richard E. Byrd said.

Praise by Floyd Bennet.

"My hat is off to them" said Floyd Bennet, Commander Byrd's pilot on his flight to the North Pole. "I'm sorry they didn't make New York, but in reaching the coast of Labrador they did what no man had done before them."

Bernt Balchen, who was with Byrd on his flight to France from New York last summer, called it a "great job."

"They had everything against them," he said. "It is one thing to fly from west to east with good summer weather, but another thing entirely to have a big head wind all the way."

"I think the flight of the Bremen is the most remarkable ever made," Charles A. Levine said.

Miss Herta Junkers, official representative in this country for the company which built the Bremen, never lost her faith that the big plane would win through.

When the flyers arrive here they'll get "some reception," as Christie Bohnsack of the mayor's welcoming party phrased it. "We will give them as great a reception as any ever received by any flier or fliers who have conquered the air," he said.

Philadelphia Called Goal of the Bremen

Philadelphia, April 14 (A.P.).—Philadelphia and not New York was the destination of the German airplane Bremen, Hollingshead N. Taylor, chairman of the aeronautic committee of the chamber of commerce, said tonight. Mr. Taylor said that he had received word more than a week ago from Baron von Huenefeld, commander of the flight, that the Bremen would attempt to reach Philadelphia on her hop from Ireland in an effort to win the award of $25,000 offered by the Evening Bulletin for the first crossing of the North Atlantic from Europe to Philadelphia. Taylor is in charge of the award.

LEADERS IN GERMANY AND WILHELM HAPPY

Former Kaiser's Colors Are Carried Across Ocean by the Bremen.

Berlin, April 14 (A.P.).—President Von Hindenburg today cabled congratulations for the Bremen fliers. The message read: "Hearty congratulations to the bold ocean fliers on their fine success." Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresemann and Minister of Communications Kock also cabled felicitations. Chancellor Marx emphasized that the fliers were harbingers of good will from Germany to the American people.

Doorn, Holland, April 14 (A.P.).—The former German emperor, in exile in Holland, has telegraphed congratulations to the Bremen's fliers, who carried with them the colors of Imperial Germany.

The former kaiser characterizes their achievement as "an intrepid feat," and congratulates the men who have just crossed the Atlantic on the progress of German aviation techniques, "which, despite all attempts to throttle the country's aviation, managed to build a plane that helped to attain this great success."

4 WOMEN AND A MAN LOSE LIVES IN FIRE

Others Leap Into Nets at Winnipeg as Flames Reach Windows.

Winnipeg, Manitobia, April 14 (A.P.).—Five dead, four women and a man, a dozen injured, with many others overcome by smoke, was the toll of a fire which swept the Casa Loma, a combined apartment and business block here this afternoon.

Two of the women succumbed in the hospital after being rescued from the burning structure, three bodies were found on the floor of apartment rooms.

So suddenly did the flames gain headway that all avenues of escape were cut off in a few minutes.

When firemen reached the place a number of women had climbed out to the ledges of windows. Fire nets were quickly spread and two women jumped as flames began to lick the window frames. One of the women struck a projecting ledge and suffered a broken leg and other injuries.

KIN OF TRANSATLANTIC FLIER

RESCUE OF FLIERS FROM ISLE MAY REQUIRE SEVERAL DAYS

from New York. They had flown approximately 2,200 miles from Baldonnel Field, Dublin.

The real story of this glamorous flight will in all probability throw some light on the fate of those other aviators—five men and two women—who failed where these three succeeded, in a westbound North Atlantic hop.

Even the meager reports that thus far have reached here tell a romantic story of danger overcome in the face of overwhelming odds.

The Bremen, dispatches from the Point Amour station say, circled in a fog for four hours over Belle Isle Strait before the aviators decided to land on the island.

They brought the Bremen down on a little frozen lake, after Capt. Koehl, a famous pilot, had maneuvered it into position for the dangerous landing. A light snow was falling, W. F. Barrett, the Point Amour operator, radioed today, and the fourteen men who live on the bleak little island during the winter months, employes of a fishery, having been attracted by the motor's throbs, stood aghast as the silver-gray monoplane swooped down through the pelting flakes.

In Good Physical Condition.

Despite their ordeal over the north Atlantic, the members of the German-Irish crew of the Bremen are reported in excellent condition physically. It was conceded by John Schoeder, general agent in New York of the North German Lloyd Line, that the tug Montcalm has the best chance of first reaching the stranded men, although several more planes undoubtedly will start as soon as the weather clears.

First word from the fliers themselves was sent by Fitzmaurice, a tall, attractive young man, whose bravery is a tradition in his own country, who walked three miles across the ice to a small station where a message could be relayed to Point Amour.

Fitzmaurice, it became known today, contributed another anecdote to the tales of careless disregard for danger told of the soldiers of his race. Just before he took off on the Bremen he gave an interview to newspaper friends, in which he said he had little or no confidence in the success of the venture.

"What is needed for a flight of this sort is a three-motored plane, capable of carrying 60 hours of gasoline," he said. "We have neither, and I don't think we have a sporting chance."

Miss Junkers Not to Fly.

Fraulein Hertha Junkers, daughter of the designer of the Bremen, was ready at Mitchel Field, L. I., today to hop off with her pilot in the F-13 to attempt the rescue of her compatriots, but the project was given up as hopeless when late weather reports arrived.

Officers of the North German Lloyd Line were reported tonight as believing the fliers will repair their own machine and proceed to Long Island unaided.

If the fliers are taken off by the Montcalm, they may be landed at a Canadian port, probably North Sidney, and taken to New York via plane.

Another possibility is that the three men may decide to essay the trip to Quebec by dog sled, a journey that would take at least four days, and then fly to New York.

A welcome such as New York City has given only to two persons—Col. Lindbergh and Gen. Pershing—awaits the trio who blazed the sky-path westward from Europe.

Praise for German Grit.

German-American and Irish-American societies will join hands with the city government and the general public to pay full homage to the three, and already they have received hundreds of congratulatory messages from city and State officials.

The utter daring of the men who braved the elements to beat back along the Lindbergh trail, has trapped the imagination of America and the rest of the civilized world, and German grit received more praise on this side of the Atlantic than was awarded since the brave little Capt. Koenig and his submarine Deutschland, after running the British blockade in 1916, popped its periscope out of Baltimore harbor.

Some Fuel Left in Plane, Quebec Messages Indicate

Quebec, April 14 (A.P.).—Brief messages today indicated that the marooned transatlantic monoplane Bremen may have saved enough fuel so that it can continue its flight, if necessary repairs can be made with what few tools are available on Greenly Island in the Straits of Belle Isle.

At first it was believed that a forced landing on the tiny island had been necessitated by exhaustion of the fuel supply, but fragmentary reports today led to the belief that the Bremen came down chiefly because the pilots gave up hope of establishing their position in the dense fog through which they wandered for hours.

If this is indeed the fact, and if repairs can be made, only enough fuel would be necesary to fly to Port Saunders, 50 miles away, only six or eight gallons, where a supply sufficient to continue to New York, could be obtained. Only regular commercial gasoline is available at Port Saunders, but it was believed that the Bremen engine could be adjusted to use this instead of the special fuel it burned on its ocean flight.

In the meantime, while the fliers were preparing to get out from their island prison, plans were under way from the outside to get in to them. Because of the nature of the ice pack surrounding the island and separating it from the mainland it was believed to be accessible to planes only if they were equipped with skis.

The first plane of this type left Murray Bay, Quebec, today piloted by Dr. Louis Cuisinier, and was expected to reach the island during the night, leaving again tomorrow with the transatlantic fliers if they were willing to leave their own ship behind for the time being. Another plane was to start for the island in the morning.

These planes are equipped with 420-horsepower engines and are capable of a speed of 160 miles an hour. They are in the transcontinental mail service.

Closely Packed Ice Fought By the Steamer Montcalm

Sydney, N. S., April 14.—First direct word from the ice breaker Montcalm, on the way to rescue the stranded Bremen fliers, was received here today.

In terse phrases of the sea, the dramatic story of how the Montcalm is skirting treacherous Arctic ice 274 miles from Greenly Island, was told:

"Very heavy, close-packed ice is visible in all directions as far as the eye can see," the report said.

"At 4 p. m. the Montcalm was latitude 48 degrees 31 minutes north, longitude 61 degrees 37 minutes west."

This position is 274 miles from Greenly Island, where the fliers are marooned, and 44 miles south of the eastern tip of Anticosti Island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

"We consider excellent progress has been made so far," the report added.

That progress is speedy, considering conditions, is indicated by the fact that the Montcalm left her station in the Gulf of St. Lawrence at 6 a. m. today.

"It is extremely uncertain when the Montcalm will be able to arrive at her destination," the report concluded. At the present rate of progress, it is unlikely that the Montcalm will reach Greenly Island until late Monday or early Tuesday, even without accident.

The fate of the rescue expedition rests in the hands of the courageous Capt. Mercier, commandant of the Montcalm, and veteran pilot of ice breakers in these hazardous waters. He believes that by keeping well on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence he can skirt the impregnable Arctic ice, a bulwark from 5 to 15 feet thick at this season.

Night Without Crime Hailed in Mexico City

Mexico City, April 14 (A.P.).—The biggest news in the world today, in the judgment of the newspaper El Sol, was the fact that nobody was waylaid in Mexico City on Friday night. The paper came out this afternoon with a front page, eight-column, double-deck, black-faced streamer headline which said:

"For the first time in many years we have in Mexico City one night without robberies or crimes."

IRISH SEE A FUTURE FOR THEIR COUNTRY IN ATLANTIC FLYING

Spirited Bidding for Rights Already Under Way, Due to Strategical Position.

FOOTING FOR GERMANY IN COMPETITION SEEN

Dublin, April 14 (A.P.).—With Col. James Fitzmaurice and his German comrades of the monoplane Bremen safe on Greenly Island, Ireland today began to consider the results of the transatlantic flight.

"Another bond has been created between Ireland and America and the achievement will do much to develop airmindedness in this country," said Col. Charles Russell, former chief of the Irish Free State Air Corps, to the Associated Press.

It was learned that already plans are in the making for an "all-Irish flight" in 1928, but it also was intimated that sanction for any such attempt was not likely.

Never Again, Says Wife.

"Fitz won't do any more such stunts if I can help it," the weary but happy little wife of the Irish flier said at Baldonnel. "He has wanted to fly the Atlantic for ten years. I rejoice at his success, but I hope he will not do it again."

One possible result of the flight is a German-Irish entente of the air. In some circles here the German shipping interests who were interested in the Bremen with Baron von Huenfeld are considered to have executed a stroke of genius by inviting an Irishman to participate in the venture. These circles say that the success of the long hop may enable German interests to obtain an air footing in the Free State.

A number of nations have been doing some spirited bidding for this, because of the island's geographical position. Every month the Saorstat government receives new offers for projects by aviation companies or different countries, including America. Some of these ask only landing-field facilities when transatlantic routes are established. Other promoters try to get subsidies from the Free State government.

Germany Interested Keenly.

Germany has been keenly interested in the development of Ireland as an aviation center. One company proposed to establish a regular service by flying boats across the Irish Sea between Ireland and England, but it is believed that the Saorstat is more likely to grant to its own aviators a monopoly on the development of air routes so close to home. No hindrance would be placed on transatlantic aviation by such a policy.

Receipt at Baldonnal this afternoon of a message directly from Col. Fitzmaurice recalled to his close friends the long struggle he went through to realize his ambition of having an Irish airman make the first westward crossing of the Atlantic. Five years ago another Irish aviator planned the westward flight in a three-engined plane, but the Free State government disapproved the scheme.

Col. Fitzmaurice, himself, made the attempt last year with McIntosh, and later planned for a flight of his own, which was to be financed by John McCormack, the Irish tenor. Again the government withheld approval.

Threatened to Resign.

There were even great obstacles for Fitzmaurice to overcome when Baron von Huenefeld extended the invitation to help pilot the Bremen. The Free State authorities declined to grant him leave of absence until they became convinced that if approval was again withheld, Fitzmaurice would resign his commission at a moment's notice, jump into the cockpit and fly with the baron and Capt. Hermann Koehl.

Besides this official hurdle, Fitzmaurice had to resist the arguments of Irish aviation experts and personal friends who pounded at him with every possible bit of information as to the risk of attempting the crossing at this time of year.

All this talk failed to budge Fitzmaurice, who staked his life and his ambition on the whirring propeller and single powerful motor of the Bremen.

Advised to Keep North.

It is believed at Baldonnel that the success of the fliers in reaching the North American Continent was largely due to the pilots following of advice that was impressed upon them for hours before the start, to "rudder to north" persistently if, after 24 hours, no land was in sight.

Irish aviation authorities think that some, if not all, of the previous westward flights failed because the pilots followed the southerly course and flew parallel to the receding American coastline with no chance of striking land for thousands of miles.

Two German mechanics, who were here to assist in preparing the Bremen, tonight were arranging to take the first boat for America.

Commandant Fitzmaurice will be promoted to colonel in the Saorstate Army for his part in the flight, the Associated Press learned today from a responsible source.

His Parentss Overjoyed.

Michael Fitzmaurice, father of the Irish aviator who helped pilot the Bremen, brimmed over with delight today because of his son's feat.

"It has been a very trying and anxious time since the start of the flight," he said. "But I was as confident as any man could be in the circumstances that they would reach the other side."

The commandant's mother could not restrain her tears when she heard the glad news.

"Thank God, they have arrived," she exclaimed. "My boy was always a brave lad."

Wrestler Accuses His Wife of Assault

Glendale, Calif., April 14 (A.P.).—Jackie Laverne, alias Jacqueline Montana, who says she is Mrs. Louis Montana, wife of "Bull" Montana, film actor and former wrestler, was in jail here today on a charge of battery sworn out by Montana.

Police said the wrestling actor, who weighs 180 pounds, told them his wife had assaulted him with a high-heeled slipper. "Bull's" face bore many scratches. Mrs. Montana has a black eye.

The actor maintained that the woman is his housekeeper, not his wife.

AT THE CHESS TABLE

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER.

Arrangements for the coming cable match between the cities of London and Washington are now well under way. Readers will remember that in November of 1927, shortly after New York had been defeated by the Londoners by a 4-to-2 score, Norman T. Whitaker, of this city, issued a challenge to the London Chess League for the recovery of the Insull trophy. The conditions of the match which have just been drawn up and officially accepted by both Whitaker and G. R. Hardcastle, secretary of the London Chess League, contain the essential details relative to the match. The signed agreement reads as follows:

"1. The match shall be played by teams of six a side.

"2. The players shall be players of Washington, D. C., U. S. A., and players of the City of London, England.

"3. In Washington the match will be played under the auspices and direction of Mr. Norman T. Whitaker, who agrees to pay the cable charges from Washington to London, and in London the match will be played under the auspices and direction of the London Chess League, which agrees to pay the cables charges from London to Washington.

"The match shall be played on Saturday, 10th November, 1928, beginning at 9 o'clock a. m., Eastern standard time of America (2 o'clock p. m., London, England, time), and shall continue until 7 o'clock p. m., Eastern standard time of America (12 o'clock, midnight, London, England, time), unless completed before that time.

"5. Games unfinished at the close of play shall be adjudicated upon by an adjudicator or adjudicators to be appointed by the Federation Internationale des Echecs.

"6. Play shall be adjourned for one hour at 2 o'clock p. m., Eastern standard time of America (7 o'clock, London, England, time), when the positions of all games in progress and the times as shown by the players' clocks shall be registered and delivered to the umpire, together with a sealed move by player whose turn it is to move, and on resumption of play at 3 o'clock p. m., Eastern standard time of America (8 o'clock p. m., London, England, time), each position shall be set up and verified, the sealed move disclosed, and the clocks adjusted and restarted.

"7. Each player shall make not less than 20 moves in one hour, not less than 40 moves in two hours, and so on.

"8. The laws of chess as compiled for and published by the British Chess Federation in 1924 shall govern the match, with the exception of paragraph 45 (forty-five), it being agreed that should any dispute arise it shall be referred to the executive committee of the Federation Internationale des Echecs instead of to that of the British Chess Federation.

"9. The Kuhns Cable code shall be the cable code used in the match.

"10. The toss shall be made immediately before the match by London. The boards having en numbered consecutively A, E, I, O., U, Y; if heads turn up then London shall have the move on boards A, I, U, and Washington on boards E, O, Y; if tails turn up then Washington shall have the move on boards A, I, U, and London on boards E, O, Y. London will cable the result of the toss and also its team in the order of play. Washington will then cable its team in the order of play.

"11. The moves shall be transmitted by the Western Union Telegraph Co."

The date picked for play was chosen in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the armistice, to further friendly feeling between the two great nations. The Londoners will play at the rooms of the Royal Automobile Club, from where they defeated Chicago in 1926 and New York in 1927. Strangely enough, all these matches took place in November, and the British won both by 4-to-2 scores. Should they succeed in winning from Washington they will retain permanent possession of the Insull trophy, which is to belong to the city winning three consecutive cable matches. The local headquarters for play have not yet been decided upon and Mr. Whitaker announces that he is open to receive bids. He also informs us that five players who are expected to participate in the match are A. W. Fox, Stasch Mlotkowski, N. S. Perkins, I. S. Turover and N. T. Whitaker, for Washington. The Londoners have given no inkling regarding their probable line-up. H. S. Kuhns, president of the National Chess Federation of America, will officiate on this side in the capacity of London umpire, while the Hon. H. A. Carson, chess editor of the London Evening News, will serve a similar role at London for Washington.

Notes.

The club championship tournament at the Capital City Chess Club virtually came to its close when Knapp defeated Sullivan and thereby succeeded in tying Perkins for first honors. Both the leaders finished with a 9½—1½ score. Perkins' minus scores consisted of three drawn games. He was the only entrant to go through his schedule without a single loss. Knapp, on the other hand, drew one game and lost another to Perkins. The two leaders are now playing a match of two games up, draws not counting, to determine the titular honors for the coming year.

J. W. Byler writes up to the effect that we were mistaken in assuming that the A. Y. Hesse-Perry game, published last Sunday, was the shortest in the tourney. He sends up his partie with W. M. Sullivan, which was finished in two moves less. The score appears elsewhere. However, to settle matters Carl A. Hesse stepped out and claimed the honor of winning the shortest game when he last week defeated Roberts in their game which remained from round ten. This game went only 14 moves as against 15 moves in the Byler-Sullivan contest. All three gamelets are little gems well worth replaying. The younger Hesse still has a game to play with Perry, which will officially close the tourney and the final standing will be published when its result is known.

A. Y. Hesse has resigned as chairman of the chess committee of the local club, owing to ill health. His office, in which he served in most admirable style, has been turned back once more to C. C. Bettinger, Hesse's predecessor. The new chairman announces that a knock-out Kriegspiel tournament, similar to those held the past two summers, will soon get under way. It is also planned to have a handicap skittle tournament, open to all club members, to while away the torrid months. Entrants are requested to post their names on the club bulletin board at their earliest convenience.

N. T. Whitaker, local master and United States tournament champion, will appear in Providence, R. I., on April 21, when he will entertain the New England brethren with his skill at simultaneous play. Early accounts in the Providence chess columns would indicate that they expect to welcome their visitor heartily.

Solution to Problem.

The author's intended key to No. 259, three-mover by John A. McIlvane, was B—KKt8. While this solves the problem, B—K6 will also serve as a key move. Among those sending in solutions were Jacob Frech, J. W. Harris, Harvey W. Wiley, jr.; Alexander Arons and J. V. Davies.

Jacob Frech writes, "Anent the class of intellectual labor required to solve problems 256, 257 and 258, all three are members of one species, viz: a species possessing the attribute of having a salient feature that unerringly leads to the key move or in 257 leads to what the author unsuccessfully intended to be the key move. When that salient feature in any member of the series is cognized by inspection, the solving of that problem is, in the words of Aristotle, an act of sagacity, viz: a certain happy extempore conjecture of the middle term. When you write your book on chess you can scientifically illustrate by those three problems in the universal language of chess how nature causes that highest degree of illative or intellectual power, designated sagacity, to operate. Possibly because of lack of space the salient features of 257 was not published.

"Today's problem, 259, can generate about 6,000,000 series and does not present an obtrusively salient feature. When sagacity does not come to one's aid in any problem whatever, then plodding, scientific record method is a slower but equally sure substitute for sagacity. After long inspection, failing to find a salient feature, I tried every possible move of the K and Q without success next in order of importance of pieces came the KB's nine possible moves. I soon found B—Kt8 creating many possible three-move mates, and erroneously thought that it would prove to be the key, but soon discovered that B—K6 is the key.

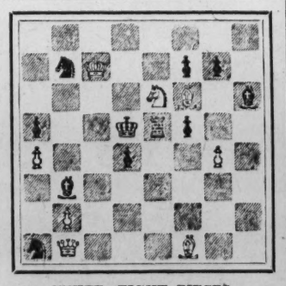

"After problem 259 is solved, it is easy to see how a chess genius might have, by mere inspection, discovered signs of a salient feature, viz: That white's QB is blocked by his fellow Kt who protects KB who is needed on the longer of the diagnonals on which he stands, but is not needed on the square he is occupying, for he thereby renders powerless two important pieces: the Kt that is protecting him and the other B that is blocked by that Kt. Hence the KB should move along the longer diagonal and the question then only is, to what square? The author has placed a black R on the KB's shorter diagonal to tempt the unwary solver to move the Kt from the longer diagonal by cagtuching the R and thus miss the key. By writing this for your instructive column, I am actuated by the sole motive of trying to do for students of logic and of chess what I wish others had done for me in my earlier years, when I was a youth of only 20, or 60 or 70 years of age." And later, "My first conclusion that B—Kt8 is not also a key move was based on an obsession that could be removed only by a scientific effort to reverify the premises of that conclusion."

Alexander Arons comments, "This may be an easy one, but I had a tough time with it. My solution of problem No. 259 is B-K6." J. W. Harris writes, "This is a humdinger! It took me several hours to solve it. Is solved by B—KKt8." Harvey W. Wiley submits B—K6 as the key and writes, "Though not difficult, the problem is economically constructed, and there are at least eight different variations. There are numerous duals, however, and after the move of the black knight, white can mate in three different ways."

Today's offering is a three-mover, composed by Harvey W. Wiley, jr. Solvers are requested to make comments, criticisms, or suggestions.

PHI GAMMA DELTAS BUY HEADQUARTERS SITE IN WASHINGTON

$295,000 Temple to Be Located at Sixteenth and U Streets Intersection.

ARCHITECT OF MASONIC MEMORIAL DREW PLANS

Building to Be First National Fraternity Structure in the Capital.

The Phi Gamma Delta college fraternity's plan to build a $295,000 international headquarters temple in the Capitol took definite shape yesterday with the announcement that the fraternity had purchased a triangular site for the building at the southwest corner of the juncture of Sixteenth and U streets and New Hampshire avenue northwest. President Coolidge and his son John are Amherst initiates of the fraternity.

With the announcement of the land purchase it also was revealed that an architect of note, Harvey Wiley Corbett, of New York, will have charge of the construction. Corbett, who is an alumnus of the University of California Chapter of the fraternity, drew the plans for the George Washington Masonic Memorial at Alexandria and also is architect for the Masonic Temple which will be built on Temple Heights on Connecticut avenue.

Corbett's design calls for a three-story building of Grecian design with Ionian columns rising two stories. George F. Snyder, Washington attorney and international secretary of the fraternity, who made the announcement of the project, said that the temple will be constructed either of marble or limestone.

Offices on First Floor.

On the first floor, Snyder said, will be the offices of the fraternity, where the affairs of 69 undergraduate chapters and more than 100 alumni associations will be cared for. The undergraduate chapters are located in universities and colleges throughout the United States and in Canada. The alumni associations hold forth in cities in all corners of the United States and in Europe, Asia and Africa, wherever Fijis—as Snyder says the fraternity's members call themselves—can be found.

On the second floor will be a museum for memorabilia which has been collected by the fraternity since its founding in 1848 at what was then Washington College. The institution is now Washington and Jefferson, located at Washington, Pa. On the second floor also will be a library, a board room and an assembly hall.

Filing and archives rooms will be found on the third floor, with additional storage space in the basement.

For the last five years the fraternity has had its headquarters here, now being located in the Otis Building, on [illegible] street northwest, and when the fraternity met recently in national convention at West Baden, Ind., it was voted that the fraternity should select Washington for a permanent headquarters. The convention appropriated $20,000 for purchase of the site on Sixteenth street.

First Permanent Temple.

Snyder said that in selecting Washington for its temple—the first permanent headquarters to be built by any fraternity—Phi Gamma Delta was moved by the same idealism that prompted the Episcopalians to construct a cathedral here.

"Washington is the natural place for any national memorial," he said. "The restrictions put on buildings makes it possible for an organization to build an imposing structure and have it surrounded by buildings that do not detract from its appearance. The city is the mecca of tourists, and many Fijis are coming here daily. We want to have a building as imposing as our reputation." Snyder forecast the day when other fraternities would build here. "When we complete this project the others will follow," he said. "In some quarters we are being laughed at for this attempt, just as we were laughed at by a few who said it would be impossible for us to build a nine-story graduate clubhouse in New York. We built the New York clubhouse in the heart of the club district and today there are hundreds of Fijis living, entertaining and loafing there."

Members Are Prominent.

Many members of Phi Gamma Delta have been prominent in national life here, Snyder said. He named, besides Coolidge, former Vice President Charles Warren Fairbanks, who also served a term as president of the fraternity; former Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, former Senator Zebulon Vance, of North Carolina; Lew Wallace, former Ambassador to Turkey; former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, who was one time president of the fraternity and is now one of its trustees, and former Postmaster General Albert S. Burleson.

There are five men in the House of Representatives who still wear the diamond-shaped pin of their college days. Representative Adam Wyant and Milton Shreve, of Pennsylvania; John McSweeny, Ohio; Homer W. Hall, Illinois, and Charles Brand, Ohio.

The $295,000 temple project, Snyder said, will be allocated as follows: $20,000 for the site, $150,000 for endowment and $125,000 for actual construction, this last figure to run much higher if the temple is built of marble.

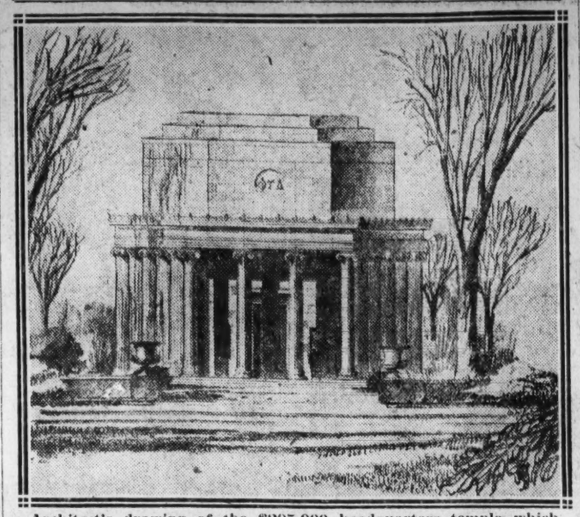

Site Paid For.

The fraternity already has the endowment provided for in the wills of wealthy members, and the site paid for. It is conducting a campaign among its 25,000 members for construction funds.

The alumni association meets every Thursday at the University Club for luncheon, where visiting members are welcomed.

Snyder, who has been international secretary of the fraternity since 1921, is an alumnus of the University of Pennsylvania Chapter. Another Washingtonian, Cecil J. Wilkerson, an alumnus of the Ohio Wesleyan Chapter, is executive secretary of the fraternity and editor of its monthly magazine. Bishop William F. McDowell, of 2107 Wyoming avenue, resident bishop of the Methodist Church, was the Fiji who founded the magazine, and was its editor for many years.

HISTORIES OF CAPITAL PLACED IN NEW HOME

The local history collection of the Public Library, known as the Washingtoniana Division, which includes 2,500 books and pamphlets, in addition to files of Washington newspapers, city directories, maps, clippings and scrapbooks, will be opened to readers tomorrow in its new quarters.

Acquisition of this material was begun in 1905 by Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian. Miss Katherine Patten is now curator of the collection which has grown to such an extent under her care that new quarters for the collection were deemed necessary. An attractive room with comfortable tables and chairs has been provided on the second floor lobby of the library building on Mount Vernon Square northwest.

The hours will be from 9 a. m. until 4 p. m. each week day, save Thursday, when the collection may be viewed until 9 p. m. The range of the collected material is from early accounts of settlers to matters of present-day concern. L'Enfant plans for the city, inaugural balls, White House social life, zoning, suffrage, street railways and the history of the famed Japanese cherry trees are included in the numerous subjects covered in the collection.

MERGER PACT FACES FIGHT IN CONGRESS

At the same time Zihlman sees no reason why the hearings should be extended. The Public Utilities Commission, he pointed out yesterday, has studied the project from every angle, and both Senate and House committees now have received a transcript of the testimony given before the commission.

"I shouldn't think it would be necessary to go over all the ground covered by the utilities commission," Zihlman said. "My idea would be to call the members of the commission, hear what they have to say, and then call the citizens who are opposed to the merger. I am in favor of giving these latter a full and complete hearing.

"Inasmuch as we have a record of the testimony given by the traction people, I shouldn't think it would be necessary to call them."

Senator Capper agreed with Zihlman that the merger plan should be studied thoroughly. The matter, he said, is one of the most important from a District standpoint that has come before Congress in a number of years.

"While I am not going to try and delay action on the bill," he said, "I am going to see that it is properly studied. There must be no hasty action. I want to give the people here ample opportunity to express their views on the project."

Senator Capper said that there was some doubt as to whether a merger bill could be passed at this session. He said he based this belief on expression that had come from several of his colleagues.

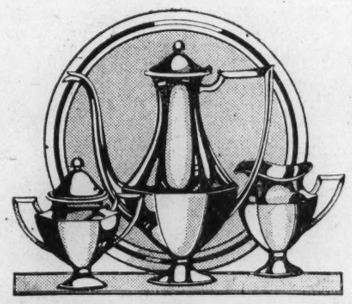

It is known that there are several members of the Senate and of the House, too, for that matter, who are ready to make a fight against the merger bill in its present form.

In submitting the bill to Congress yesterday, the Public Utilities Commission completed a task that was begun October 31, when Harley P. Wilson, principal owner of the Washington Transit Co., submitted the outline of a merger plan.

Later on this outline was used as the basis of an agreement which was subscribed to by the directors and stockholders of the transit companies. The Public Utilities Commission approved the plan after modifying it.

In a letter accompanying a draft of the bill yesterday, the commission reviewed the history of the merger agreement and transmitted the correspondence between the District Commissioners and the Bureau of the Budget relative to a provision in the bill transferring from the traction companies to the taxpayers of the District the cost and maintenance of paving between car tracks and the payment of salaries to crossing policemen.

A Benefactor

A public benefactor is one who helps people to be happy. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce.

It is impossible to be happy if you are suffering—in pain or distress—ill. To restore health and strength to ailing people was Dr. Pierce's mission. During his lifetime, he gave to the world a priceless herbal remedy in his Favorite Prescription, for restoring the health of weak, nervous, overworked women, and thereby increasing happiness in the home.

As a skilled physician, an honored citizen, Dr. Pierce was known far and near for integrity and fair dealing. His phenomenal success was due to the unquestioned purity of his medicines.

Women in every walk of life today say Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has relieved them of nervousness, weakness and kindred ills. It is a reliable medicine made from roots and herbs, sold by druggists, in both fluid and tablets. Send 10c for trial pkg. tablets to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Wilbur to Speak Before Iowa Society

Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy, will address the Iowa Society Thursday evening at its spring meeting in the Willard Hotel. Wilbur is a native of Iowa and the affair will be in the nature of a reception to him and Mrs. Wilbur. Members of the Iowa delegation in Congress will attend and Representative Woodrum, of Virginia, will sing.

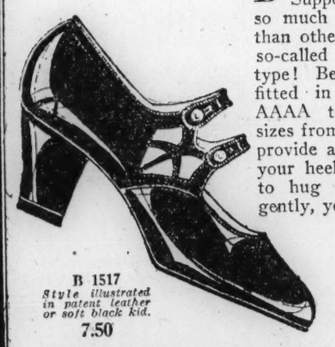

The meeting will begin at 8:45 o'clock and dancing, which will follow the program, will continue until midnight.

ROW OVER SIDING AT TAKOMA PARK HAS DIVIDED TOWN

Business Men and Other Citizens So Bitter Suits for Libel Loom.

MATTER TO BE FOUGHT AT MEETING OF COUNCIL

Railroad May Exercise Right of Eminent Domain and Take Whole Park.

Gathering momentum as it goes along, the controversy in Takoma Park, Md., as to whether the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co.'s siding and loading platform at North Takoma is to be or not to be, has reached the degree of dissension where neighbors are verbally battling neighbors, where business men are fighting to keep politics out of the discussions, where politicians are seeking to inject politics into the matter, and where libel suits are threatened.

The railroad siding is not very long, the loading platform is not more than 12 feet wide and 16 feet long, the public park upon which both encroach a few feet is far from being a thing of beauty and is not more than 30 feet wide and 300 feet long. It lies alongside the railroad's right of way. It is cinder covered, grassless and treeless.

Members of the town's officialdom said yesterday that the siding and platform must be done away with. They take their position on strictly legal grounds regardless of the utilitarian uses the siding and platform may be put to. They claim that, under the law, they can not do otherwise than preserve the ground for park purposes for which it was dedicated to the town. They say it would be just as legal to allow a grocery store or any other business to occupy it.

Damage Suit Threatened.

So heated has the controversy become that J. Bond Smith, attorney for the town council, in a public announcement, has demanded that a newspaper editor of the town retract certain statements he has made concerning him, or face a suit for damages.

The Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce, of which Smith is a charter member, is said to be 100 per cent against him in his efforts to have the siding and platform removed. Business men of the town are said to be 100 per cent in favor of retaining the railroad on the property. They claim to be looking ahead to the time when Takoma Park will become a community of such importance that enlarged railroad facilities will be not only desirable but a positive necessity. They point to the peculiar layout of the town, which they say does not permit of expansion of trackage and switching facilities except at prohibitive costs that would arise from condemnation of valuable residential properties.

There is a strong feeling among the business men that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Co., in event the town council, at its meeting tomorrow night, decides to abolish the North Takoma siding and loading platform, will exercise its right of eminent domain over the entire strip of ground now dedicated for park purposes, and not used for anything except by trucks going to and from the loading platform. They claim the ground is unsuited for other purposes than a small railroad switch yard, and if so used, would accommodate the town's needs for years to come.

The town officials last week caused "no trespass" signs to be erected on the park, which prevents trucks and other vehicles from using it. This device, it is said, actually prevents the railroad company from using the siding and platform, since it will not unload freight that can not be tucked away.

Battle Due Before Council.

The Takoma Chamber of Commerce and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. will undoubtedly be represented by their attorneys at the town council meeting tomorrow night. In event the railroad company loses the fight, it is very probable it will immediately institute such suits at law as will enable it to prevent the order of the town council being carried out.

The town's attorney, J. Bond Smith, will carry the burden of the fight for the town council, supported by owners of residences that occupy land across the street from the park. All of these want the siding and platform removed, although it is said they have lived there many years and purchased their residences with the knowledge that the siding and platform were already there.

The streets adjacent to the railroad company's track were zoned as residential by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission and can not be used for any other purpose. The commission was requested a few weeks ago to re-zone this territory as commercial by the owners of the residences, but it refused to do so. To have done so would have removed some of the objections that have been made to the siding and platform, it was said at the time.

When the town council meets tomorrow night, it is believed the largest crowd that ever attended such a meeting will be there.

The political angle of the controversy is reflected from the approaching election on Monday, May 7, when a mayor and three councilmen will be chosen. A nonpartisan primary will be held on Monday, April 30. Although none of them will say he is a candidate for reelection, none will deny that he will serve if reelected. Mayor Ben G. Davis said he would not announce himself as an active candidate, but that he would accept the honor of the post. Councilmen E. V. Crittenden, M. D. Finch and Capt. Charles V. Johnson, whose terms expire, will undoubtedly be on the lists for renomination and reelection. It is thought all of them will serve if they are successful at the polls.

Just what effect the decision of the mayor and council may make tomorrow night on the siding and platform controversy will have upon the nomination or election of the four named is the subject of speculation by many who have taken sides in the matter. There will be approximately 1,400 voters who will decide it.

CAMPAIGN TO OBTAIN $350,000 POSTPONED

Salvation Army Changes Date to May 4, Because of Better Conditions Then.

LEGION TO GIVE HELP

The opening date of the Salvation Army's campaign for $350,000 to help finance its $500,000 building project on the southwest corner of Sixth and E streets has been postponed from April 20 to May 4, in order to better meet the plans of those to be in charge, it was announced yesterday. The campaign will continue through May 14.

The new date was decided upon at a conference after it was pointed out that the officials would be better able to devote their time toward raising funds next month than they would during the original period named.

Further detailed plans are to be discussed at a meeting of the advisory board, headed by Rudolph Jose, and members of the campaign committee, headed by Col. Robert N. Harper, in the Mayflower Hotel Tuesday night at 7 o'clock.

The campaign for funds was unanimously indorsed at a special convention meeting of the District of Columbia department of the American Legion in the Interior Department Building Thursday night.

The action by the legion was taken, as was stated in the resolution, in view of the aid given men in the military service by the Salvation Army during the World War as well as because of the aid given service men or former service men, in need, at any time.

The resolution was introduced by William F. Franklin, of the Costello Post and copies of it were ordered sent to Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan, chairman of team organization for the campaign.

LOWDEN SEES FATE OF G.O.P. HANGING UPON FARM RELIEF

Issue, He Says, Is Whether Party Will Desert the Farmer for Industry.

DOOM OF PROTECTION SURE IN THAT CASE

Solution of Farm Problem Is Necessary to Civilization, Candidate Adds.

Special to The Washington Post.

Chicago, April 14.—Frank O. Lowden, in an interview today, discussed the major question of policy which the Republican party leaders must decide at the Kansas City convention next June.

This is, of course, in his opinion, the agrarian issue, which has been simmering deep within the ranks of the party since the days of McKinley, now brought to its acid test in the theory of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill.

That it will be a fateful decision for the party is the belief of Mr. Lowden, who, without having made a campaign in any sense, has been pressed into the leadership of the agrarian forces of the West and has received already the pledges of about 160 delegates to the national convention. In the East, the talk is all for Hoover. In the middle West it is for Lowden. What this means, he thinks, is something like this:

"The Republican party is facing a crisis. The West knows it and there are signs that some of the Eastern leaders are awakening to it. The question is whether the Republican party, which has always been supported by the farmers, which had its origin among the farmers of the middle West, is now definitely going to desert them and put its future entirely in the hands of the commercial and industrial interests of the East.

Sees Protection Doomed.

"If they do this, the protective tariff, which the farmers gave to the industrial East, is doomed, and with it the old Republican party. The farmers demand, broadly speaking, that they be taken in under the protective tariff in some form, and if this demand is ignored they can not be expected to go on supporting the party.

"This is not the first time that the business interests of the East have become alienated from the farmer. Never before have these interests had such a dominating influence in the party policies.

"The party was formed among the free farmers of the North in Lincoln's day. It was the free soil West that sent the first antislavery men to Washington and provided the backbone of the new party. In 1858 Lincoln said that 'We have much of the plain old Democracy with us, while the old, exclusive silk-stocking Whiggery is against us.'

"In those days the farmers had plenty of new land and good markets. After the failure of their first campaign, the Republicans reached out and changed the alignment of old Bourbon Democratic Pennsylvania. In the convention of 1860 which nominated Lincoln they began the process of uniting the business and industrial interests with the farmers.

Times Changed Now.

"The farmers could afford to give the Eastern industrialists a protective tariff. Their platform called for duties that 'Would encourage the industrial interests of the whole country, that policy of national exchange which secures to the working man liberal wages, to agriculture remunerative prices and to the merchant and manufacturer an adequate reward.'

"Now the times have changed. They have changed slowly. The virgin, free land is gone. The American farmer can not compete with the farmer of the new countries in many things. He is calling on the interests which have been brought to wealth by this old policy to come to his aid now.

"The early Republican party passed such legislation as the farmers demanded, showing its true farmer outlook. The free homstead act was much more socialistic than anything proposed today. The Morrell land grant act which established agricultural colleges, was passed in Lincoln's day. Postal savings and rural free delivery were fought at a later day with the same arguments which are now being used against farm relief.

Asks Aid of Tariff.

"The farmer asks that the tariff protect him now. He has always made it the backbone of the party. The industrial centers, which have grown as a result of the prosperity of business, are usually Democratic, not Republican. The party can not do without the farmer support. I am not insisting upon any particular remedy. I only say that there is a farm problem of the greatest importance and that a solution must be found, if we would preserve our civilization."

Mr. Lowden observes with interest the drift of Tammany Hall membrs of Congress to the support of the McNary-Haugen bill. It accentuates the belief that he and his friends hold that the Republicans are facing a hard campaign.

Mr. Lowden's friends, who have brought him into this race much against his personal inclination, see in the Al Smith bid for farm support a menace that must not be overlooked. As it stands, they say, Smith is sure of wide support in the cities, East and West. Let the Republican party forsake the farmer, turn down the McNary-Haugen bill, nominate a man known to be in opposition to such relief measures, and they see the farmers going into the Democratic party or staying at home next November.

Police Drag Waters For Suicide Suspect

Cumberland, Md., April 14.—Police began dragging the Potomac River and Wills Creek, off Riverside Park, this afternoon for the body of a men believed to be Lawrence Starner, 33, drayman, of this city, who was reported to have committed suicide by jumping into the river.

A note on a coat found along the bank caused the search.

CENTER SPEAKER

ITTAMAR BEN AVI.

FAMED JEWISH PATRIOT WILL SPEAK AT CENTER

Ittamar Ben Avi, of Palestine, Legislator, to Make Homeland His Topic.

Ittamar Ben Avi, a member of the Jewish Assembly of Palestine, who gained fame during the World War for his political activities in behalf of the allied cause, will speak this afternoon at 2:30 at the Jewish Community Center. His subject is the "Rebirth of Judea." The lecture is public.

Ben Avi is touring the country in the interests of the Jewish Homeland Movement, of which he is one of the leading world figures. For his activities during the war he was imprisoned and sentenced to die, but succeeded in escaping prison a few hours before the time scheduled for the execution.

He came to America after the war to press the claims of the Jewish people at the conference on minority rights in Philadelphia and since then has been a delegate to all the World Zionist conventions.

Ben Avi is the son of Eliezer Ben Jehuda, who was responsible for the Hebrew language revival. Ben Avi, himself, is a distinguished linguist and editor of a daily Hebrew paper in Jerusalem. He is at present engaged in the latinization of the Hebrew alphabet.

He is appearing here under the auspices of Avukah, the student Zionist organization, which has chapters in the universities throughout the country. The local chapter of Avukah is arranging to debate the University of Pennsylvania chapter early next month.

UPHEAVAL IN ILLINOIS HAS WIDE REACTION

the meeting of the State committee and it was found that numerous New York delegates listed for Hoover had climbed back on the fence following the Illinois primary and wished to have themselves recorded as noncommittal. Thus it turned out that of the 47 New York delegates claimed for Hoover last week, not more than 30 were willing to declare their preference for him this week, two days after the Illinois primary.

Hilles 'Not Unfavorable."

It appears that within 24 hours after the Illinois primary word was passed around that the Lowden candidacy is not unfavorably regarded by National Committeeman Hilles and other New York leaders, who are cold toward Hoover. Before and after the State committee meeting there was much conferring of committeemen with Hilles, who maintained his position that the convention ought to draft President Coolidge or Charles Evans Hughes, but indicated that in default of such action he would not be opposed to a compromise on Lowden. In 1920, 45 New York delegates voted for Lowden.

But the Illinois primary result is not the only circumstance accouning for the serious consideration which the New York leaders now seem disposed to give to the Lowden candidacy. Another is the poor showing made by Hoover in the primaries of the corn belt. He got only 2 out of the 29 delegates in Iowa, 6 out of 27 in Minnesota, and 10 out of 39 in Missouri. Lowden got the rest. All of which suggests to the Republican leaders that there is a deep seated antagonism in the corn belt to Hoover's attitude on farm legislation and that Hoover, if nominated, could not be relied upon to carry the corn belt solidly in the election.

Nor have the Republican leaders failed to note the accessions to the strength of Gov. Al Smith in these supposedly bone dry mid Western States. They have seen Minnesota, North Dakota and Idaho instructing for Smith and they have seen Smith sweeping the Iowa and Illinois primaries and capturing even klan-ridden Oklahoma. And these phenomena suggest that the wetness and the religion of Al Smith may not after all prevent Smith from capturing the electoral votes of one or more of these corn belt States, in which Republican disaffection is rife.

G. O. P. Compromise Sought.

This situation is giving the Republican leaders concern. How to placate the middle West is their problem. They could do it by nominating Lowden but those Eastern leaders who are not averse to Lowden encounter the difficulty that he is the leading antiadministration candidate. The Lowden platform of farm relief has been vetoed once by the President and now seems headed for the same fate again.

Administration Republicans do not see how the party can write a platform pointing with pride to the record of the administration which record includes rejection of the McNary-Haugen bill, and at the same time nominate Frank Lowden to run on that platform.

To make Lowden available the Eastern leaders hold, the gulf between Lowden and Coolidge must be bridged. They see two ways of doing this and influential Republicans in this region who are friendly to Lowden already are at work on the proposition. In the first place, they are endeavoring to bring about a compromise on farm legislation between the President and the farm groups backing Lowden, in order that a veto may be averted and the whole farm relief issue removed from the preconvention contest. They are hopeful that both the President and the Lowden forces will make concessions in the interest of party harmony.

If the move for a compromise on farm legislation should fail, however, and the party should come to the convention with the thorn of this issue in its side the Easterners friendly to Lowden will try to devise a platform plank on farm relief on which both Lowden and Coolidge could stand. That would pave the way for the nomination of Lowden with the support of Eastern administration Republicans.

Grand Duke's Palace Yields Great Treasure

Detskoye (formerly Tzarskoye Selo), Russia, April 14 (A.P.).—Valuable treasure, consisting of a big diamond star, jewelry, platinum knives and forks, ancient silver jugs, watches and similar articles, has been discovered accidentally by workers repairing the place which formerly belonged to Grand Duke Vladimer and his wife, the Grand Duchess Marie Pavlovna. The treasure was found in a safe under a collection of ancient documents.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By ELISABETH E. POE.

THE biggest event of the current musical season is the Metropolitan Opera appearance in Washington this week, at whose performances the elite of the city, musically and socially, will head the large audiences to greet these incomparable musicians.

The repertoire will be "Norma" on Wednesday night in Italian; Thursday afternoon, "Boris Godunoff," in Italian; Saturday afternoon, "Romeo and Juliette," in French, and the concluding opera will be "Tanhaeuser," sung in German on Saturday night.

Among the notable prima donnas to be heard will be Lucrezia Bori, Feodor Challapin, Florence Easton, Rosa Ponselle, Ina Bourskaya, Lawrence Tibbett. The conductors will be Giuseppe Bamboschek, Vincenzo Bellezza and Louis Hasselmans.

Lovers of good music also are looking forward to the All Hallows Guild Concert at the Mayflower on Tuesday when Madame Yolande Mero, Hungarian pianist, and Madame Hulda Lashanska, soprano, will give a program. Distinguished women, headed by Mrs. Coolidge, have consented to serve as patronesses for this event and many boxes have been taken as well.

Madame Mero has a fine reputation as a pianist and Madame Lashanska was pupil of Marcella Sembrich. Madame Lashanska is mistress of the almost lost art of bel canto. During her concerts of the winter she was acclaimed by the critics.

Madame Mero's praises have been sung also by critics who have heard her during her American tours.

The program for the All Hollows Guild Concert will be as follows:

"Splagge Amate" (Gluck), "Mermaid's Song" (Haydn), "Ruhe Meine Seele," "Standchen" (Strauss), Mme. Lashanska; "Variations Op. 12," "Larghetto," "Scherzo C Sharp" (Chopin), Mme. Mero; "Over the Steppe" (Gretchaninoff), "Un Reve" (Grieg), "Depuis le jour (from "Louise") (Charpentier), Mme. Lashanska; "Clair de Lune," "Passepied" (Debussy); "Liebestraum," "Rhapsodie" (Liszt), Mme. Mero; "In Vergangenen Tagen," "Ich Hab' Dich Geliebat" (Yolande Mero)); "Winds of Night" (Watts), "To a Messenger" (La Forge), Mme. Lashanska. Miss Grace Marshall, accompanist.

The D. A. R. Congress this week will find in Eva Whitford Lovette, chairman for music, an interesting link that crosses the entire continent from this city to Texas, both in art and in the spirit of this national society of women, now assembled in the National Capital for the thirty-seventh Continental Congress. For Mrs. Lovette is one of Washington's eminent singers and teachers and also she will again, as she has for the past six years, represent the Agnes Woodson Chapter as member and delegate from Belton, Tex., as a Daughter of the American Revolution.

Eva Whitford Lovette will be soloist and choral director, as well as chairman for music. Other prominent singers, with one artist from the Metropolitan Opera of New York, will be heard, in addition to the music of the United States service bands, on every evening program of the sessions at Continental Memorial Hall.

Today at 11 a. m. for the special memorial service at Continental Memorial Hall a very significant choral program has been arranged by Mrs. Lovette. The music is as follows:

"The Kingdom of Our Gracious God," a chorale by Thomas S. Lovette, to be sung by the Lovette Chorale Club of sixteen women's vocies, Mrs. Lovette, director, with Mlle. Diane des Aulniers, of the Belgian Embassy, accompanist. Hymn "Lead Kindly Light," by audience, led by the choir; solo, "The Reaper," poem by Longfellow, music by Thomas S. Lovette, Jack Charlton Ward, mezzo-soprano, Mrs. Lovette, accompanist; chorus, "Going Home," from Dvorak's "New World Symphony;" "Taps" by Arthus S. Witcomb, bugler, United States Marine Band.

The guest solo artists, with the time of their singing, are as follows:

Monday evening, Phradie Wells, soprano, Metropolitan Opera, with Emilie Goetze at the piano.

Wednesday evening, Alice Paton, lyric coloratura soprano.

Thursday evening, Eva Whitford Lovette, mezzo-soprano, with George Dixon Thompson at the piano.

The United States service bands will play on the various programs. For the opening session, Monday forenoon, Mrs. Lovette will lead in the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner," accompanied by the United States Marine Band.

On Thursday evening Mrs. Lovette will sing the aria from Saint-Saens' opera, "Samson and Delila," "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," "Vergebliches Standchen" of Brahms, and "O Miss Hanna," by Deppen.

The singers of the Lovette Chorale Club include Mrs. Lulu Wood Vollands, president; Mrs. Elise Hobson Leonard, vice president; Beulah Burton Smith, secretary; Mrs. Louis Mintz, treasurer; Mrs. Kathleen Parrish Dietz, Mrs. Nellie Barber Brooks, Mrs. Reginald Bustin, Miss Eva M. Herron, Mrs. Ethel Lynn Fast, Mrs. Fay Bruce Swenson, Mrs. Nell Duree Norris, Mrs. Marietta Norton Brumbaugh, Miss Mary Bavan Blaksiee, Miss Anna L. Herron and Miss Emma Guschewsky. Miss Diane des Aulniers is accompanist.

Mr. Dore Walten, violoncellist, will contribute the musical portion of the program at the Arts Club this evening. He will play several groups, including "Les Stances," from "Lakme," by Delibes,; "Serenade," by Rimsky-Korsakow; "Berceuse," by Shumann, Lamento-Gabriel-Marie; "Andacht," by Popper, and a "Transcription of the Meistersinger," Wagner. Mr. Walten will be accompanied by Miss Florence E. Stonebraker.

The Women's City Club Chorus, under direction of Gertrude Lyons, will give two cantatas at their concert on April 23. The "Rose of Avontown," by Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, and "Sir Oluf," by Harriet Ware. Both of these American composers are well known for their delightful songs and other works which have appeared on many programs in Washington.

Mrs. Mary Ware Goldman, chairman for the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs' contest, announces that the contest will be held Saturday morning at 10:30 in the music room of the Wilson Normal Community Center, Eleventh and Harvard streets.

As this is the first junior contest that has been held in Washington and as it is limited to the membership of the Junior Federation, there will be few entrants this year. However, the public is cordially invited to attend.

Winners from this contest will go to Danville to compete on Monday, April 30, at 2:30 p. m., with the winners from Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

The one-night choral festival, to be held at Central Community Center on May 2, under the auspices of the Washington Church Music Council, gives promise of being an interesting musical event, since all the singers will be obtained from the local church choirs, men's clubs and women's clubs. Between 500 and 600 singers have promised to take part in the singing of the four anthems to be rendered. Five or six men's clubs, making over 150 voices will present a group of songs written for men's voices, and approximately the same number of womens' voices will be heard in another group of songs.

Dr. Daniel Protheroe, of Chicago, who will be the conductor for the evening, will give two lectures on singing and directing at the First Congregational Church, at 4:45 o'clock, on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons, May 1 and 2.

Mrs. Ruby Smith Stahl is chairman of the committee in charge of the festival.

Added to the names of Mrs. Coolidge as Vice President and Mrs. Dawes as patrons for the one-night choral festival, are the following:

Mrs. William Howard Taft, the Secretary of War, Mr. Dwight W. Davis, and Mrs. Davis; the Attorney General, Mr. John G. Sargent, and Mrs. Sargent; the Postmaster General, Mr. Harry S. New, and Mrs. New; the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Curtis D. Wilbur, and Mrs. Wilbur; the Secretary of Labor, Mr James J. Davis, and Mrs. Davis; the Speaker of the House of Representatives and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Commissioner Proctor L. Dougherty and Mrs. Dougherty and Commissioner W. B. Ladue and Mrs. Ladue.

The festival committee is composed of Mrs. Ruby Smith Stahl, chairman; Mrs. Charles G. McRoberts, Miss Imogene Ireland, Mr. Thomas Moss and Mr. Adolf Torovsky.

Augusta Lenska, the contralto of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, who will make a local appearance at the Jewish Community Center on Tuesday, was born in Oudtschoorn, Cape Colony, South Africa, of English parents of Russian extraction. She began her general education at Bedford College, London, and was destined for a medical career. But her talents decreed otherwise and she soon exchanged the study of anatomy for that of music. Her choice proved a wise one, for her debut in Germany immediately established her as a contralto of the first rank.

She has since then appeared in many European operatic houses and is now a leading member of the Chicago Opera Company. Her local appearance may be looked forward to as one of the most important concerts of the season.

The Easter music will be repeated at St. Patrick's Church today.

The twilight music hour at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets, this afternoon, will be in the fourth floor assembly room at 4:30 o'clock. The program will be given by Mrs. Grace Mooney Richards, soprano; Mr. David Armes, violinist, and Mrs. Elsie Jones Douglas will be the accompanist.

Lillian Howard Mann, mezzo contralto of the Peabody Institute and soloist in Emmanuel Church, Baltimore, Md., will be the guest artist appearing with the Davison Glee Club in their spring concert on Tuesday, May 8, in Pierce Hall, Sixteenth and Harvard streets northwest. John R. Monroe will conduct.

Mrs. Mann will give a group of numbers supported by the chorus of male voices, including two choral hymns from the Rig-Veda, adapted from this most ancient of all known hymnology by Gustav Holst, a well-known contemporary English composer of Dutch extraction. The two hymns selected are the "Hymn to Manas" (the spirit of a dying man) and the "Hymn to Agni" (the god of fire). In addition she will sing, with chorus accompaniment, the famous "Rhapsode" from Goethe's Harzreise in Winter," one of the great choral compositions of Johannes Brahms, which is a favorite with Mme. Schumann-Heink and has seldom been heard in this country. She will also render the aria, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from "Samson et Dalila," of Saint-Saens, and a group of songs in German and English.

An interesting feature of the glee club program is that it will be given in five different languages, namely, English, Latin, Italian, German and French, and one song will be sung in Scotch dialect. Music of both sacred and secular nature, ranging from the fifteenth century to modern works of living composers will add unique variety to their offerings. As in the past, a large part of the program will be sung a cappella, but will be varied with accompanied numbers in which the voices will be augmented by piano and organ.

James J. Blaney, of Catholic University, is the accompanist for the club and Adolf Torovsky, organist of the Church of the Epiphany, will be at the piano for Mrs. Mann.

The club, now in its fifth season, was organized and is directed by John R. Monroe, of this city, and has a membership of about 30 men. It is entirely a voluntary organization.

Dr. G. E. Christiani, head of the violin department of the Washington College of Music, gave a recital with a number of his pupils last Friday evening, in the auditorium of the college.

An organ recital will be given at St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, by T. Guy Lucas, organist, on Wednesday. The program will include the following numbers:

J. S. Bach, prelude and fugue in F minor. C. H. H. Parry, three chorale preludes, (a) Dundee, "The People That in Darkness Sat;" (b) Eventide, "Abide With Me;" (c) Croft's 136th, "Ye Boundless Realms of Joy."

Bach-Gounod, "Ave Maria," a beautiful melody added by this French composer (1818-1893) to the lovely little first prelude from the "48 Preludes and Fugues for Clavier" of the great master, Joseph Kiernan. R. Schumann, slow movement from a string quartet; Pietro A. Yon, "Gesu Bambino;" Sidney Nicholson, "Soul of Christ, Sanctify Me," from the canata, "The Saviour of the World," Joseph Kiernan. Saint-Saens, fantasie, "Con moto: Allegro di molto e con fuoco."

Signorina Rosa de Granada will sing a selected program of Spanish and Moorish songs at the Carlton Hotel patio Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. This is the well-known soprano's American debut, made in Washington in deference to the sponsorship of his excellency, the Cuban Ambassador and Mme. Ferrara.

Signorina Rosa will appear in a different Spanish or Moorish costume appropriate to each selection she will render.

NURSING COMMITTEE OFFICIAL TO LECTURE

Mrs. Mary Breckinridge to Speak Wednesday on Frontier Service for U. S.

Mrs. Mary Breckinridge, of the Kentucky Committee for Mothers and Babies, Inc., will deliver an address on the work of the committee Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George Myers, 2330 S street northwest. The meeting will be open to all persons interested in the public health movement.

Mrs. Breckinridge is a registered nurse and has undertaken to introduce a frontier nursing service in the remote sections of this Nation, where there are no physicians and the nurse must be especially trained to handle any maternal case, which might come under her care. Mrs. Breckinridge has thoroughly studied the Queen's Nursing Service of England, which employs registered trained nurses to care for mothers and babies in the highlands of the British Isles.

Because the United States has the highest death rate of mothers in childbirth in the civilized world, Mrs. Breckinridge contends America is still a frontier country for millions of citizens and a nursing service in the remote section is justifiable. The list of patronesses for her local address includes Mrs. George H. Myers, Mrs. Whitman Cross, Mrs. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Frank B. Noyes, Mrs. Alvin Dodd, Mrs. Alan G. Kirk, Mrs. Emory Scott Sand, Mrs. Louis Lehr, Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Frank C. Page, Mrs. Frederic M. Caskett and Mrs. Dwight Clark.

District Tree Fund Wins Indorsement

House approval of the $125,000 appropriation for planting and care of street trees in the District adopted by the Senate, was asked yesterday by delegates attending the tree rally luncheon held at the Willard Hotel by the Washington committee of 100 on the Federal City of the American Civic Association. Congress also was asked for adequate appropriations to replace trees destroyed by disaster, and for ratification of the Senate appropriation of $1,000,000 for purchase of park lands near the city.

Speakers at the luncheon included Harlan Kelsey, a member of the board of the National Arboretum; Dr. J. Horace McFarland, of the American Civic Association; Col. U. S. Grant, 3d., of the National Park and Planning Commission; Dr. F. V. Coville, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, and Col. William B. Greeley, chief of the United States Forest Service. Frederic A. Delano announced the appointment of Capt. Chester Wells, as chairman of trees for the committee.

Militia Will Hold Rifle Competitions

Competitions for the selection of 25 riflemen, which will constitute the District National Guard training squad and from which rifle teams to represent the guard in competitions during the coming target season will be selected, will begin today at 9 o'clock at the Camp Simms target range, Congress Heights, D. C.

The teams selected to represent the guard will have at least six members as either principals and alternates. A noon-day meal will be provided for the competitors today. Capt. J. C. Jensen, of the ordnance department, will act as executive officer. The following officers have been assigned to assist him: Capt. Walter S. Welsh, Second Lieuts John D. Power, Lincoln S. Jones, John L. Atkins, John C. May, Willard L. Hammer and William A. Gormley. Test will also be held next Sunday.

VETO OF FLOOD BILL THREATENED UNLESS CHANGES ARE MADE

Madden Warns House Federal Government Will Not Meet Entire Expense.

MAKES SPEECH AFTER CALL AT WHITE HOUSE

Declares States Should Assume Cost of Land Needed for Construction Work.

(Associated Press.)

A warning was issued yesterday by House Republican leaders that flood control legislation faces a possible presidential veto unless some recession is made by those demanding that the Federal Government shoulder the entire cost of the work.

Chairman Madden, of the House appropriations committee, after breakfast at the White House, said that it was his opinion that President Coolidge would reject the $325,000,000 Jones Senate bill unless the States in the Mississippi River Basin flood area showed some disposition to assist in the control program.

Madden, who was accompanied to the White House by Speaker Longworth, Representative Tilson, Connecticut, the House majority leader; Chairman Snell, of the rules committee, and Representative Kopp, of Iowa, a Republican member of the House flood control committee, said that he specifically favored revision of the bill to provide that States assume the cost of the lands that would be needed for levees and spillways.

Will Propose Changes.

He also outlined other changes that he considered necessary, and indicated that if they were not accepted by the flood control committee before the measure is called up in the House on Tuesday, either he or some one else would offer them in the form of amendments.

In the face of this demand from House leaders, however, there was no apparent move on the part of the flood committee or supporters of the Jones Senate bill to accede to the proposed changes, indicating that the question will have to be carried to the House floor for determination.

Chairman Reid, of the flood control committee, consistently has maintained that the flood problem is of national scope and should be handled solely by the Federal Government. Unless he and his supporters should change their views within the next few days the battle in the House will find the Republican party leaders arrayed against a Republican controlled committee.

Threat of Veto Voiced.

Mr. Madden also declared that he felt the provision in the bill holding the Federal Government liable for all damages sustained in the construction of spillways and levees should be eliminated, thus requiring those seeking damages to ask redress from the courts under existing law.

"President Coolidge has treated their flood control problem in a most generous spirit," Madden said. "The people in the flood area should be thankful that they have a President who would give such consideration to their problems. But unless they are interested enough in their own welfare to assist in the work, I doubt if they can get any cooperation.

"It may be that they will find themselves without any legislation unless they can pass the bill over the President's veto."

Meanwhile, W. H. Dick, president of the Mississippi River Flood Control Association, during the day issued a statement indorsing the Jones bill as an "adequate, logical and equitable" measure which recognized the principle of local contribution as sound but exempting the Mississippi flood area from any payment because of the $292,000,000 already invested by that section in flood control works.

MARGUERITE WATSON MARRIED TO DUKE

other girl in mind for him, the selection of his mother being of royal blood.

"Oh, yes; the family selected a wife for me years ago," he said. "That is the old, old way, but with all due respect to the young lady in question I had entirely different views in the matter."

The prince met Miss Watson four years ago at a dinner party in Paris. The American girl was an hour late and this aroused his curiosity for he wondered what kind of a girl it was who dared be an hour late at dinner, when Miss Watson appeared, the prince was impressed by her personality and they sat side by side at the dinner.

"The next day we were invited to tea at a friend's home and a week later we were engaged," he added. "It was a great secret but gradually got to my parents who disapproved from the very beginning, in the first place because of my age."

The prince afterward saw Miss Watson frequently in New York, Paris and London, but he never visited Newport.

The couple were married at the registrar's office in Covent Gardens. Miss Watson wore a navy blue dress, a smart long coat also of dark blue and a close fitting navy blue straw hat setting off her fair hair. She was accompanied by an official of the American consulate.

The prince, with the witnesses, Toby Charlton, husband of Lady June Charlton, and Claude Marcel, appeared shortly afterward. There was no woman friend with the bride and when the wedding was over she left alone, driving off in a taxicab, while the bridegroom and his friends followed in another taxi.

Miss Watson was born in Richmond, Va., and has lived in Paris for a number of years. Her engagement to the late Reginald Vanderbilt was rumored in 1919, but later was broken.

The duke is the only son of the Duke and Duchess of Vendome. His mother is a cousin of King Albert of Belgium.

It had been rumored that the wedding would be postponed until May because of objection by the duke's family. The duke, however, said they would be married as soon as Miss Watson's health permitted. She was recovering from an operation for appendicitis. He also denied rumors that King Albert objected to the match.

Chick Fraser Is Divorced.

Los Angeles, April 14 (A.P.).—A divorce was granted yesterday to Mrs. Viola Fraser, wife of Chick Fraser, golf professional, now of the Midwick Country Club here, on grounds of desertion. The couple were married in 1920 in Dixon, Ill.

Jackson, who will unveil the statue.

FIREMEN OF MARYLAND ERECT MODERN HOME

BUILDING TO COST $40,000

Within a short time, the Takoma Park, Md., Volunteer Fire Department will formally open its new $40,000 headquarters. Dr. Heber Votaw, chairman of the fund raising drive committee, said yesterday that considerably more than $30,000 of the needed money has been subscribed.

The Takoma Park Fire Department leads the other fire departments of Montgomery County in membership, having 138 members. When its new headquarters is opened, it will possess the most completely equipped headquarters in the county, it is said. Not only in fire equipment, but in accommodations for service, a hall for public meetings, entertainments and banquets, provisions for police headquarters, a well equipped gymnasium and other facilities for public service, it will take front rank in the county as a well organized community necessity.

J. W. Dudley, chief of the department since it was organized in 1922, has been active in bringing it up to a high standard of efficiency. The equipment consists of one pumper of 500-gallon capacity, with 750 feet of hose; another of 300-gallon capacity, with 750 feet of hose; another of 200-gallon capacity, with 500 feet of hose, and a hook and ladder truck. The water supply is furnished by mains of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

The new building has a frontage of 90 feet and a depth of 70 feet. The engine room will be 30 by 38 feet; the assembly room will be 40 by 60 feet, and the gymnasium will be 42 by 70 feet, with a ceiling 18 feet 6 inches high.

The opening night will be a gala affair in Takoma Park. Fire departments from other sections of the county will be asked to participate, and citizens in the vicinity of the town will be invited to be present.

VIRGINIA TEACHERS FIGHT SCHOOL PLAN

Fear Politics May Decide the Naming of Head of Public Instruction.

Danville, Va., April 14.—The district convention of the Virginia Educational Association, which brought 300 teachers from seven counties to Danville, adjourned today after adopting resolutions opposing Gov. Byrd's short ballot proposal and the writing of segregation into the constitution.

The teachers, who voted unanimously, declared the selection of a superintendent of public instruction by the governor would make the office one to be handed out by the governor for political support.

Objection to segregation was on the score that the school system might suffer from lack of funds.

Guard Officers Admit Pay Check Forgeries

Detroit, Mich., April 14 (A.P.).—Seven Michigan National Guard officers, indicted by a Federal grand jury on charges of forging Government pay checks, pleaded guilty upon arraignment today before Judge Charles C. Simons, in United States District Court.

An eighth guardsman, Lieut. George T. Lake, pleaded not guilty, and his trial was set for April 17. Sentencing of the other seven was deferred until after Lake's trial.

Plan for Circuit Rider Wins Churches' Prize

Chicago, April 14 (A.P.).—Days of the old-time circuit rider may be brought back to aid the modern church if the prize-winning essay on "What the Church Needs" is put into practice.

The prize-essay contest was sponsored by the Northwestern Christian Advocate of Chicago among Methodist pastors and laymen in search of an answer to the question, "What one proposal would you suggest to aid the church?" The winner was the Rev. Edwin Lewis, professor of theology at Drew University, at Madison, N. J., who suggested fewer and better churches and the revival of the old-time circuit rider, using later day transportation.

Second prize was won by the Rev. Charles Nelson Page, of Duluth, and third prize by the Rev. Orlen W. Fifer, of Indianapolis. Essays were limited to 100 words.

CHICAGO POLICE BESIEGE DRYMAN IN U. S. OFFICE

OFFICERS WAIT OUTSIDE

Chicago, April 14 (A.P.).—Myron Caffey, a Federal prohibition agent, today played hide-and-seek with police officers who sought to arrest him on a charge of assault to kill a Municipal court bailiff during a raid on a saloon.

Caffey several times today attempted to leave the Federal Building, where he has spent most of his time since the warrant for his arrest was obtained ten days ago. Each time he retreated to the United States district attorney's office when he saw a policeman waiting for him.

The prohibition agent was saved from arrest a week ago through the issuance by a Federal judge of a writ of habeas corpus. Later this was quashed, the judge advising the State's attorney to have Caffey indicted so that he could transfer the proceedings to Federal court.

Capt. William Shoemaker, of the detective force, was in the lobby of the Federal Building all day waiting for Caffey to leave. At noon, the agent started to go out for his lunch. As Shoemaker and the warrant hurried toward Caffey, the agent decided to have his lunch in the district attorney's office. He did.

Dual Laws Create Issue in U. S. Court

Richmond, Va., April 14 (A.P.).—Responsibility of Federal agents who violate State laws in the performance of their duty in pursuing known violators of the law is a question at issue before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here.

Counsel argued that Mack B. Lilly, a Federal agent, was not justified in killing a pedestrian while violating State and city traffic laws in chasing an alleged bootlegger in West Virginia. Lilly was convicted of involuntary manslaughter at Huntington, W. Va., and fined $100, appealing his case to the Federal Court.

Defense counsel contended that the pedestrian was guilty of contributory negligence in not getting out of the way. Lilly, it was said, was merely performing his duty.

The court at Huntington, in its opinion said: "This dual government of ours has always been difficult to grasp and it has been exceedingly difficult for some officers of the Federal Government to grasp the fact that they are still under the laws of West Virginia."

ANDREW JACKSON STATUE TO BE PRESENTED TODAY

President Coolidge, in Speech, Will Accept Memorial of Tennessee.

EXERCISES IN CAPITOL

With elaborate pomp and ceremony, a statue of Andrew Jackson, the seventh President of the United States, will be presented to the Federal Government and unveiled in Statuary Hall of the Capitol this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

President Calvin Coolidge will deliver the speech of acceptance following the address of presentation, which will be given by Gov. Henry H. Horton, of Tennessee. The statue will be unveiled by a kin of Jackson, Andrew Jackson 4th. The Andrew Jackson statue commission, which includes prominent State officials and civic leaders of Tennessee and the entire Tennessee congressional delegation, will attend the ceremonies.

The program will be opened by the rendition of "How Firm a Foundation," Jackson's favorite hymn, by the United States Marine Band. Mrs. Flora Myers Gillentine, past regent of the Tennessee Daughters of the American Revolution, will preside. The invocation will be given by the Rev. Newton P. Patterson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and the benediction by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives.

Following the addresses and presentation and acceptance and the unveiling, brief tributes to Andrew Jackson will be given by Mrs. James E. Caldwell, representing Nashville (Tenn.) patriotic societies; Mrs. A. S. Buchanan, Tennessee State regent of the D. A. R., and Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general of the D. A. R. Claude J. Bowers, Jackson's foremost biographer, will give an address, and wreaths will be presented by P. L. Harned, Tennessee commissioner of education, and Mrs. Mahlon Brown, representing the school children of Tennessee.

BONDSMAN, LAWYER, CITED INTO COURT

Plea of Guilty in Biddick Girl's Case Said to Have Been Unauthorized.

Edward Buckley, bondsman and Denny Hughes, an attorney, were cited yesterday by Judge Kathryn Sellers of the Juvenile Court to appear before her Thursday and show cause why they should not be adjudged in contempt in connection with the case of Dorothy M. Biddick, 15-year-old high school girl, who was recently arrested in a liquor raid. Mrs. Millie Biddick, 922 Fourteenth street northwest, mother of the girl and the girl herself are the complainants against the attorney and the bondsman.

Hughes is alleged to have appeared for the girl Monday in court and entered a plea of guilty to the liquor charge without having been authorized to do so by the girl or her mother. The bondsman is alleged to have procured the services of the attorney without being so authorized by the girl or her mother.

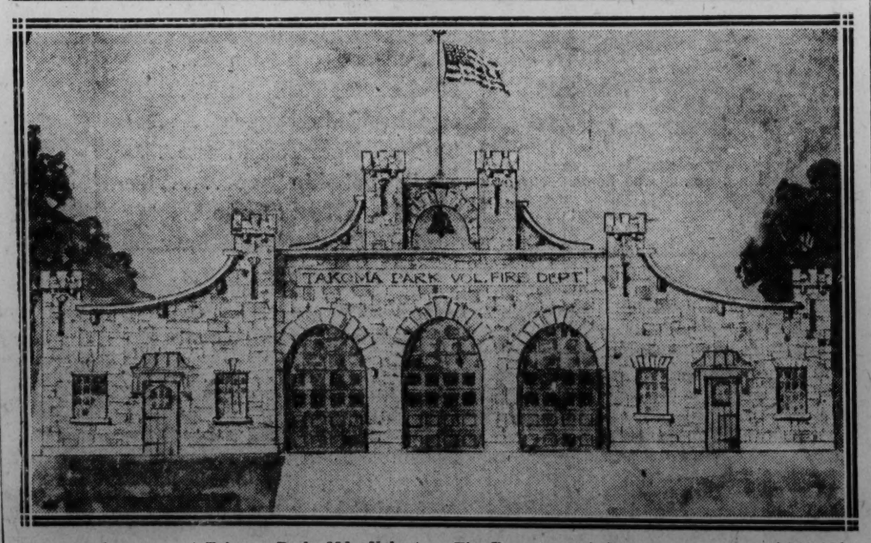

Mrs. Biddick declared that she did not engage an attorney until last Wednesday and then she engaged James A. O'Shea and John H. Burnett. Burnett presented the affidavits upon which the contempt citation was issued.

Wife Slayer Flees Hospital for Insane

Richmond, Va., April 14 (A.P.).—Elijah Davis, convicted wife slayer, whose sentence of electrocution was commuted to life imprisonment at the State Hospital for the Insane at Marion, has escaped from that institution, Captain of Detectives A. S. Wright was advised today.

Davis, who shot and killed his wife here December 29, 1916, was located five years after the crime in Jacksonville, Fla. He is about 55 years old. He was convicted of first degree murder in November 1921 and sentenced to death, but was later adjudged insane.

TAX CUT OF $150,000,000 URGED BY FARM LEADER

Gray Tells Senate Citizens Want Surpluses Applied to Federal Debt.

IN FAVOR OF ESTATE LEVY

(Associated Press.)

Limitation of tax reduction to $150,000,000 was advocated yesterday on behalf of the American Farm Bureau Federation in a memorandum addressed to the Senate finance committee, which is considering the pending revenue bill by Chester H. Gray, Washington representative of the federation.

"Industry and commerce do not need more reduction than this," said Gray, "and the average citizen is more in favor of applying our income on the Federal debt than granting tax gratuities to those who have ability to pay taxes and are not suffering from the present rates."

Referring to "the elaborate estimates which are advanced from some quarters relative to tax reduction," Gray said:

"It is, to state it mildly, ridiculous to contemplate reducing tax payments to the extent of $400,000,000 or $500,000,000, as is being advocated from some quarters."

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States has stood pat before the Senate committee on its original advocacy of a $400,000,000 tax cut.

The Farm Bureau Federation, Gray said, favors retention of the Federal estate tax and repeal of all sales taxes, admissions taxes and the automobile tax.

EVANS SAYS ALL FACTS IN SUIT WILL BE TOLD

WITNESSES AVAILABLE

(Associated Press.)

Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, expressed regret in a statement today that dismissal in Pittsburgh of the suit for an injunction against the order prevented the klan "from presenting the proof we offered of the falsity of the charges made against me and the organization."

Speaking for himself and the klan, Evans said "we were denied time to bring from the remote points, where the crimes were alleged to have been committed, public officers and other men of high repute by whom we would have positively disproved from their own personal and public knowledge that such occurrences had taken place."

The statement said the court had refused to grant the necessary time and added regret that the court "saw fit to impeach the great State of Pennsylvania and the purpose and integrity of the hundreds of thousands of citizens of Pennsylvania who were klansmen, and not one of whom is accused in any record before the court of any wrongdoing."

"I have also a peculiar and personal sorrow," the wizard said, "that the court in his official opinion besmirched the fair name of Texas, my home State. He charged to its citizens crimes that were never committed by klansmen or any one else, and this after refusing us the opportunity we demanded, to bring from Texas witnesses who would have disproved every one of these charges.

"The klan and myself are extremely fortunate in that there will presently appear opportunities where the full facts involved in this case will be laid before the bar of other courts and thus before the bar of public opinion."

NEWS OF THE SUBURBS

BRENTWOOD.

At the meeting of the mayor and council Tuesday $1,000 bills were ordered paid out of the certificate of indebtedness fund. These bills cover costs of surveying the five streets to be paved, plans and specifications, advertising for bids, and attorney's fees. Bids were opened Saturday evening at a special meeting of the council and it is expected the contract will be awarded at an early date. At the Tuesday evening meeting an ordinance requiring a license fee of $100 a day for carnivals was repealed. The road department was commended on having graded and graveled Campbell street in a satisfactory manner. C. O. Mains, president of Vasco Products, Inc., inquired regarding the acquisition of additional ground in the vicinity of the plant for the construction of a much larger building for the housing of their concern and other industries near the Brentwood railroad station.

The Brentwood Volunteer Fire Department will meet Tuesday evening at which time the committee will report on steps taken to have a carnival for the benefit of the fire company.

The Brentwood Night Hawks Club of young men will have a card party Saturday evening in the Brentwood School Auditorium for the purpose of raising funds to buy equipment for their baseball team. George Beck has been elected business manager of the baseball team and games can be arranged through him.

TAKOMA PARK.

Takoma Chapter, No. 12, O. E. S., met at Masonic Temple Friday night and had as their guests the grand matron and grand patron and the 1928 matrons and patrons of the order. Mrs. Bertha Brown was in charge of the evening's entertainment.

The ladies of the Takoma Park Baptist Church will hold a rummage sale at 8 Cedar street on Thursday and Friday.

Knowles Ryerson, world traveler and scientist, will be the speaker at the meeting of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Brotherhood on Wednesday night at the church. Mr. Ryerson will tell of his experiences in the far corners of the globe and will illustrate his talk with slides.

At a special meeting called by Mayor Ben G. Davis on behaf of the Takoma Park municipal playground conference, attended by many of the leading citizens of the town, it was voted that work be started at once on the grading of the municipal playground. The cost of the grading will be close to $4,000 and this amount will be raised by subscription. A campaign for this already is under way.

BLADENSBURG.

President Arthur P. Owens, Treasurer Frank Mace and Secretary Baxter Denny, of the present town commission, in all probability will be candidates to succeed themselves at the biennial election May 7. Others who have been mentioned as likely candidates for one of the five seats on the commission are: W. R. Beattie, chief of the local fire department, who has been put forward as a candidate by the Decatur Heights Citizens Association; Thomas Wildman, former town commissioner; Staley M. Clark and William Frerie. Clark and Frerie are active members of the Greater Bladensburg District Citizens Association.

A special meeting of the fire department was held Thursday night to make final arrangements for tag week, which will begin Saturday, April 14. The money derived from the sale of tags will be used to pay the quarterly installment of the note on the pumper.

The annual egg rolling for the children of Decatur Heights and vicinity was held on the playgrounds Easter Monday. Luncheon was served for the mothers and the children by the Housekeepers' Club. The club met at the home of Mrs. Raymond Evans that evening. Several members of the club attended the lecture by Miss Snow, of Baltimore, on international relations, at the home of Mrs. J. A. Harris in Cheverly Wednesday.

FALLS CHURCH.

The school board of Falls Church has recommended increase of the public school budget to permit commercial instruction in the high school, especially in stenography and bookkeeping. The matter has been referred to the finance committee of the council which is composed of R. E. Kendrick, Clarence Knowles and Dr. Henry Knowles.

Owing to the recent decision of the Washington educational authorities to curtail outside attendance at the Washington schools, the need for local business instruction has been increased.

SILVER SPRING.

The annual election of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Woodside M. E. Church was held in the church parlors, and Mrs. H. H. Howlett was reelected president. Mrs. B. F. Stiffler was elected first vice president; Mrs. E. I. Stacey, second vice president; Mrs. Harry E. Elkins, recording secretary; Mrs. Martin Kinsinger, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Clyde Williams was reelected treasurer for the ninth time. In the afternoon the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society met, when Mrs. H. B. Kendrick gave an interesting talk on Alaska.

The Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department will be hosts to the Montgomery County Association of Volunteer Firemen on Thursday night, when the second quarterly meeting of the association will be held in the local firemen's hall. John Feast, president of the county association, and one of the organizers of the Silver Spring department, and among the oldest of the county's volunteer firemen, will preside.

Under the auspices of the Takoma Park-Silver Spring High School Parent-Teacher Association a card party will be held at the high school Tuesday night. The committee on arrangements consists of Mrs. L. M. Christie, chairman; Mrs. Stacy, Mrs. Munroe, Mrs. Harry Griffith, Mrs. J. R. Adams, Mrs. J. Wilson Dodd and Mrs. Harry James.

HYATTSVILLE.

Voters of Hyattsville will convene Monday night at the municipal building to nominate one councilman for each of the four wards, to be voted on at the election, May 7. All officers are for two years.

William A. Shepherd, town treasurer, will be a candidate to succeed himself, and probably Councilman C. B. Anderson, of the First ward, also. Councilman George N. Bowen, of the Third ward, as to whether or not he will run again. Councilman N. H. Spicknall, of the Second ward, and O. F. Ress, of the Fourth, will retire. George H. Morley may aspire to the Second ward post. Dr. H. P. Willis and three councilmen have another year to serve.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church will serve a luncheon Tuesday. Tuesday night at 8 o'clock a reception will be given to the new pastor, the Rev. U. S. A. Heavener.

BANKRUPTCY PETITION BY DE FOREST RADIO

Company Announces Debts as $415,068, With Assets of $115,931.

Wilmington, Del., April 14 (A.P.).—The De Forest Radio Co. of New Jersey today filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court for Delaware. The petition was filed by William H. Foulk, attorney, of this city, on behalf of Heyman & Heyman, of Jersey City, N. J., counsel for the company.

Assets of the company are fixed at $115,931 in the petition with debts amounting to $415,068. The petition was filed pursuant to a resolution of the company's directors.

Affidavits attached to the petition and signed by Henry L. Crowley, president, and other officers, cite that the company is "indebted to a number of persons and corporations in an aggregate amount far in excess of the value of its assets" and that the filing of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy would be best for the protection of creditors and stockholders.

It is also stated that the company is in receipt of an offer from W. R. Reynolds, which will enable the company upon certain terms to make a proposal to its creditors which, if accepted, would enable the company to resume business. Patents owned or controlled by the company number in excess of 100.

Deal's History of the City of Washington and District of Columbia
SAINT PATRICK'S Catholic Church, Tenth St. Northwest, between F and G Sts., has a most interesting history.
The ground upon which this property now stands was bought by Father Caffery from the Government in 1794 for eighty pounds. The first pipe organ in the District of Columbia was used in St. Patrick's, and prior to 1810, there were no pews. Communicants brought their own benches or stools. The present church was dedicated in 1884.

150 RARE VOLUMES NOW ON EXHIBITION AT CONGRESSIONAL

Books, Numbering 150, Selected From Vollbehr's Noted Incunabula Collection.

WERE BROUGHT TO U. S. FOR EUCHARIST SESSION

Chinese Work, Printed in 1405, Held One of Most Valuable Finds.

Many rare volumes from the European printing presses of the fifteenth century are now on exhibit in the Library of Congress. The books, numbering 150, are a selected group from the famous Incunabula collection of Dr. Otto H. F. Vollbehr, of Berlin, noted German bibliophile.

The exhibit is supplemented by 400 marks of European publishers, from the fifteenth to the nineteenth centuries. The exhibition was opened Friday on the second floor of the library and will continue until the end of the month.

Dr. Vollbehr brought his collection of fifteenth century books to the United States for exhibition at the International Eucharistic Congress held in Chicago in 1925. Since then it has been viewed in New York, St. Louis and Kansas City.

The collection in its entirety contains over 3,000 choice volumes printed during the century in which Dr. Vollbehr has specialized. The collection is said to be the largest and most comprehensive one in private hands, and the volumes on display at the Library of Congress are representative of the entire collection.

Although printing was a new invention at the conclusion of the fifteenth century, the technique and art attained by the early craftsmen seldom have been excelled. Most of the volumes on display are preserved in all their beauty despite the ravaging effects of time. The beauty of the wood cuts that decorate the books is especially noteworthy.

Began Collecting Fifteen Years Ago.

Dr. Vollbehr began to collect fifteenth century works over fifteen years ago. His collection grew rapidly, he having had wide experience in the gathering of rare books. Previous to 1910 he, together with friends, had secured a large collection of books pertaining to Mohammed which had been presented to the Imperial Library at Constantinople.

He bought many of his books from monasteries nd at auctions. Many of them he happened upon at odd moments when he was least expected to find them. Notably among these is a Chinese work printed March 9, 1405, which was compiled by command of the Empress Jen Hsiao of the Ming Dynasty, which Dr. Vollbehr recovered while on a journey through Spain. The book contains a preface by the empress and is an exhortation to virtue.

Dr. Vollbehr considers the Chinese book, which is in three volumes, as one of his most valuable finds. There is no other specimen of this Chinese classic in any European or American library and it precedes the earliest printed European block books by fully a generation.

What are often referred to jokingly at the first book on prohibition and the first book on aviation are included in the exhibit. The book on prohibition is entitled "Water versus Wine," in which the merits of both fluids are set forth. It is printed in Italian.

Early Flight Recounted.

When Col. Charles Lindbergh was in St. Louis following his transatlantic flight to Paris he was shown the book written in the fifteenth century in which the fabled flight of Icarus is recounted. Icarus, the son of Daedalus, attempted to reach the sun with wings made of feathers and wax. The heat of the sun, however, melted the wax and Icarus fell. The version of the fable in Dr. Vollbehr's collection is printed in French.

None of his 3,000 books was recovered in the United States, Dr. Vollbehr stated. The nearest he ever came to finding one in this country happened recently while he was in Seattle, Wash. The book, however, turned out to be a whisky flask masquerading as a rare old volume.

A replica, with one original sheet, of the famous Gutenberg Bible of the Corinthian Monastery of St. Paul, which the German bibliophile acquired in 1926 for $305,000, will be on exhibit at the library. Dr. Vollbehr stated that the risks involved was too great to warrant exhibiting the original book.

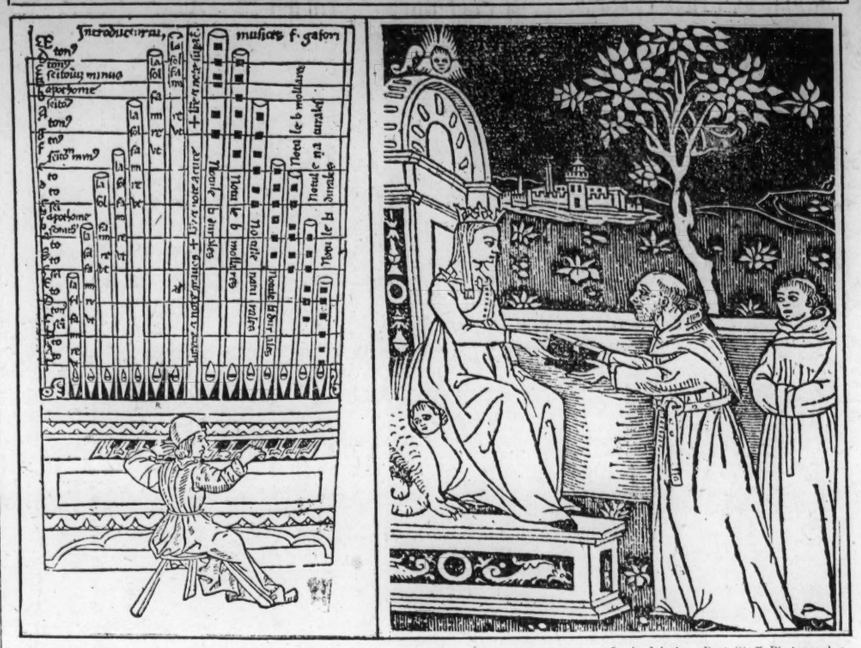

Bible Printed in 1455.

The Bible was printed in 1455 by the noted German printer, Johannes Gutenberg. Of this famous first and only parchment edition there remain but three perfect specimens of the complete scriptures; namely, the two-volume Gutenberg Bible acquired by the French Bibliotheque Royale in 1788, and another two-volume Bible obtained by the British Museum in 1846; and the three-volume book of Dr. Vollbehr.

The books on exhibit at the Library of Congress range from mammoth tomes and folios, almost too heavy to handle, down to duodecimos and tiny booklets small enough to tuck into a vest pocket or a woman's vanity case. Many of the volumes are in their original old bindings with metal clasps for closing the books and with protruding knobs on the covers to protect them from moisture when they lie flat or open. Several of the most precious folios from cloister libraries still have the iron rivets and chains with which they are linked to the monastery desks or walls to guard them from theft.

A large number of the books in the collection are first editions. There are also many of them of which there are no original duplicates.

Many beautiful wood cuts as pictured above illustrate the fifteenth century books of the Vollbehr Incunabula Collection now on exhibit at the Library of Congress. The picture on the left is the first printed picture of a musician. It is an illustration in Gaforius' Theoria Musicae printed in 1492. On the right are pictured monks dedicating Bergomensis' book on "Laides of His Time" to the queen. The book was printed in 1497 in Ferrare.

Flying and Fliers

By LE ROY WHITMAN

APPROVAL of the report of its aviation committee by the Washington Board of Trade gives further indication that the citizenry of Washington, fliers and nonfliers, are earnestly behind those men who are working for the proposed municipal airport at Gravelly Point. The Stalker bill has been indorsed previously by the District Commissioners, the airport section of the Army Air Corps, and the National Aeronautic Association.

The report which was presented to the board by Lawrence E. Williams, chairman of the aviation committee, reviews the history of the movement to give Washington an airport, and reminds the citizens that the use of Bolling Field for the air mail was granted only on condition that Washington provide its own airport.

"Of the four sites suggested," the report stated, "Buzzards Point, Gelsboro Point, Benning Race Track and Gravelly Point, only the last named seems really practical. It would give Washington a class 'A' airport both for land and sea planes, and, unlike the other sites, the selection of Gravelly Point will withdraw no land from taxation. This item alone will make considerable difference in District revenues each year.

"It would be nearer to the business section than any of the other sites except Buzzards Point, which is too small to be considered. And, finally, it offers unlimited opportunity for expansion. This is important, since the trend is for larger planes and heavier loads which in turn require longer runways. This expansion would not necessitate the purchase of land but would come about gradually by reclamation of the river by dredgings and city refuse.

"The project as recommended is to construct a field 3,000 feet by 3,000 feet at an elevation of 10 feet above mean low water, and the necessary facilities, shops, hangars, lights, etc., for handling land and sea planes, their passengers and cargo. A small part of the field is to be secured through purchase, the remainder being obtained through reclamation of the flats lying south and east of Gravelly Point just opposite Potomac Park.

Word was received last week at the headquarters of the National Aeronautic Association from E. L. Hardin, a director of the chapter at Salisbury, N. C., that an airport site of approximately 140 acres has been purchased there, and construction of the airport will be begun as soon as the necessary work of surveys and layout is completed.

Painters started to work yesterday at the Hybla Valley Airport lettering the roof of the huge hangar. The outstanding lettering, of course, will be the name of the firm, "Mount Vernon Airways, Inc." which will be in letters ten feet high, the name extending over 140 feet. Further identification will give the airmen the location and tell of the facilities at the port. Large road signs will be placed at each end of the field. Work also continued last week in hauling cinders for the long runways and blasting tree stumps to enlarge the field.

Delayed in their intended departure last week, E. W. Robertson, president of the firm, and Lieut. John Henry Tilton, field manager, will leave this week for the Alexander Aircraft Factory in Denver, Colo., where they will accept delivery of two new Eaglerock planes to be flown back to Hybla Valley.

The War Department has approved the recommendation of the National Guard Association of New York to name the aviation field at Pine Camp, N. Y., hitherto unnamed, in honor of Capt. Curtis Wheeler and Lieut. Carl J. Sack, the action being in accord with a custom of the past few years in naming flying fields after officers killed in air accidents.

Capt. Wheeler and Lieut. Sacks lost their lives at Pine Camp, July 6, 1927. They belongaed to the Twenty-seventh Division Air Service of the New York National Guard. Wheeler-Sack Field will henceforth be the official designation.

Reorganization of the Aviation Corporation of America and its affiliation with the Washington Airport was announced yesterday. The Aviation Corporation of America operates the field at College Park. The reorganization was brought about by the acquisition of the interests of Theodore Michael, president of the North Capital Savings Bank, by Robert E. Funkhouser, of the Washington Airport organization.

Steuart A. Reiss, president of the reorganized firm, announced that much of the student-training work of both organizations will hereafter be handled at the College Park Field. There will be available hangar space for private owners and shop facilities.

George W. Branson, formerly a sergeant in the Marine Corps and a combat pilot with the forces in Nicaragua, started putting the Wacos through their paces last week at the Washington Airport, where he has been added to the staff of pilots.

George W. Branson

Herbert Fahy left last week for San Diego for the third Ryan monoplane to be brought here for use in the proposed seaboard airways Washington to New York line. On his fourth trip, according to announcement by Robert Funkhouser, president of the organization, Mr. Fahy will have a new Ryan equipped with additional gasoline tanks and will attempt a nonstop flight to Camden, N. J., as a feature of the air meet to be held there.

The Shreveport (La.) Chapter of the National Aeronautic Association has started a junior ground school for Boy Scouts. A session will be held each Friday afternoon until eight sessions are completed. The Boy Scouts have shown a keen interest in the school, the purpose of which is to encourage and teach them the principle of aviation. It is planned to give a certificate to each of the 65 boys finishing the course.

The course includes instruction in the following subjects: Theory of flight, airplane engines, lubrication and fuel, Airplane construction, repair and rigging, air navigation, motorology and weather, instruments and their use in aviation and safety rules and regulations.

A model plane contest will follow. There will be no restriction in the plane contest, any boy in the vicinity will be eligible to enter.

Lieut. J. H. McKenney

L. R. Stuyvesant, of 1616 Eighteenth street northwest, a student at the Potomac Flying Service, began his solo flying in earnest last week under the instruction of Lieut. J. H. McKenney. Mr. Stuyvesant has been taking dual instruction for some time, but his course was interrupted by a trip South, from which he returned a few weeks ago.

Lieut. Thomas Durfee took the new Fairchild back to the factory at Farmingdale Friday to have it put on floats instead of wheels. Returning yesterday he encountered bad storms.

Approximately 70 members of the D. C. Air League met last week in the Arcadia and voted to form the Southeastern Airways Co. to promote interest in aviation in this city. All members of the organization will learn how to fly, it was explained.

C. D. Suppes was elected president of the new organization and E. H. Brimley was named secretary. Stock in the organization will be sold, Suppes announced, to raise funds to purchase at least two airplanes and an airport either in or near Washington. A meeting will be held within a month to determine how the stock will be disposed of.

Organization of a flying club will be discussed tomorrow evening at an open meeting of the U. S. Aero Club and the D. C. Division of the United States Air Force Association in the Washington Hotel. A newly invented aircraft engine, said to weigh only 38 pounds and be capable of developing 200 horsepower, will be demonstrated.

Hebrew Home Plans For Spring Festival

The annual benefit spring festival and party for the Hebrew Home for the Aged will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the home, under the auspices of the ladies auxiliary of the home.

Among those who will take part in the entertainment are Isaac Minovich, Miss Dora Minovich, Mrs. Herman Hertzberg, Miss Anita Sommers, Mrs. Herman Hollander and Mrs. William Levy. Mrs. Morris Gewirz is general chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Hospital Auxiliary To Present Benefit

The Ladies Auxiliary of Providence Hospital will give an entertainment at Keith's Theater Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock for the benefit of the free wards of the institution. The theater has been loaned for the purpose by Roland Robbins.

Mrs. P. H. Ridsdale is president of the auxiliary, and is in charge of ticket distribution. Mrs. Clifford Lewis and Mrs. Josephine Tighe Williams are in charge of arrangements.

Employes to Give Dinner to Covell

A farewell party at which the employes of the District will take leave of Maj. W. E. R. Covell, assistant to the Engineer Commissioner, will be held the afternoon of May 5. A few days thereafter Covell will leave for a vacation in California preparatory to reporting on his new assignment at the Army Officers School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

Arrangements for the party have been placed in the hands of a committee consisting of District Surveyor Melvin C. Hazen, chairman; Roland M. Brennan, Earl V. Fisher, Col. John E. Oehmann, James L. Martin, Clifford Lanham and Maj. James R. Lusby. The hotel in which the party will be held has not yet been named. It will begin with a luncheon and will include entertainment, speeches and dancing.

KITE TOURNAMENT HELD, DESPITE HIGH WINDS

Three Awards Are Made in Flying Held Over Meridian Hill Park.

ONE SEEMED LIKE EAGLE

Winds that carried many colored kites high in the heavens above Meridian Hill Park, sent others crashing into tree tops and swept others out over the city as the cords retaining them parted, ushered in the second kite flying contest of the District miniature aircraft tournament yesterday at Meridian Hill.

More than 20 youthful contestants reported at the park for the preliminaries, but less than half of this number were able to fulfill the 10-minute sustained flight requirement necessary for official participation in the contest. Under less severe weather conditions all might have qualified.

Three awards were made by Judges Paul Edward Garber and Lieut. Col. C. DeForrest Chandler. The kite entered by Harold Greenfield was adjudged the steadiest; that flown by Robert Chaimson remained aloft for the longest duration and received the award for the greatest pull, while Phillip Haywood's kite was declared best in design and workmanship. These three will receive 5 points each toward their score for the entire tournament.

Wide attention was attracted by a kite of birdlike design, so closely resembling an eagle in flight that the passerby must look twice to convince himself of its real nature. The kite did not qualify, as Eugene Cook, its enfrant, confessed he was not its designer. He told Miss Sibyl Baker, director of the Community Center Department, under whose auspices the tournament is being conducted, that he had uncovered the unique device while rummaging in an attic of his home.

Another cleverly constructed kite, which bade fair at the start to share in the prizes, was put out of the running when its string parted. Although Robert Ochsteter, its owner, retrieved the kite, and recovered its torn frame with new tissue, the contest had progressed too far toward completion for the kite to figure among the winners.

Miss Baker announced that the next event of the tournament will be held April 21 at Central High when planes of the "indoor pusher" type will compete for points. This contest will be held at night, beginning at 7:30.

O'Donnell Retrial To Begin Tomorrow

The retrial of James S. O'Donnell, alleged rum runner, on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Lieut. Samuel L. Gallahan, of No. 26 Engine Co., is scheduled for tomorrow in Criminal Court No. 1. The first attempt to convict O'Donnell ended in a mistrial.

Lieut. Gallahan was hurled from a horse cart at the juncture of Bladensburg and Queen Chapel roads on July 25, 1927, by an automobile alleged to have been driven by O'Donnell. Attorneys O'Shea and Burnett will defend O'Donnell, while Assistant District Attorneys Neudecker and Burkinshaw will appear for the Government.

ARLINGTON COUNTY WILL START ZONING REGULATIONS SOON

Builders of Business Houses Ordered to Submit Permits to Commission.

POLICY IS ADOPTED TO PREVENT DELAY

Lectures on Hygiene to Begin at Lee High School on Wednesday Morning.

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509 Clarendon, Va.

The clerk of the Arlington County Court has been instructed by the board of supervisors to submit all permits for the erection of business properties to the zoning commission for its approval. This approval must be obtained before any action will be taken by the board. Chairman John E. Harding, of the commission, reported yesterday that the work is progressing and, when all permits are before the commission, delay in final action will be avoided. With the completion of the maps, for which data are being obtained by Thomas N. De Lashmutt, actual zoning of the county will soon be started.

The Arlington organization of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold a mass meeting today in the Mount Olivet Methodist Church, at Ballston, at 4 o'clock. Mrs. N. W. Pollock, president of the District of Columbia Union, will be the principal speaker.

Work on Memorial drive, extending from Glebe road, in Ballston, to Brown avenue, in Falls Church, a distance of 2 miles, will be started this week. This will be the first link in what is known as the Straight-to-the-Bridge road, extending from the new Memorial Bridge through Clarendon, Ballston and Falls Church. The route the road will take through Clarendon could not be learned last night, but it is understood that efforts are being made to have it extend from Porter's woods along Taylor avenue.

The special grand jury, which will convene with the opening of the April term of court tomorrow, will be composed of R. A. McKericher, J. L. Price, J. Kent White, J. H. Carmichael, J. Thomas Crack, Robert P. Dye, W. B. Huffman, L. M. Kelley, O. J. Le Prevost, J. D. McDonnell, A. C. McMillen, R. P. Shepherd, J. S. Smithdeal, T. C. Hudson, P. B. Nourse and Fred N. Windridge.

Mrs. F. B. Croxton, educational director of the Bureau of Social Hygiene, State Board of Health, will give a series of seven lectures on "Sex-Character Education" in the auditorium of the Washington Lee High School beginning Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock. All women of 20 years of age, or over, are invited to attend. The lectures are being given under the auspices of the county health department and Fletcher Kemp, county school superintendent.

A mission study institute will be held in the Cherrydale Baptist Church Wednesday morning at 11:30 o'clock.

Raiding the home of H. C. Hoff, of Cherrydale, yesterday, Policemen Harry L. Woodyard, John R. Burke and Raymond Crack report they seized one 10-gallon still, 20 gallons of mash and 2 gallons of alleged whisky.

Hoff was taken to the Arlington County Jail, where he was charged with having an unregistered still. He was later released on $1,000 bond pending a hearing before Judge Harry R. Thomas tomorrow morning.

C. S. Whitesell, charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, waived a hearing before Judge Thomas yesterday and was held for the action of the grand jury. He was released on a $300 cash bond.

Suit for a divorce was filed in the office of the county clerk yesterday by Arthur J. Condrey against Pearl May Sutphun Condrey.

Arrangements have been completed for the dance and card party to be given in the Odd Fellows Hall in Clarendon by the Woman's Club of Lyon Village the night of April 25. Music during the evening will be furnished by William Pendleton's Orchestra.

Mrs. Charles W. Harris is general chairman in charge. The committee from whom tickets may be obtained consists of Mrs. Virginia Woodin, chairman; Mrs. C. W. Harris, Mrs. O. R. McQuire, Mrs. C. R. Cook, Mrs. John W. Wolcott, Mrs. A. A. Vaughan, Mrs. Louis Hastings, Mrs. Charles Hiller and Mrs. C. A. Ezell.

The committee on decorations is headed by Mrs. Amos C. Crounse, chairman. She will be assisted by Mrs. M. N. McKnight, Mrs. Gorman Hendricks and Mrs. C. F. Brown. Mrs. A. A. Vaughan will be hostess at the supper. The proceeds will go to the building fund for the new community house.

Dr. Mary E. Brydon, director of child welfare of the State of Virginia, will examine children of the county who expect to enter school next year at the several community health centers this week.

A lantern slide lecture by W. R. Beattie, on "Home and Community Improvement" will feature the meeting of the Lyon Park Garden Club to be held in the community house Thursday night.

Mrs. Florence E. Cannon, will discuss the proposed amendments to the State constitution at a meeting of the Woman's Club of Lyon Park in the community house Wednesday night.

Raiding the home of Melfus Martin of East Arlington, last night, Policemen Harry L. Woodyard, Hugh E. Jones and John R. Burke, seized, they reported, two gallons of liquor. Martin was taken to the Arlington County jail, where he is being held charged with illegal possession.

The semimonthly meeting of the town council of Potomac will take place tomorrow night in the town hall at 8 o'clock. Mayor William Kleysteuber will preside.

The ladies' missionary society of the Arlington Presbyterian Church announces that the musicale which was to be given on Tuesday night has been postponed until sometimes in May. The date will be fixed later.

The Daughters of Isabella, of St. Charles' Catholic Church, of Clarendon will meet Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Raymond Burrows, on Beech street. Miss Helen Burrows and Mrs. Caroline Helfert will act as hostesses.

The Lyon Park Community Center will hold its quarterly meeting tomorrow night at the community house at 8 o'clock.

MUCH ELECTRICITY MAKES ATTRACTIVE CITY DURING NIGHT

Capitol, Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial Bathed in Floodlights.

MANY CONCERNS ALSO ILLUMINATE BUILDINGS

Bigger Street Lamps Used Eliminate Glare and Make for Safety.

The great outdoors in and around Washington is in many ways made more attractive after sundown by numerous applications of electricity. Ordinarily beautiful man-made feats of architecture and display are made many times more beautiful by the use of electricity. Beauties of nature are also made even more attractive and appealing to the human eye during the hours of darkness by modern use of electric light.

Outstanding among some of the nationally known beauties in Washington are the United States Capitol, flood lighted by a series of high intensity projectors; the Washington Monument, lighted by projectors many feet from the white shaft, which takes on an appearance of a guide to strangers in the city; and the Lincoln Memorial truly in a class by itself, in impressive effect upon those who view it by night.

In the field of flood-lighting in Washington, many commercial enterprises add to the after-darkness beauty of the city. The Hecht Co. department store, the Earle and Keith's Theaters, and the Barr Building are fine examples of what is possible in making a place a more pleasant city in which to live by the studied application of the use of electric light. Many other office buildings, theaters and stores of all sizes have learned to wash their fronts in lights, and thus to enhance the sections in which they are located.

No Danger From Glare.

Another feature of lighting outdoors lies in the new and higher intensity street lights which are being installed all over the city, especially on the mainly traveled thoroughfares. These lighting units, ranging from 250 to 1,000 candlepower, are mounted at a height which prevents danger of glare. Their effect is so efficient that it is now found unnecessary to drive automobiles with bright lights burning. These lights lessen danger of holdups, make fire fighting more easy and prevent accidents. In addition to this, the new ones are mounted on highly ornamental cast iron standards.

Traffic signals at night, made possible by electrical energy, are also one of the features of safety and one of the outstanding additions to the beautification of the city.

In the world famous Rock Creek Park, especially designed and constructed street or highway lights make appreciation of the beauties of nature in the park many times more possible. In some locations about the city beautiful trees are flood-lighted so that their benefits are available for those who view at night, as well as those who see them by day.

For parties and during holiday seasons many Washingtonians string colored lights about their porches and about their grounds to avoid penting up the joys of the occasion indoors.

Beacon at Landover.

In Landover, near Washington, an altogether new application of electric light will soon be put into effect, when the airways beacon light is lighted to guide the New York-to-Atlanta fliers with their precious load of United States mail. The light will be mounted on a high tower and will be one of many over the route. It will be under the jurisdiction of the Lighthouse Bureau of the Department of Commerce.

In Washington electric signs play an important and dignified part in the commercial life of the city. These signs are to be seen all over the city and they are used by commercial establishments, banks and churches alike. Each is in itself a thing of beauty and each helps to cheer the city up at night.

Show windows of Washington shops do much also to establish the Capital's reputation. With a high intensity of soft light, with the actual source kept outside of visibility, the pretty things for the home and for wear are kept before the public eye in a most pleasing and attracting manner. Many plans for future advancement are based on studies of Washington show windows.

In these local features of the use of electricity outdoors at night, the Electric League of Washington plays a most important part. The energy which makes light possible is furnished by the Potomac Electric Power Co., members of the Electric League. The supplies, such as wiring, fixtures, etc., are from the local jobbing and fixture houses. The installations are made in the main by electrical contractor members of the league.

Experts in the various fields of illumination, who are members of the Electric League of Washington, are available for consultation to those who seek advice.

New Electric Clocks Meeting Many Needs

Among the new and interesting uses of electricity is the regulated electric clock, which can be secured from residences, churches, stores, outdoor and indoor, and anywhere else where time is considered an important thing to record.

At Madison Square Garden, one of these clocks has been installed to automatically ring the gongs for the rounds of the world-famous boxing bouts. These gongs ring exactly the proper number of seconds before each round and at the exact fraction of a second at which time the fight starts.

The Electric League of Washington has secured some interesting information regarding the control of these clocks, which soon will be available in Washington. Information in this regard will appear on a forthcoming "Post Electrical Page."

Decorative Lamps Ideal for Homes

Leading lamp manufacturers recently have developed and placed on the market new small lamps for decorative uses. These lamps will go into a space less than 1½ inches in diameter by 3 inches high.

According to the report received by the Electric League of Washington "the new lamp is an ideal source of light for light ornaments, for its size allows it to be put inside small translucent vases, hidden or tucked away in a multiplicity of different ways." The lamp is manufactured in clear, white, red, green, blue, yellow, amber, orange and flametint. It is made with an intermediate screw base and in the candelabra style as well as the regulars.

Electric League Recipes

By Mary Turner, Home Economist.

A good recipe for pie crust and the proper temperature of the oven solves pie making. Correct baking is solved by the "heat control" which gives the correct temperature and the uniform heat of the electric oven, a sure guarantee for perfect results. Pastry temperature is 450 degrees and the pie shell should be baked 10 minutes. Double crust pie with raw material 450 degrees for 10 minutes, then 400 degrees for 30 minutes. Single crust pies with soft custard mixture, 450 degrees for 10 minutes, then 325 degrees for 30 minutes. A meringue should be fluffy, light brown in color, tender in texture and almost entirely free from moisture. The oven temperature for meringues should be 300 degrees, not over 325 degrees at the finish. Bake 15 minutes for a two or three egg mixture. Use 1 tablespoon of sugar for each egg white, ¼ teaspoon of vanilla for each two egg whites.

Plain Pie Crust.

½ teaspoon baking powder.
½ teaspoon salt.
½ cup shortening.
Ice water.

Sift dry ingredients together, cut in shortening with the aid of two knives and add sufficient ice water to make a paste. Toss on a floured board and stack into a compact ball; begin to roll; fold and continue rolling. When smooth in texture, divide into equal parts, roll and shape for crusts. This makes two crusts.

Green Apple Pie.

Line a pie pan with plain paste and heap high with layers of thinly sliced apples. Dredge with sugar and dot with butter, a few drops of lemon juice and sprinkle with nutmeg, and cinnamon. Brush the edge of the paste with cold water, place upper crust, perforate with a fork, trim the edge and flute. Brush top of pie with cold milk or cream. Preheat the electric oven to 450 degrees. Set "heat control" for 450 degrees for 10 minutes, then reduce to 400 degrees for the remaining 30 minutes. Time of baking about 40 minutes.

Rhubarb Pie.

Rhubard, about 3 cups.
3 tablespoons flour.
1 cup sugar.
1 egg.

Wash, peel, and cut rhubarb in one-half-inch pieces, add one cup of sugar, flour, and egg, lightly beaten. Combine well and prepare crusts as for apple pie. Preheat electric oven to 450 degrees. Turn upper unit "off," lower unit "high." Set "heat control" for 450 degrees for ten minutes, then reduce to 400 degrees for about 20 minutes.

Cherry Pie.

1 quart cherries (stoned).
2 tablespoons butter.
4 tablespoons flour.
1 cup sugar.

Line a pie pan with pastry. Wash and pit the cherries. Blend sugar and flour and mix thoroughly with cherries. Fill pie pan, which has been lined with paste. Dot with butter. Add top crust. Press edges together and flute edge. Preheat the Electric Oven to 450 degrees. Set "Heat Control" for 450 degrees. Upper unit "off"; lower unit "high" for ten minutes. Then reduce "Heat Control" 400 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes.

Mr. Work's Pointer On Auction Bridge

SINCE I started in these Sunday articles to give a resume of answers to the questions that are most frequently asked, most of the articles have concerned the laws of the game; the answers given today will be to the popular type of question about the conventions.

INITIAL BIDS—A question very frequently asked is: "What is the weakest hand with which a Dealer should bid a suit, and what is the strongest hand with which a Dealer should pass?"

When Dealer bids a five-card suit his weakest holding (there being no strength in any other suit) is Ace-King and three others; and the strongest with which he should pass (once again there being no supporting strength in the other suits) is Ace-Queen-Ten and two others. When a four-card suit is being considered for the bid (there being no strength on the side), there are only two combinations that should be named, viz., Ace-King-Jack-Ten and Ace-King-Queen-x. Obviously the weakest fourcard suit that should be passed (there being no strength on the side) is Ace-King-Jack-nine.

BIDDING, KING - QUEEN - JACK SUITS—Many questions come to hand as to whether a King-Queen-Jack suit should be bid initially without side strength or, if side strength be required, how much, and also whether the length of the suit affects the bid.

King-Queen-Jack suits should not be bid initially without some side strength, but no great amount of such strength is required as the suit is inherently a much stronger one than a King-Queen which requires a quick trick to justify a bid. Five-card King-Queen-Jack suits should be bid with a side King, or possibly even with a side Queen-Jack-x. It requires the same side strength to justify bidding a six-card King-Queen-Jack suit as it does to bid a five-card suit. Four-card King-Queen-Jack suits should not be bid without a quick trick on the side.

BIDDING WITH TWO QUICK TRICKS—So much has been said through the air during the Radio Games, and has been written, concerning the requirement of two quick tricks in order to justify an initial suit-bid, that an erroneous impression has become prevalent to the effect that a player with two quick tricks always should bid, and that a player without two quick tricks never should. The latter is true as far as the bidding of one of a suit is concerned, but a preemptive suit bid (i. e., a bid of three or more) might be made without a quick trick. For example, a hand containing eleven cards of a suit headed by the Queen and two worthless cards on the side should be bid pre-emptively at the start of the hand, although there is no quick trick in it. It is the type of hand with which a bid of at least four should be made initially so as to shut out all other bidding if possible. On the other hand, there are many holdings with two quick tricks with which a Dealer should pass. Take, for example, a hand containing Ace-Queen and one small in each of two suits, and worthless cards in the other. It is a hand which, although it has more strength than two quick tricks, does not contain a sound initial bid. A three-card suit never should be bid initially, and a No Trump bid with two unstopped suits is not sound unless the two strong suits are both short (as they are in this case) and contain together a minimum of four quick tricks [which they do not in this case]. So this hand should be passed in spite of containing better than two quick tricks.

When bidding No Trump "quick tricks" are not the standard considered. The No Trump requisite is three suits stopped with a hand better than average; that is, better than one Ace, one King, one Queen and one Jack.

RAISING PARTNER'S SUIT WITHOUT NORMAL SUPPORT—When the initial bid is one of a Major and it is overcalled by the Second Hand, the Third Hand frequently is embarrassed when he has considerable strength but is without normal support for the partner's Major and without a stopper in the adverse suit. Take, for example, such a North hand as:

♠X-X-X
♥X-X
♦A-K-X-X
♣A-K-X-X

South (Dealer) having bid one Heart and West one Spade. Without a stopper in Spades, a No Trump cannot be thought of. Without normal support for partner's Hearts, the Heart suit should not be raised; but the hand is entirely too strong to pass. It is a case in which two Diamonds (the higher-valued of the two remaining suits) should be bid. Such bid accurately portrays the hand. It is tempting to raise partner's Major one-bid, but most dangerous to do so when holding less than normal support for his suit.

DOES A SCORE JUSTIFY AN UNSOUND INITIAL BID?—There is a popular delusion that a player who has a score is justified in bidding with hands which should be passed if his side had no score. This is not sound practice. The initial bid is in the main informatory. It Pictures the hand for the partner, and the fact that you have a score does not justify you in deceiving your partner as to the strength of your hand. Dependability in initial bidding is essential to partnership success. Any such hand as King-Ten and four others with a side King should not be bid regardless of whether its holder has a score or not. The score may properly affect later bidding, but it should not affect initial bidding.

Electricity Is Used To Slaughter Cattle

Berlin, April 14 (A.P.).—Electrocution of cattle has been tried out at the central slaughter house of Berlin. By means of two electrodes attached to the neck and spine, a galvanic current of 110 volts is passed into the body of the animal to be slaughtered. The shock proved sufficient in the case of steers and calves to cause instantaneous and painless death.

The trial executions were conducted in the presence of the directors of the slaughter house, a delegation of veterinary surgeons, representatives of the ministry of agriculture, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, members of the Protestant and Jewish communities and a delegation of wholesale butchers.

GERMANS EXTENDING AIR ROUTE LIGHTING

Will Make Possible Quick Service Between Berlin and London.

Hanover, Germany, April 14 (A.P.).—Berlin business men who have need to make trips to London will soon be able to close up their offices as usual at the end of the day, if necessary confer with their boards of directors in the evening, and yet reach the British capital by 10 o'clock the next morning.

Such a possibility will become a reality with the perfection soon of a system of night lighting of the air routes for planes from Berlin to Hanover, similar to that in use between Berlin and Koenigsberg on the route to Moscow. The regular plane will start from Berlin at 2 o'clock in the morning, reach Hanover by 4 a. m., and London by 10.

The night lighting system is also about to be introduced on the passenger routes Berlin-Munich, and Berlin-Gleiwitz, on the Polish border. The Berlin-Hanover route is to be extended to Cologne, with a view to making it possible to travel from Berlin to Paris partly by night.

Every three miles there are strong, red neon lamps; every 20 miles, a revolving search light of 150-250 million candle power. At intervals of 20-30 miles, emergency airdromes are provided for forced landing.

C. E. Mitchell, Banker, Also Good Electrician

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—If Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City Bank, ever loses his job, he should worry. "I could put on overalls and do a pretty creditable job as an electrician," he says. He was an executive for the Western Electric before coming to Wall street.

Floor Lamp Luminaire Now Has Electric Fan

Among the recently devised electrical novelties reported by manufacturers to the Electric League of Washington is a floor lamp luminaire, with two separate lamps, between which there is a good size electric fan.

This portable combination luminaire and fan is especially practical for use on the inclosed porches and in the cooler spots of the house where most of the time is spent in sweltering weather. One of its features is the height at which both the light source and the fan are located.

Transformer Useful For House Door Bells

Although it isn't necessary now to bother with batteries for good radio reception, there are still numbers of folks who do not seem to give up the old-time care of upkeep of all types of batteries to ring the front and the back door bell.

This nuisance can be overcome by the use of small, inexpensive transformers, made especially for the purpose, according to reports of the Electric League of Washington.

These transformers, it is stated, do not consume any noticable amount of electricity and stay in operation over a period of many, many years.

Electric Refrigerator a Necessity.

The electric refrigerators for home and store use is now an established necessity. Recent issues of Electrical World received by the Electric League give information of a new application of this type of refrigerator, which is used to cool water in school, stores and other places. This electric cooler is built to especially take care of bottled water.

Electric League Briefs

By NORMAN H. BARNES, Secretary

At a meeting of the Electric League of Washington held Thursday night, in addition to the business session, a feature film in six reels called "The Romance of Sleepy Valley" was shown. This film showed the progress of the American farm through the introduction of electricity. The picture was partially filmed in the Nation's Capital and proved of extraordinary interest to the electrical audience, composed of the league membership. On Wednesday night of last week the same picture was shown to employes of the Potomac Electric Power Co. At the league meeting Thursday A. F. E. Horn, president, presided.

In the monthly trade magazine of the Association of Electragists, International, for April the Washington Electric League is given much space in a descriptive article on "How to Progress by Cooperation." This story, which was especially prepared for electrical contractors, mentioned the "Electric League Briefs."

Joseph T. Kirchner, chairman of the sports and outings committee of the Electric League, has announced that arrangements are practically completed for the first golf tournament of the season. This spring classic will be held at Indian Spring on Thursday, May 17. The feature of the event will be the prizes to be awarded. There will be a large number of valuable prizes for many of the leaders, first among these being a silver trophy cup.

At the forthcoming convention of the Association of Electragists, International, L. T. Souder, prominent member of the Electric League of Washington, will be a member of the glad hand committee, a task for which "Doc" is especially well equipped. He is one of the best known and best liked electrical engineer-contractors in the country, having served on many national committees as well as having been president for two years of the Electric League of Washington, D. C.

R. L. McDormand, member of the executive committee of the Electric League, is installing a modern lighting job in the store of the Bonwol Credit Co., at 735 Seventh street northwest. This store will feature 60 modern reflectors in the show windows, and a half dozen lighting units using 500 watt lamps inside. It will be a model of lighting for the small high-class clothing store.

Emblems of the seal of the Electric League will soon be evident all over Washington. By popular demand of the membership of the league it has been decided to order a large supply of these emblems, and to allow all members to display them in show windows, on trucks and anywhere else where they should properly be shown.

In a recent issue of the Electrical Record, a picture of Dean Gallagher, manager of the Electric League, was featured with pictures of other league managers in other large cities of the country.

"By P. K. D." frequently appears over articles on this electrical page. "P. K. D." is Mrs. Phyllis K. Dunning, of the staff of the Society for Electrical Development, in New York City. The lady writes with a free and easy style about the "cabbages and kings" of the electrical industry. Her poetry is excellent, as are her recipes and household hints. And at times Mrs. Dunning selects subjects even more broad in range and which demonstrate even further versatility.

Red Seal wiring assures the convenient use of electric service in the home. Read Seal wiring in Washington, because it does this, is constantly becoming more and more popular. Almost all new buildings which are being erected are "Real Seal" because every one wants to be assured of the convenient use of electricity.

Theodore E. Mullican, electrical contractor, member of the committee on public information of the Electric League, has recently had the Red Seal award made to two new houses which he wired for electric service. These houses are located at 4800 Blagden terrace and 4801 Colorado avenue northwest.

Clayton James, Electric League member, is another who has been spreading the value of Red Seal, and has recent awards in five new residences, one of which is located on Holly street, in Cheverly, Md., and the other on River road, near the Bannockburn Golf Club.

Biggs & Kirchner, members of the Electric League of Washington, D. C., have recently completed wiring in a home which passes the requirements of Red Seal for adequacy. This electrically complete residence is located on the West end of Thirty-first street northwest.

ELECTRIC HOME

The Symbol of Adequate Wiring

The Society for Electrical Development, Inc.

Will it be wired for Real Electrical Convenience?

SUFFICIENT electrical wiring is the first requirement of a truly modern home. To be absolutely certain that the home you plan to build will have every electrical convenience make sure that it will be wired according to RED SEAL specifications.

Red Seal wiring not only meets every requirement of city and national electrical codes but every demand of the modern home. It insures absolute safety and dependability as well as the convenient use of electric service. It provides for ample duplex convenience outlets for every electrical need and properly placed switches in every room. Insist upon Red Seal Wiring if you want to take real comfort and enjoyment in your new home.

The proper lighting of the new home is another thing that is of utmost importance, but is so often slighted. Carefully selected and well arranged modern lighting fixtures add greatly to the charm and beauty of the rooms and give the home that artistic appearance so much desired.

Before you build, therefore, arrange with some contractor-member of The Electric League for an adequate wiring installation on the Red Seal Plan and consult a lighting fixtue dealer-member of the League as to the proper lighting of your new home. They are electrical experts who stand ready to aid you in getting the most for your money in the way of convenience, comfort, pleasure and satisfaction in the use of that most satisfying of all servants—electricity.

18,000 Watch Long Shot Score

Nealon Kay Beaten by 2 Lengths in $5,000 Prince George.

Sunsard Equals Mark for 5½ Furlongs in Winning Third.

By CHARLES WATSON.

BOWIE RACE TRACK, April 14.—The bugle sounded taps on the spring race meet of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association today as a great crowd saw Prickly Heat, racing under the colors of F. H. Smith, run a greatly improved race and win the $5,000 Prince George (Spring) Handicap, at a mile and a sixteenth, which featured the closing day at Prince George's park. The son of China Rock—Chrysalis 2d, neglected in the betting and held at odds of 12½ to 1, ran away from the field of ten starters in a gallant finish to earn the decision by two lengths over the favorite, Nealon Kay, in 1:46 1-5.

The winning of the Handicap by Prickly Heat marked the second victory in succession for the F. H. Smith colors, as Sunsard, a stable mate, accounted for the Clifton Forge Purse in the third race, equaling the track record.

Eighteen thousand racegoers saw the end of the Bowie meeting and the track was at its best. Many close finishes marked the day's racing and brought the public thrills galore and some good breaks in prices. A hazy sky cast its shadows over the O'Hara Oval but the weather man held off showers, another favorable break for the Bowie management.

A large fleet of trucks, chugging from early morning until late in the night, carried many horses to the Havre de Grace Race Track for the opening on Monday, where a fine program has been arranged for the opening day, including the Hartford Handicap.

The public has shown its appreciation of Bowie racing by turning out in great numbers during the meeting and the mutuels have increased their percentage likewise. The meeting has been blessed with good weather and the equine actors have played their part.

The horses were sent away to a walking start in the featured fourth race and Jockey J. Chalmers rushed Prickly Heat into the lead at once with a high turn of speed. Nealon Kay was running second when the first turn was reached and went into the lead rounding the turn. On the back stretch Nealon Kay remained in the lead closely followed by Banton with Prickly Heat which was running third easily, with his mouth wide open. Crossco was running fourth.

Nealon Kay, running fast and going along in front under a slight pull, relinquished the lead to the winner as the stretch was reached, and Jockey Chalmers put the Smith horse out in front and rode him gamely to victory by 3 lengths. Nealon Kay was second, half a length in front of Peter Peter, who finished third. Crossco, from the Wild Rose Farm, finished fourth, with Willie K. out of the picture after running a miserable race.

Twelve 2-year-olds paraded to the post for the first race of 4 furlongs, and the Nevada Stock Farm accounted

Miss Collett in Lead As Rain Halts Play

Biloxi, Miss., April 14 (A.P.).—Miss Glenna Collett, Providence, R. I., was leading Miss Marion Turpie, of New Orleans, 1 up, at the end of the first nine holes of the 36-hole championship flight finals of the Pan-American woman's amateur golf tournament here today. At the turn a violent rainstorm sent the gallery of several hundred and the players to shelter. Play was postponed until the storm abated. Later the remaining 27 holes were postponed until tomorrow because of continued rains.

Indian Wins Olympic Tryout in Southwest

Phoenix, Ariz., April 14 (A.P.).—Andrew Chimoney, 29-year-old Zuni Indian from New Mexico, won the right to represent the Southwest in the final Olympic marathon tryouts at Boston by winning the 26-mile 385-yard marathon, feature of the Greenway field day, here today.

His time for the gruelling run was 2 hours 53 minutes and 45 seconds.

Right on the heels of Chimoney was his teammate, Lutcie, 38-year-old Zuni Indian, who finished the distance in 2 hours 55 minutes and 55 seconds. He was the only other of seven starters to finish.

Snowswept Field For Soccer Battle

Chicago, April 14 (A.P.).—The New York Nationals and the Chicago Bricklayers will resume their unsettled argument over national soccer competition tomorrow probably on a cold, snowswept field.

Last Sunday, the teams battled two hours—one-half hour over the regulation playing period—to a 1-all tie in New York before 25,000 fans.

Hughie Hill, flashy Bricklayer inside right forward, who injured his leg in last Sunday's game, felt better today and expected to lead the Chicago attack tomorrow.

James Walder, of Philadelphia, will officiate the championship contest with John W. Woods and Albie Shallcross, of Chicago, as linesmen. The kick-off is billed for 3 p. m., Chicago time.

3 QUIT RACE; WANT LAP PRIZES

Motor Car Breaks Leg of Runner; 51-Mile Lap to Walker.

CHANDLER, Okla., April 14 (A.P.).—After plodding 1,500 miles in the transcontinental "Bunion Derby," a trio of entrants decided today that the $25,000 offered for first prize was no incentive for further punishment of their feet over the long road to New York.

The runners, Nester Erickson, of Port Chester, N. Y.; Luri Lossman, of Esthonia, and August Fegar, Ashtabula, Ohio, quit "the grind, announcing it would take ""daily prize money" to induce them to pound the pavement another mile.

They said they no longer saw any lure in the $25,000 posted for the contestant who turns in the best time at the end of the trail, and as there was no money to be picked up for the daily gaps, they were through.

Mike Baze, Huntington Park, Calif., was forced out today as a result of being struck by a motor car. He received a fractured leg.

Glusto Umek, Italian walking champion, was first into the control point today, leading by more than 10 minutes Peter Gavuzzi, of Southampton, England. Umek, whose home is in Trieste, negotiated the 51.9 miles from Oklahoma City in 7 hours and 44 minutes, and his elapsed time now is 312:46:01.

The Englishman, who has persistently clung among the leaders in elapsed time since a hopeful group of nearly 200 left Los Angeles March 4, has required 261 hours 16 minutes and 8 seconds to traverse the 1,543.4 miles completed.

Andrew Payne, of Claremore, Okla., finished in a tie with William Keer, of Minneapolis, for fifth place in today's lap in 8 hours 56 minutes. The Oklahoma youth still was the leader of the pack in total elapsed time, however, with 260:47:31.

RAY ENTERS MARATHON AT BOSTON

BOSTON, April 14 (A.P.).—A new record for the Boston marathon was established here today when eight entries brought the total to 208. A year ago there was 197 entered. Race officials believe that before the race is started, on April 19, there will be at least 250 at the starting line.

Clarence H. Demar, five times winner and the favorite this year, has been training daily and has set 2 hours 33 minutes as his goal. Demar won last year's race in 2 hours 40 minutes and 22 1-5 seconds, but he believes that this year's field will be much stronger.

Besides Demar three other previous winners have entered. They are Bill Kennedy, Frank Zuna and Carl Linder Another who will bear watching is Joie Ray, Illinois A. C. star and a former premier miler, who has entered the 26 mile 385 yard grind to win a trip to Amsterdam with the Olympic Team.

Jack Ryder, member of the Olympic coaching staff, appears quite optimistic regarding Ray's chances.

"Joie has always wanted to run this marathon," Ryder said. "He has nothing to lose. If he fails to finish in the first ten, and thus win a place on the Olympic marathon team, he can fall back on the 5,000 and 10,000 meter runs in the tryouts. He has everything needed, except knowledge of the course. He has speed, endurance and grit. He should do well."

Souders to Compete In Indianapolis Race

Indianapolis, Ind., April 14 (A.P.).—The Indianapolis Motor Speedway Co. today announced that George Souders of Lafayette, Ind., winner of the annual 500-mile race last year, would compete in the sixteenth annual renewal May 30

Souders was comparatively unknown on the major speedways of the country until he won the local race last year.

Lott Beats Shields For North-South Title

Pinehurst, N. C., April 14 (A.P.).—George M. Lott, jr., of Chicago, won the North and South singles tennis championship today by defeating Frank X Shields, New York, the national junior champion, by the score of 3—6, 6—2, 2—6, 6—4, 9—7. He smashed through to win in the fifth set after he had been on the verge of defeat.

Alice Francis, East Orange, N. J., eliminated Mrs. Stokes Weaver, New York in the final of the women's singles, 6—3 6—0, to win the title in this division.

7 Hilltop Errors Aid Jesuit Rivals to Triumph.

Fons Yields 7 Hits in Victory as Mates Pile Up Lead.

THE Holy Cross College Ball Team with a varied attack of slugging and smart, "heads-up" baseball, defeated the Georgetown University Nine without any great difficulty by the score of 8 to 2 yesterday afternoon at the American League Park.

Al Fons, the diminutive Holy Cross pitcher, made yesterday's victory over Georgetown quite an easy task for the Purple by his brilliant work. Yesterday's victory was the easiest Fons has scored in his three victories over Georgetown teams during his career at Holy Cross the last three years.

Fons granted the Hilltoppers only seven scattered hits, one of which was a long double to left by Buckey O'Neil in the first inning which scored Glenn, who had walked.

Georgetown's other score came in the third after Harrell had muffed Shanahan's throw of O'Neil's grounder with a double play in sight. Glenn, who advanced to third base on the error, scored on Graham's sacrifice fly. During the other seven innings Fons was complete master of the Georgetown batters as far as any more scoring was concerned.

The Hilltoppers also contributed in no small measure to their downfall by their loose and erratic play afield. The Georgetown fielders made seven errors during the contest and many of these aided the Purple in their scoring, especially during the early innings

Holy Cross made all its runs in pairs on four different occasions during the game and the first two scores of the visitors were personal gifts of the Hilltop battery men.

Hughes walked Harrell, first up, and then threw wildly on Shanhan's bunt After Savage had flied out, Shevlin singled sharply to right, scoring Harrell and advancing Shevlin to third. Shevlin scored when Donovan, in attempting to catch the runner off third, snapped a peg to left field.

Three clean, hard hits of the slugging variety gave Holy Cross two more runs in the third. Ryan opened the round with a double to center, Phelan singled to score Ryan and came home himself on Cahill's three-base hit to left center.

A timely hit by Hurley with the bases filled brought in another brace of runs in the fourth, while Savage's triple to left accounted for the final pair of runs in the seventh inning.

Sisler Insects No More; The Crowleys Organized

There's no sentiment in baseball.

Edgar Crowley, the Georgia Tech third baseman, arrived in town early yesterday to join the Washington ball club and late yesterday afternoon the George Sisler Insects of Spring Road announced that henceforth they would be known as the Edgar Crowley Insects.

Fame is fleeting, George Sisler can say this morning. But Washington's insect teams are not allowing sentiment to interfere with their rigid policy of infusing young blood into their make-up. Almost before President Griffith, himself learned Crowley's first name, the Edgar Crowley Insects were established, a player of more than 10 years' reputation discarded in favor of a new favorite.

Unaware of the signal honor that was to befall him, Crowley worked out at Griffith Stadium yesterday and was pronounced a promising prospect.

Waner Retains Lead At Top of "Big Six"

(Associated Press.)

Paul Waner, slugging outfielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, retained his lead at the top of the "Big Six" rating yesterday by cracking out a double against Red Lucas as the Reds shutout the Pirates, 5 to 0. Paul waited until the ninth inning to break into the hit column.

Dempsey to Officiate In Bout at Buffalo

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—Jack Dempsey will return to the ring, with the approval of his old antagonists, the New York State Athletic Commission—but as a master of ceremonies, not a fighter. The former heavyweight champion will officiate at the Queensberry Athletic Club, Buffalo, April 23

Orders for Jack Delaney and Jack Sharkey each to post $5,000 appearance forfeits ten days in advance of their heavyweight match at Madison Square Garden, April 30, were issued by the commission.

Tod Morgan, of Seattle, junior lightweight champion, and his challenger, Eddie (Cannonball) Martin, of Brooklyn, were ordered to post $2,500 forfeits each to guarantee weight and appearance for their 15-round title match at the Garden, May 4.

Jack Duffy, Toledo junior lightweight, was accepted as first on the list of challengers for a title bout, next in line after the forthcoming Morgan-Martin match.

Boy Fights for Life After Pole-Vault Spill

Cedar Rapids, Iowa., April 14 (A.P.). A Coe College freshman athlete, Glenn Campbell, of Ireton, Iowa, was fighting for his life today, a victim of a pole vault accident.

Campbell was derricked 10 feet in the air when his pole snapped. He fell on his head and the injury resulted in paralysis of his entire body.

Marberry, Realizing Hope, Starts Game Again Today

Special to The Washington Post.

BOSTON, Mass., April 14.—One of the peppiest members of Skipper Bucky Harris' crew these days is Fred Marberry, for the big Washington pitcher has visions of a four-year dream finally coming true. For the same reason that a tragedian believes he is a comedian and that a comedian believes he can play serious parts, Marberry, after becoming the greatest in the National game as a relief pitcher, suddenly craved to become a regular starter.

Marberry will pitch against the Red Sox this afternoon when Washington and Boston renew their series here. His opponent will be Danny MacFayden, the former schoolboy star, who beat the Nationals in the opening game last Tuesday.

For one reason or another, it was not until this spring that the Nats' leader decided to give "Firpo" his chance and, judging from his showing in his last three games, all of which he finished, he should prove a success in this new role.

Marberry's case is a most unusual one. He was purchased from Little Rock in the fall of 1923 and won four games, being charged with no defeats. The following season, Manager Harris had so many veterans on his mound staff, any one of whom was likely to tire after hurling a good six or seven innings, that he decided to use Marberry as often as possible as a saver of games.

And his scheme worked out so well, thanks to Fred's strength and peculiar faculty for being able to step to the hill in pinches and deliver, that the Nationals won their first American League pennant and later a world's title, with Marberry doing yeoman service in the championship set, too.

That year, the big hurler took part in 50 games, none of which he started. With Dutch Ruether, another veteran, added to the squad, Marberry filled relief roles in 1925 and again with great success, his record of participating in 55 games—more than one-third of the total played—once more being a big factor in winning another pennant.

Marberry, unfortunately, injured his arm during the waning days of the season and was not available in the world's series with the Pirates. Otherwise, this set might have ended differently.

In 1926 Harris was forced practically to rebuild his pitching staff, but he still found Marberry so useful and effective as a relief flinger that he was retained in this role. During that season Fred participated in 64 games.

Miljus Is Pounded Off Hill in 7th; Allen Is Injured.

CINCINNATI, April 14 (A. P.).—The Cincinnati Reds locked Pittsburgh scoreless in the National League cellar for another day when they clouted Miljus off the mound in the seventh inning and won, 5 to 0, today. Lucas held the Pirates to five hits. Miljus retired in favor of Brame after the Reds had hit two singles and a double with none out. The Reds drove two more safeties through Brame for four runs in the seventh inning. Ethan Allen, Reds' center fielder, sprained his ankle in the seventh and was carried off the field.

Tribe Jump Stoner; Tigers Drop 4th, 8-6

Detroit, Mich., April 14 (A.P.).—The Detroit Tigers lost their fourth consecutive today when the Cleveland Indians took the first game of the series here, 8-6. Stoner was driven from the box in the first inning, when Cleveland piled up a three-run lead. Aided by two costly errors by Harry Rice, which allowed three runs, Cleveland added five runs during the remaining innings to head off Detroit rallies in the eighth and ninth innings.

Baby Whale Winner In 133-Mile Race

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—Baby Whale, tiny outboard motored craft, weighing but 120 pounds and only 14 feet long, won the 133-mile race down the Hudson River from Albany to New York today, making the run in 4 hours and 47 minutes. The craft was driven by Kirk Ames, New York sportsman.

Thirty-four of the little speedsters started the race from Albany this morning for a prize of $500. The run was the longest ever attempted by outboard motored craft. Baby Whale, of class C register, was equipped with a 16-horsepower motor. Her average speed was 29.7 miles per hour. Water conditions were smooth.

CUBS DEFEAT CARDINALS, 4 TO 1

Frankhouse Is Routed; Blake Scatters Hits; Grimm Gets Homer.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 14 (A.P.).—The St. Louis Cardinals suffered their first defeat of the season today, when the Chicago Cubs won, 4 to 1.

Fred Frankhouse, the youngster who startled the baseball world with five successive victories last fall, was the losing pitcher. He was found for nine hits and two runs in the first eight inning. The first score came in the fifth inning when Grimm hit a home run.

English Women Golf Stars Win Over Men

Stoke Poges, England, April 14 (A.P.) Differences in golf length and strength of noted men and women players were more than offset by a nine-stroke handicap given the women today, and the so-called weaker sex defeated the men, nine singles matches to one.

In the feature matches, Miss Joyce Wethered, former British women's champion, defeated Cyril Tolley, the long-driving international star, 4 up and 3 to play. Mlle. Simone Thion de la Chaume, accurate young French player, who holds the British women's title, downed Roger Wethered, former amateur champion, 1 up.

New York Rangers Win Hockey Crown

Montreal, Quebec April 14 (A.P.).—The gallant band of New York Rangers brought the historic Stanley Cup, emblematic of the world's professional hockey championship, back to the United States for the second time in the 36 years of competition by conquering the Montreal Maroons in the fifth and deciding game tonight by 2 to 1

Some 14,000 frenzied Dominion fans saw their favorites go down to defeat in the Forum Rink. In spite of the setback for the Maroons, the gallery gave the Rangers a big ovation as they carried away the hockey championship in their glorious finish. The Maroons as well were cheered for their showing in the great struggle.

The Rangers jumped into a one goal lead in the first period when Boucher whipped a sizzling drive into the cage which was too fast for Benedict to stop.

The final session was the most exciting of the game. As in the previous sessions, the Maroons did all the puck-carrying. Boucher broke through a persistent Montreal defense and with only one man between himself and Benedict, outguessed the two of them to clinch the game. With only three minutes of play then remaining, Phillips took a pass from Siebert and succeeded in driving the puck past Miller.

Olympic Games Hit By Dutch Clergymen

Amsterday, Holland, April 14 (A.P.) Hostility to the forthcoming Olympic games here has arisen in Dutch religious circles and a report on the subject by seven Amsterdam clergymen has been made public.

The report, adopted at a recent meeting of the council of the Dutch Gereformeerde Church of Amsterdam, which must not be confused with the better known and older Dutch Reformed (Herformde) Church, says:

"Taking all things into consideration, there appears to us to be ample justification for decisively opposing the forthcoming Olympic games. Here everything is opposed to the principle of loving God above all else and loving one's neighbor as oneself. The strongest being is here the most exalted and is raised to the place which God alone should occupy. The neighbor, by craving for notoriety and personal glorification, allows himself to be exploited in order to satisfy the craving of the masses for sensation and emotion.

"Not only the character of the games but also everything connected with them must compel us with all the earnestness at our command to issue a warning and strengthening word against this glorification of man, against this cult of the hero, which is opposed to practically all God's sacred commands.

(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

BOSTON, Mass., April 14.—The weather man won the decision here this afternoon in the scheduled battle between the Red Sox and Nationals, which was called because of rain at the end of the fifth inning with the score standing, 0-0. As the contest itself was tied and a legal game was played, helping to fill the coffers of both clubs, only the fans were the losers, and they deserved to lose.

It rained at intervals all morning and the air was damp and cold. Folks willing to risk their lives on a day like this deserved some punishment. As a matter of fact, the game was a fine one as far as it went with Milton Gaston for the Expectation Purse, when Caravan, with Jockey R. Peternell in the saddle, beat the Whitney favorite, Letalone, to the wire by half a length in 0:47 2-5.

Caravan, breaking well, took the lead, with Letalone running in second position. Letalone went to the rail in the stretch attempting to save ground, but could not overtake the winner. Glacial finished third. The Nevada Stock Farm, the property of G. Wingfield, has won the 2-year-old horse honors at Bowie.

After a delay at the post Starter Milton sent the thirteen platers away over the 6½-furlong route in the second race with Fable taking the lead. Majuba was leading at the end of the first furlong with Son Ami second. Nearing the turn Lenny went to the front with Son Ami second and Fable running third. Son Ami took the lead into the stretch with Alex Woodliffe moving up fast and now running third.

The finish was close with Alex Woodliffe winning by a nose from Son Ami and Bristol finishing third. The running time was 1:20 flat.

Sunsard equaled the track record of 1:05 1-5 in the third race of 5½ furlongs, when the son of Sun Briar—Rhajes, racing in best form, was returned the winner in a drive over the H. Rozier Dulany filly, Single Star, by three lengths.

Seven starters went to the post in the Clifton Forge purse, the secondary feature of the day. Single Star set the pace as the webbing rose, with Poly second. At the turn Poly took the lead, with Sunsard second and Single Star third. In the stretch Sunsard went to the front, with Single Star coming fast in a vain effort to reach the winner. Poly had stopped to a walk and Contemplate finished third. Sunsard's victory was the first real upset of the day.

The Thorncliffe purse for 4-year-olds and upward, at 7 furlongs, resulted in an upset when Gold Bet, the W. T. Anderson colt, outlasted Memoria in a driving finish to win by a head in 1:25 4-5.

The winning of the race by Gold Bet was a hard blow to the talent who backed the R. L. Freeman entry of Corporal and Charles H. to the limit.

Charles H. jumped into the lead as the barrier went up, with Memoria running easily in second place. Near the stretch turn Corporal moved into second place, with Memoria lapping him. Memoria now went into the lead as the stretch was reached and looked as though she was going away to win in a walk, but Gold Bet was just commencing to run, moved up with the field and was coming fast on the outside. They raced head and head to the wire, with Gold Bet gaining the decision by a whisker. Corporal was third.

The sixth race at a mile and 70 yards for 4-year-olds and upward was won by Tester, the son of Peter Pan, in a great finish, when he led Golden Volt to the wire by half a length.

Golden Volt set the pace to the first turn when Tester took the lead and was never headed to the finish. The winner just lasted, however, with Golden Volt second and Fairyman third.

Tagwell, running in his best form, proved the best of a band of thirteen platers that faced the starter in the final race of the day and was returned the winner in a drive over Maxie, who finished second with Roland's Request third.

Father-and-Son Shoot Annexed by Monroes

Dr. D. Monroe and his son, Dr. W. D. Monroe, jr., scored in the shoot-off over Dr. J. C. Wynkoop and Kelly Wynkoop, in the father and son race at the Washington Gun Club yesterday afternoon. These teams were tied in the regular shoot with 86 x 100.

Joseph Hunter and Boyd Mayhew were the sharpshooters in the four months trophy contest, with the former winning the first leg from the 18-yard mark with a 23 and the latter taking his victory at the 16-yard mark with a 24.

L. L. Lane was high gun in the doubles with 41 x 43. Monroe and Marcey were tied for second with a score of 37.

The local shooters will engage in a triangular shoot on Saturday with the Oriole Gun Club, of Baltimore, and Gettysburg Club, over the Baltimore Highlands' traps.

Lane, 40; Stine, 41; Hunter, 41; Bartholomew, 34; Green, 39; W. Wilson, 44; Monroe, jr., 44; Mayhew, 43; C. S. Wilson, 34; Parsons, 40; Dr. Wynkoop, 44; Silvester, 45; K. Wynkoop, 44; Masons, 40; C. F. Wilson, 39; Dr. Monroe, 44; Burrows, 45; Livesey, 45; Marcey, 44.

Brady and De Borell Star in B. C. Meet

The performances of W. Brady and T. De Borell in the class under 11 years old featured the first annual track meet of the Boys Club staged yesterday on the Boys Club Athletic Field. Sixty-five boys, comprising four divisions ranging up to 16 years, participated in the meet. Brady and De Borell were tied in their class, the former winning the gold medal in the toss-up.

John Mandes won in the 11-to-13-year class after a hard battle for points with Edward Adams. Larrimer ran away with the honors in the 13-to-15-year division, while Himmelfarb was high-point winner in the 15-16-year-old class.

Gold, silver and bronze medals were awarded to the winners, runners-up and third places, respectively.

Under 11 years—Won by Brady; second, De-Borell; third, Kousteuns.

13 to 15 years—Won by Larrimer; second, T. Downes; third, C. Gaskins.

15 to 16 years—Won by Himmelfarb; second, G. Lassie; third, H. Cole.

DOGS TO RACE AT NIGHT AT LAUREL

New Speedway Officials Plan Greyhound Racing June 15.

GREYHOUND racing at the Laurel-Baltimore automobile speedway during the off-season of horse racing in Maryland is planned by the newly formed Laurel Kennel Co., which will hold its first races next June 15 at night under the glare of arc lights.

The Laurel Kennel Co. is affiliated with the International Greyhound Racing Association and the best racing dogs which compete on the American circuit will be brought to the speedway, the company's officials announce.

It is planned to hold a meeting of indefinite duration with the races to be conducted on the same plan that governs horse racing in Maryland. If it is decided to conduct wagering on the races, a certificate form of betting will be installed, similar to the system in vogue in Miami and other dog racing centers.

The greyhounds will compete in races ranging from a quarter mile to five eighths of a mile in distance and will chase a mechanical rabbit down the runways. It is planned to hold at least one hurdle race every night.

Officials of the company have not completely abandoned the plan to resume auto racing at the Speedway and are now in communication with the American Automobile Association, which controls the best drivers now in competition.

Auto racing under both the A. A. A. and the "outlaw" dirt track drivers association was not a success at the Speedway a few years ago and the track passed into the hands of receivers from whom the present owners made the purchase.

In the event that negotiations with the A. A. A. are not consumated, it is the plan of the new company to hold a race for stock cars which are not now held under A. A. A. supervision.

The speedway is being remodeled and the greyhound track is being constructed in the infield with lights being erected at frequent distances around the ovals. The huge grandstand which seats 25,000 persons will be available for spectators.

Vantage Belle Wins Newbury Spring Cup

Newbury, England, April 14 (A.P.).—The lightly handicapped Vantage Belle, owned by D. M. Gant, won the Newbury Spring Cup today by three-quarters of a length from F. Gretton's Ceteb, with B. Goulson's top-weight Orbindos third. Twenty horses ran the mile of this important spring handicap.

The betting was 100 to 8 against Vantage Bell, 20 to 1 against Ceteb and 10 to 8 against Orbindos.

Turner Gets Return Match With Nelson

Freddy Meyers, the colorful wrestler from Chicago, who threw George Ellis in straight falls last week at the Arcadia, is again to appear on the program arranged by Manager John S. Blick for next Thursday night.

Meyers is matched with Andy Zaharoff the Russian cossack, a giant in stature who has made an enviable record in the middle West. Zaharoff has been credited with a decision over Ed "Strangler" Lewis and a number of other leading grapplers.

In addition to the main bout Manager Blick has arranged a return match between Joe Turner and "Rough House" Nelson, who defeated Turner last week.

The first preliminary will get under way promptly at 8:30 o'clock. The major bouts are scheduled to go best two out of three falls.

Shamrock A. C. Holds Meeting Tomorrow

Manager Glascoe, of the Shamrock A. C., has issued a special meeting for Shamrock players and candidates at 8 o'clock tomorrow night at his home, 1316 L street southeast. The following players are requested to be present: Moran, Haas, Smithson, Corbin, Heil, Bleir, Claude, Curtis, Clark, Hassover, Coleman and Tennyson.

BOWIE BRIEFS

Special to The Washington Post.

BOWIE RACE TRACK, April 14.—With the close of Bowie, where the most successful meeting in the history of southern Maryland racing was staged, horsemen have turned their attention to Havre de Grace where a thirteen-day meeting starts on Monday with the renewal of the $10,000 Hartford handicap, the day's outstanding feature.

Matt Brady will ship the J. E. Davis stable to Pimlico next Thursday to take up quarters for the coming Pimlico meeting. There will be fifteen head in the shipment.

Bob Frend schooled about 70 horses from the barrier at the "Graw" this morning. W. Hurley, trainer for the Idle Hour Farm has arrived at the track and will take charge of the E. R. Bradley horses.

Polar Sea was claimed out of the second race yesterday by E. Haughton for $3,500. Everglade is now the property of J. E. Smallman who claimed him yesterday for $1,775. This makes a total of nineteen horses claimed this meeting.

T. J. Donohue predicts a great future for the apprentice rider H. Little, the Toronto lad whom Donohue engaged last summer. Little has ridden three winners at Bowie and will be seen in the saddle on all of Donohue's horses.

E. S. Welter schooled Scapa Flow, Bateau and Greenock from the barrier at Pimlico yesterday. He had 42 2-year-olds and 20 older horses at the gate.

Fore'n Aft

On the Potomac

By W. F. SEALS.

WHEN Commodore R. S. Doyle shoved off from the wharf of the Capital Yacht Club in his cruiser Margretan Friday, bound for Baltimore, he did something to the legal yachting season that is akin to prying off the lid. As far as we know, this trip is the first to be taken by any yachtsman from Washington so far this spring.

Most all of the cruising members of local clubs are about ready for the season now, with only a few of the larger boats remaining out on the railways for a little painting or refinishing. The yacht Bess, owned by Harry Sheridan, is on the ways at the Capital Yacht Club, but will be in the water ready for service this week.

According to a number of river men to whom we have talked, cruising is going to be more popular this year around the Chesapeake Bay section than it ever has before. It is pointed out that several cruiser races are now being planned with substantial inducements in the way of trophies.

A series of such races is to be held by Washington yachtsmen, and it is promised that these events will be started and finished from a line marked with buoys somewhere along Hains Point. The races are to be of such distance as can be covered in a few hours' running and will be held on Sundays.

"Art" Seagren has recently returned from his vacation trip to the Coast, and announces that he will have a Richardson cruiser and a Cris-craft runabout in the water by May 1 at the Corinthian Yacht Club, for the purpose of demonstrating. This ought to be a good chance for a lot of people who have been just a little bit coaxed by the lure of the water to become acquainted with some of the thrills of boating.

The Corinthian Yacht Club will have a station this summer down on the West River at Hartges Boat Yard. A new wharf is to be built and the Corinthian flag will be flown at that point to guide members to their anchorage.

A committee of six members of the Corinthian Club has been appointed to draft the rules and by-laws for the President's Cup Regatta Association and otherwise to serve in the formation of this new organization to stage the annual speed boat classic on the Potomac this fall. The committee as announced is: Arthur Middleton, chairman; William A. Rogers, Gardner Orme, Nelson Thomas, Franklin D. Jones and E. Hume Talbert.

According to Chairman Middleton the President's Cup Regetta Association is to be a nonprofit making corporation composed of delegate members from the yacht clubs and trade bodies of Washington. It is felt that by staging the regatta under this arrangement the citizens of Washington will feel a real ownership in the event and that it will then be more truly a civic enterprise.

Vice Commodore W. A. Rogers has sent out the invitations to a smoker to be tendered all Washington yachtsmen at the Eastern Power Boat Club on Saturday evening, April 21. The purpose of this smoker, according to Bill, is so that members of the various clubs shall become better acquainted and to coordinate the interests of yacht clubs along the Potomac.

Maj. Emmory, of the Washington Motor Boat Sales Co., predicts a real fleet of Penn Yan outboards for the Potomac this summer. He has sold six of these little hulls, the most recent of which was to Councilor Catalani of the Italian Embassy. This boat has a Johnson twin motor. It will be kept at the Corinthian.

A movement has been started for the formation of an outboard racing club for Washington with an outboard regatta planned for early in June. Frank Oswald, who heads the movement, will announce definite arrangements for the club shortly.

EASTERN AND BUSINESS OPEN SCHOOL SERIES FRIDAY

Pitcher Bears Hopes of Stenogs

Schwartz, Southpaw, Makes Debut in Title Series.

Guyon Boasts Many Hurlers and Hard-Hitting Team.

By ARTHUR A. HEYWOOD.

THE 1928 interhigh school baseball series will open at Central Stadium Friday afternoon, when Business engages Eastern, and for the first time in several years Business is given a fair chance to win the title.

The hopes of the Business Team will rest mainly upon Max Schwartz, left-handed pitcher. While Schwartz will be making his first bow in the series, many are of the opinion that he will be one of the sensations of the title play.

Schwartz will have ample opportunity to display his ability in the opening game, as he faces in the Eastern Team one of the hardest-hitting aggregations in the high schools. Coach Guyon's players have not played smoothly afield, but his men have been swinging a powerful bat in the early games.

The hitting of the Business Team has been somewhat of a disappointment to its followers this spring, but Coach Woodworth will send them through lengthy stick drills the early part of the week.

If Business swings in line and May regains the form that made him the most dangerous slugger of the series last season, the game Friday will be an interesting battle, to say the least.

Eastern will undoubtedly send Capt. Andrew Oehmann to the mound, although if he fails to start Faber, Curtin, Clark, Hanna and Montague have shown good form this season. These six pitchers alternated Friday against Emerson and allowed only five hits.

Coach Guyon is grooming Edwards, an infielder, a man who may be dangerous with the bat throughout the series. Friday he came to bat three times, collecting a home run, a triple and a single. McCullough seems to have clinched a position at first base, which gives Eastern a well-rounded out catching staff, as Jim Munro has moved from first to behind the bat and Wood and Snyder are capable receivers. Hisle or Doyle at second, Edwards at short and Hook at third may be the infield to start. In the outfield, Eastern has Shapiro, Eagle, Wood and Matthews.

Business will have Lewis catching, May or Rich at first, Cohen at second, Bernie Jones at short and Keefer at third. In the outfield will be R. Jones, Duryee, Singman and Lash.

Next week all of the teams will have seen action as Western and Tech are slated to meet on Tuesday and Central and Eastern on Wednesday. Tech is regarded as the outstanding favorite, as it has the same club which won the pennant last year with but two exceptions. It has a well-rounded pitching staff. Being the favorite may be a decided handicap, as favorites in the baseball series of the past have fared none too well.

Rialto Bowling Team Wins at Hyattsville

The Rialto Bowling Team defeated the Hyattsville pin men on the Arcade Alleys at Hyattsville last night, when the Washington stars upset a total of 1,731 pins to 1,698 for the Maryland team. Capt. Joe Kronman led in the victory with a smashing set of 397. Max Rosenberg aided with 387.

Sheehy and Kessler won the doubles for Hyattsville, when they outrolled Kronman and Rosenberg, of the Rialtos, 688 to 670 pins.

Sandlot Teams To Launch Another Active Week Today

DUE to good weather and the fact that those who attend school were enjoying Easter holidays, last week proved to be one of the busiest weeks that sandlot teams will engage in throughout the season. A large number of senior, junior, midget, insect and peewee nines were organized and played for the first time this season.

Due to the fact that the Capital City League will open almost a month earlier than last year and because many of the teams were late in organizing, the entry list for the league will be held open another week or ten days. The senior, junior, midget and insect sections of the league are almost full and teams desiring to play in any of the above sections are urged to get in touch with Arthur A. Heywood, secretary and treasurer of the league, at The Post sports department.

April 20 is when the teams from the unlimited down to the insects must pay their entry money. Section A, of the unlimited class, is already filled, but unlimited teams wishing to play in section B will have an opportunity to enter, in the next few days. With all of the best known unlimited teams of this section already entered, interest in unlimited sandlot baseball will center almost solely in the Capital City League.

Many of the unlimited clubs will see action today, while a great number more have listed practice drills.

The Georgetown A. C., claimants of the District title, and the A. B. & W. Busmen, both entered in Section A of the Capital City League, will play today at 3 o'clock on the Arlington diamond. This promises to be one of the feature unlimited games today, as both clubs have strong line-ups. The Georgetown A. C. will meet Monday, when contracts for the Capital City League will be signed.

R. L. May will toss out the first ball today and the Fort Myer band will be on hand to make the Busmen's opening game a big success.

St. Joseph's, champions of the Capital City League last season, will practice today at 10:30 o'clock at the Plaza. All players and candidates are requested to report in uniform. The team will open on April 22 against Eastport or the Georgetown A. C.

The Ross Council Junior Order United American Mechanics will play the Herndon-Fairlous at Ashburn on May 6. The Ross Nine, which will play in Section B of the League, meets Woodridge, another league entrant, on the latter's field today at 2:30 o'clock.

Manager Glascoe will call his Shamrocks together tomorrow night at 1316 L street southeast. Moran, Hass, Smithson, Corbin, Heil, Caudle, Curtis, Clark, Hassover, Coleman, Bleir and Tennyson are urged to report. The team will sign contracts for the Capital City League.

Manager Sanderson, whose Auth team won the senior title with ease last year, will play unlimited ball this season. He is seeking a game for his team today. He will also have a strong junior club. The Juniors will be on No. 9 Diamond at 11 o'clock.

The Clovers, of Section B, scored a decisive victory last week over the Marions and seek more opposition. Call Atlantic 3058-W.

The Maryland A. C. of section A has organized another strong club. The team defeated Edmond's, 12-0.

Mount Rainier will open today with the Hilltops on Mount Rainier Field at 3 o'clock. The Hyattsville All Stars will play Berwyn on the latter's diamond.

The White Havens seek opposition from unlimited teams. Call Cleveland 3610. For games with the Red Sox call Atlantic 3777-W.

The Hess A. C. will play the Alexandria Cardinals today at 3 o'clock. Hess players are to meet at the Virginia Avenue Playgrounds at 1:30 o'clock. For games call Amidon at Lincoln 1655-J.

Manager Ingram is collecting his Addison players and plans a strong club. The team is entered in section A of the Capital City League. For games with the Addisons call Franklin 10499.

The Takoma Tigers will hold forth today at 3 o'clock on the Silver Spring diamond, meeting the Kennedys.

The Army War College has organized and plan to play in section B of the league. For early season games call Master Sergt. J. A. Meis at Main 8775, branch 73.

The Simpson Nine, opening its season today, will have as its opponent the Maryland A. C. The game will be played on the Maryland club's diamond.

Manager Minnicks's Petworth Club, also a league entrant, scored an easy victory over the Park View Club.

Senior class teams will be busy today on the local diamonds. The Aztecs, Holy Rosarys, Cardinals, Pals and a number of others having regular or practice games scheduled.

The Holy Rosarys will meet the Aztecs at 3 o'clock on No. 3 diamond. For games with the Aztecs call Lincoln 8624. The Pals and Cardinals play at 9 o'clock at the Missouri avenue playground.

The Capitol seniors, who plan a strong club, were recently measured for uniforms.

The Manhattan seniors and the Senators clash at 1 o'clock today. For games with the Manhattans call Lincoln 8198 after 5 o'clock. For games with the newly organized Cardinals call Cleveland 6042.

The Senator seniors, who are entered in the league, have a strong club and are seeking some firm or individual to back them. Those interested call Charles Beall at Columbia 3062.

A few vacancies are open for junior teams which desire to play in the Capital City League. The Montrose juniors won in a practice game over the Collegians, 6 to 5 last week. Both clubs are entered.

The Northeast Bulldogs seek games with junior clubs. Call Wilbur Porton at Lincoln 4.

The Midget or American League section of the Capital City League has jumped from sixteen to eighteen teams. The Park View Midgets and Corinthian Preps make the two extra teams.

Other midget teams planning to enter are urged to make their intentions known as soon as possible as the legion posts will meet this week and each post will select its team. Four sections of six teams each are desired.

The Noel House Team plans to play this season as the Lincoln Post Team. The team will definitely decide in a few days.

The Sam Rice Midgets recently defeated the Powhatans. The team has also scheduled the Corinthians and the Liberty A. C.

The Montrose will meet the Miller Furniture Nine today at 3 o'clock on diamond No. 1.

The Saks Midgets went ten innings before they defeated the Evening Star Nine. The players are to report on diamond No. 5 at 12:30 for their game with the Samosets.

The Cassie Midgets seek games with strong clubs. Call Cleveland 1808. The Aztecs were leading the Cassies, 5 to 4, yesterday, when the teams had to give up the diamond.

The Bobby Reeves Midgets are anxious to sign more players. Candidates communicate with the manager at 1119 K street northwest.

For games with the Mercurys call Franklin 2475. The team seeks a backer or a legion post to support it in the forthcoming legion series of the Capital City League.

The Ace Midgets will practice today at 3 o'clock on the Seaton Park diamond.

The Columbia Heights Midgets seek a game for today. Call Adams 6205. For games with the Arcadians call Manager Curtin at Columbia 4340.

Among the numerous insect and peewee teams recently organized are the Lisenbees, Tigers, Catholic University, Warwicks, Crescent, George Sisler, Hortons, Woodridge, Arcadians, St. John's Shamrocks, Yorke Insects, Georgetown Peewees, Chevy Chase, Pirates, Friendship, Royals, Bluege, Iroquois, Kanawhas, Senators, Tris Speakers, St. Pat's, St. Francis Xavier, Duponts and St. Paul's Eagles.

The Walter Johnson Insects triumphed over the St. Paul's Team, 12 to 5, yesterday on diamond No. 7.

Tomagni pitched a steady game yesterday as the Northern Midgets defeated the Haldyes, 7 to 6. For games with the Northerns, telephone Manager Joe Mischaelin at Franklin 1734-J.

The Powhatan Midgets defeated the Lyon Village Midgets, 4 to 2, yesterday. For games with the Powhatans telephone Manager Swift at Lincoln 9067.

Murphy pitched the Senator Insects to an 8-3 victory over the Burns Team yesterday on the Monument Lot. Sisler led the hitting with two singles and a double.

Two Sam Rice Teams will seek action today. The Juniors will engage the Friendship Nine at Fairlawn at 3 o'clock, while the Midgets will meet the Corinthians on the Ellipse at 1 o'clock. The Sam Rice Club will hold its annual card party tomorrow night at Masonic Hall.

The Chevy Chase and Addison Teams will preface their campaign in section A of the Capital City League today when they meet in a game on Friendship Field, starting at 3 o'clock. Larry Schneider is the probable pitching choice for Chevy Chase, with D. Oldring catching.

For games with the Chevy Chase Team before the start of the Capital City League telephone Manager Poore at Cleveland 2483.

Games with unlimited teams in Maryland or Virginia are sought by the Simpson's Dairy Nine. Manager Brown may be reached at Atlantic 70.

A double-header has been listed for today by the Collegians. Miller and Holt will be the battery for the Collegians against the Aces, starting at 11 a. m. on the east Ellipse. Against the Boys Club Standards, on diamond No. 3, Grist and Kober will work. Collegian players are to report at the east Ellipse at 10:30 a. m.

In its opening games of the season, the Junior Order U. A. M., No. 41, will meet the National Circles at 2:30 o'clock today at Cabin John. For games with the Junior Order Team address Manager Cleve Church, Bethesda, Md., R. F. D. No. 11.

The Tris Speakers, Capital City League contenders, desire games with insect teams. Manager Edward McDevitt may be reached at Decatur 1252-J.

Teams desiring games with the Seminoles should call Franklin 1573. A game is desired for Saturday with an insect team.

Powhatan and Park View Midget Teams are to clash today on Diamond No. 5. Powhatan players will meet on the diamond at 12:30 o'clock.

The Merchants League, composed of five teams, will open its schedule April 16 with the Chestnut Farms and Thompson's Dairy Teams competing in the inaugural game.

SIX CONTESTS THIS WEEK FOR MD.

Lacrossemen to Play Georgia Tech Team Tomorrow.

UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND'S Lacross Twelve, which has won easily in a practice tilt and two regular games with Randolph-Macon and Harvard, is hoping it will get more of a test when it meets the Georgia Tech Team at College Park tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

While the Yellow Jackets have not had the foundation for the game that has been enjoyed at Maryland, the team is playing its third season and is made up of the finest sort of material. In fact, quite a few of the Golden Tornado's football stars are with the stickwielding combination.

This contest will be one of six in which the Old Liners will figure during the week, Maryland meeting three Conference foes in all. Here are the other engagements:

April 21—Baseball: Virginia Poly at College Park. Track: Naval Academy at Annapolis. Tennis: Western Maryland at College Park.

Saturday's match will be the first for the tennis team and should serve to give a line on its ability.

Freshmen teams in track, lacrosse, baseball and tennis also will have engagements during the week or will be busy preparing for battles. All the available space for athletics at College Park is taxed to its capacity.

Record List of Schools In Meet at Maryland U.

University of Maryland has sent out entry blanks to the schools of Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, and North Carolina for the South Atlantic Scholastic championship meet and a fine array of schoolboy athletes doubtless will compete in the games to be held as a part of the annual field day at College Park on May 5.

In addition to the scholastic competition, which will include thirteen events for the open meet, and five closed to county high schools of the State, there will be a Varsity lacrosse game with Navy, a tennis match with Johns Hopkins and a dual meet with George Washington, the last mentioned being run concurrently with the scholastic affair.

Last year the Maryland scholastic games conflicted with the quadrangular meet among Episcopal High, Woodberry Forest, Tome and Gilmand Country School, but this season the latter has been set for May 12, and entries for these four schools is expected to help swell the list for the College Park carnival.

Hamby Returns Here; May Be Farmed Out

Mel Hamby, former third baseman of the Shamrock A. C. Team, has returned to Washington following a trial with the Waco Club in the Texas League. Hamby was considered a promising prospect by Manager Del Pratt, of Waco, until he injured a shoulder muscle and was forced out of the line-up.

During his stay with the Waco Club, Hamby participated in most of the exhibition games against the major league teams and his fielding earned him much recognition. It is believed that the Waco Club will farm him to a Virginia League team. Until that time, Hamby will play with the St. Joseph's Club in Section A of the Capital City League.

MARYLAND U. SECOND IN MEET

Harvard's 100 Points Win; Matthews and Thomas Score.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., April 14.—Harvard rolled up 100 points in this afternoon's track meet to leave the University of Maryland and William and Mary trailing well behind with 37 4-5 and 16 1-5, respectively.

The Crimson yielded firsts only in the 220-yard dash, where Matthews, of Maryland, took the lead, and in the 440-yard dash, won by Thomas, also of Maryland.

William and Mary made excellent bids for a first in the high hurdles and again in the javelin, but fell just short of the necessary punch. Harvard found the distance and middle distance races easy, but all three teams ran well to make the dashes close.

In the field competition, Harvard took most of the events with ease, except the broad jump, where Matthews, of Maryland, supplied competition, and in the javelin, where Ed Justis, Indian star, yielded to Moore by inches on the last heave. Good running gave French the 100-yard dash in 9.9 seconds, while another good time was made in the low hurdles, won by Tupper, of Harvard.

Charlie Pratt, Crimson weightman, was high point scorer of the meet, with two firsts and one third. He was closely followed by French, also of Harvard, with two firsts.

Summary:

100-yard dash—Won by French (Harvard); second, Pugh (Maryland); third, Mason (Harvard); fourth, Nissen. Time, 9.9 seconds.

220-yard dash—Won by Matthews (Maryland); second, Nissen (Harvard); third, Mason (Harvard); fourth, Brayton (Harvard). Time, 22.2 seconds.

440-yard run—Won by Thomas (Maryland); second, Cummings (Harvard); third, Pugh (Maryland); fourth, Hennessy (Harvard) Time, 50.3 seconds.

880-yard run—Won by Porter (Harvard); second, O'Neill (Harvard); third, Gresham (W. and M.); fourth, Lindsay (Maryland). Time, 1 minute 59.3 seconds.

Mile run—Won by Luttman (Harvard); second, Wildes (Harvard); third, Gresham and Campbell (both W. and M., tied). Time, 4 minutes 31.7 seconds.

2-mile run—Won by Reid and Finksman (both Harvard) tied; third, Myers (Maryland); fourth, Luttman (Harvard). Time, 10 minutes 5.9 seconds.

High hurdles—Won by Heinrich (Harvard); second, Davis (W. and M.); third, Fancy (Maryland); fourth, Corey (Harvard). Time, 16 seconds.

Low hurdles—Won by Tupper (Harvard); second, O'Connell (Harvard); third, Kinnamon (Maryland); fourth, Stribling (W. and M.). Time, 24.6 seconds.

Shotput—Won by Pratt (Harvard); second, Guarnaccia (Harvard); third, Zylick (Maryland); fourth, MacDonald (Maryland). Distance, 45 feet 6 inches.

Discus throw—Won by Pratt (Harvard); second, Guarnaccia (Harvard); third, Zulick (Maryland); fourth, MacDonald (Maryland). Distance, 132 feet 10 inches.

Javelin throw—Won by Moore (Harvard); second, Justis (W. and M.); third, Pratt (Harvard), fourth, Heins (Maryland). Distance, 194 feet 1 inch.

Pole vault—Won by Burbank (Harvard); second, Kent (W. and M.), and Aman (Maryland, tied); fourth, Durham (W. and M.) Height, 12 feet.

High jump—Won by Brown (Harvard); second, Burgess (Harvard); third, Davis (W. and M.), Thomas (W. and M.), Matthews (Maryland), Faney (Maryland) and Elliott (Maryland), all tied. Height, 5 feet 10 inches.

Leech Tennis Matches Postponed to Aug. 18

Change of date for the Leech Trophy tennis matches has been announced by the War Department, following agreement between Secretary of War Davis and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur. The date originally set for the matches here, June 16 has been changed to August 18.

The trophy was given by A. Y. Leech jr., of this city in 1924, to be competed for annually by lawn tennis teams representing the Army and Navy, each service being represented by teams not exceeding ten players. The annual competition consists of four singles and three doubles matches, each match being the best two out of three sets.

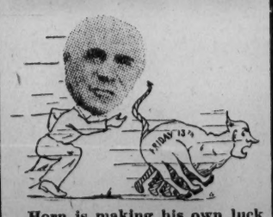

The trophy is now in possession of the Navy and of the four annual competitions which have been played, the Navy has won two and the Army two

Columbia A. C. Nine To Work Out Today

Alexandria, Va., April 14.—Coach Gillie Lee, of the Columbia Athletic Club Baseball Team, has ordered his charges out for practice on Haydon Field this afternoon, the players being asked to report at the Columbia Engine House at 1:45 p. m.

Manager Leo Deeton is now busy scouting for games for the team. He expects to open the season next week, and has several fast clubs lined up, although no definite announcement as to the opening has been made.

6 BALL GAMES IN WEEK FOR COLLEGES

Visit of Quantico Nine to Feature Week on D. C. Diamonds.

AFTER the brisk action during the Easter vacation period, local college teams are faced with a comparatively lean program during the coming week. Six baseball games are scheduled, with Georgetown, Maryland and Catholic University each engaging in two contests. The University of Maryland lacrosse, tennis and track teams also will be seen in action during the week.

The crack Quantico Marine Nine will oppose Catholic University in Wednesday's other local attraction, while University of Maryland's formidable lacrosse team, with impressive victories over Randolph-Macon and Harvard faces a test in its game against the University of Virginia Twelve at Charlottesville.

Mount St. Mary's will be the guest of the Georgetown Baseball Team in Thursday's lone contest in a game at the Hilltop at 3:30 o'clock.

Saturday will see Catholic University playing West Virginia University at Brookland, an Maryland opposing Virginia Polytechnical at College Park on the diamond with the Old Liner Track Team matching strides with the Naval Academy Team at Annapolis and the Maryland Tennis Team in its opening match of the season against Western Maryland on the College Park courts.

Hutterly Now Leads Potomac Boat Club

Andrew J. Hutterly was elected president of the Potomac Boat Club, to succeed William H. Grass, at its annual meeting yesterday. Other officers elected were Allen W. Bryan, vice president; Paul J. Bergh, secretary, and Ernest P. Schneider, treasurer. Philip Ransom, Ernest Miller and Ernest P. Schneider also were chosen to serve on the board of governors with Louis P. Allwine, Elmer K. McKay, Alvin Biggs, Allen W. Bryan, Paul J. Bergh and Andrew J. Hutterly.

BOXES HERE

CRAYDON (OX) SHUFORD
of North Carolina University, intercollegiate champion of the South, who will meet Joe Proctor, Washington heavyweight who recently won the South Atlantic title, for the Southern amateur championship. The bout will be staged Wednesday at the Arcadia as the feature of the program staged under the joint auspices of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars and directed by Capt. Harvey L. Miller, U. S. M. C.

DEL RAY TO DRILL.

Alexandria, Va., April 14.—The Del Ray Athletic Club Baseball Team will hold an important workout at the George Mason High School Field at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Coach Theimer is seeking games in the unlimited class with teams in and around Washington. His address is 121 East Howell street, Potomac, Va.

G. U. REWARDS PLAYERS AT BANQUET

'G' Club Gives Annual Dinner Wednesday at Willard.

THE fourth annual "G" dinner will be held on Wednesday, April 25, at the Willard Hotel. It was announced yesterday by Lou Little, athletic director of Georgetown University and sponsor of the event four years ago, when he came to the Hilltop.

Since then it has grown to be the largest and most looked-for function in the Blue and Gray athletic program of the year. It is attended by the faculty, alumni, famous sport personages, students and friends of the university.

Bill Roper, head coach of Princeton University; Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former commandant at West Point and present chairman of the United States Olympic committee, and Commander Jones Ingram, director of athletics at the United States Naval Academy, are some of the prominent figures in the athletic world who will speak at the dinner.

Letters in football, basketball, track and baseball will be awarded at the banquet to the players for their efforts on the athletic field.

In addition to paying tribute to the members of the 1927-28 teams, Lou Little has invited all "G" men who starred on the gridiron or diamond twenty years ago, prior to 1905.

About fifteen of these old-timers have announced their intentions to be present. Among those whom the local public may remember are Mike Thompson, Jim Mulligan, Percy Given, Doc Larkin, Bill Keane, Sam Owens, Murray Russell and Arthur Duffy.

Emerson Net Team Defeats Episcopal, 4-1

The Emerson Tennis Team scored a 4-to-1 victory over Episcopal yesterday on the Episcopal courts sweeping the singles and winning the first of the two doubles matches.

In the No. 1 singles, Seidel, of Emerson, defeated Cole, of Episcopal, 6—2 and 8—6.

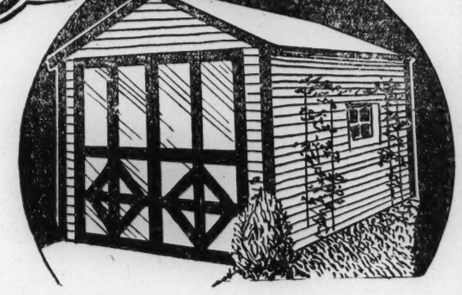

Singles—Seidel (Emerson) defeated Cole (Episcopal), 6—2, 8—6; Fitzgerald (Emerson) defeated Benn (Episcopal), 6—2, 7—5; Doane (Emerson) defeated Elliott (Episcopal), 6—3, 6—3.

Doubles—Seidel and Fitzgerald (Emerson) defeated Elliott and Cole (Episcopal), 6—4, 6—4. Morgan and Scheffert Episcopal) defeated Doane and Kolipinski, 8—6, 1—6, 6—1.

295 BOWLING TEAMS LAUNCH TOURNEY TOMORROW

Entry Record Shattered in D. C. Event

$3,000 Cash and Newspaper Trophies Are Chief Prizes.

WITH all records for past seasons shattered for the number of teams to compete and with the $3,000 prize list the largest ever offered, the city-wide bowling tournament which gets under way tomorrow night at 7 o'clock at the King Pin alleys, No. 1, promises to be the greatest event of its kind ever held.

The 300 teams, which was the goal of officials of the Washington Duckpin Association, was practically attained, as 295 teams will roll, breaking by far the record entry list of 224 teams of last season. Marks for the doubles and singles also have been shattered. In the doubles 465 teams will compete, while 772 individuals will roll in the singles.

Teams of the Masonic League, the largest in the city and one of the largest leagues in the country, will have the honor of opening the tournament tomorrow.

Thursday will be National Capital League night; April 30 will be Odd Fellows night when 18 teams of that league will roll, while the District League teams will roll as a body on May 4.

Because of the record entry in the team, doubles and singles events the tournament will run at least four full weeks and will not terminate until May 9. There is a possibility that it may extend over this date a few days to allow for the rolling of postponements.

The afternoon of April 24 will be turned over to the newspaper bowlers when newspaper teams and those entered in the singles and doubles will roll.

In addition to the $3,000 in cash prizes the bowlers will have numerous cups and trophies to shoot for. The Washington Times cup will go to the class A, all events winners. The Washington Post cup to the winner in class B; the Star cup to class C and the Herald cup to class D. The News trophy will go to the man rolling the highest game for the tourney.

In addition to the above newspaper cups and trophies, numerous other trophies donated by the respective alleys in town and by numerous mercantile establishments will be posted.

Those who have ambitions of breaking the all-even mark incidentally will have something to shoot at, as Walter E. ("Reds") Megaw holds the record with 1,138, which he made in the city tournament two years ago on the Coliseum alleys.

A good many of the leading leagues in town will enter the tourney intact. National Capital League, composed of ten teams, has entered eleven, and District League, originally composed of ten teams, has entered twelve, due to the fact in the first-named league. King Pin entered both its first and second string teams, and in the District League, Government Printing Office and Stanford Paper Co. did likewise.

Entry Date Extended For Women's Tourney

The Washington Women's Duckpin Association has extended the time of entries for the annual women's tournament to Wednesday, April 18, at 6 p. m., when all teams and individuals planning to roll must have their entry in, so the schedule may be posted. The tournament will open on the Coliseum Alleys on April 23.

Entries may be mailed to Mrs. Leda Amidon, 758 Rock Creek Church road northwest, or in care of Mrs. Amidon at the Coliseum Alleys.

VIRGINIA NINE BEATEN BY N. C., 6-4

Cavaliers Rally in 6th, Score 4 Runs; Coxe Star Afield.

Special to The Washington Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 14. Bunching five hits with two errors, North Carolina scored four runs in the sixth inning today, to defeat Virginia, 6 to 4.

Satterfield doubled, and, after Mackie had walked, registered on Jessup's two-bagger to right field. Mackie and Jessup counted on Lufty's single. Lufty was thrown out at second base, but Maus singled and tallied when Bowen dropped Ellison's long fly to deep center.

The Tarheels collected fifteen hits off the two Cavalier twirlers. Melros succeeded Capt. Stephens on the mound at the close of the sixth, and was not scored on until the ninth, when Bowen booted a single by Mackie and allowed the runner to go to second. Jessup then singled, scoring Mackie.

Carolina's first run came in the third, when Coke singled and came home on Burt's triple. Virginia evened the count in the same frame, when Bowen tripled and raced home as Cardwell hit a roller to Satterfield that was too slow for a play in home.

Virginia added three runs in the fifth, when, with two on, Cardwell drove the ball over the right field cinder track for a home run.

The fielding feature was Coxe's running catch in deep center in the first inning, robbing Cardwell of a triple. Virginia has two more games with Carolina in May.

Opening Day "Jinx" Follows Hack Wilson

Special to The Washington Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 14.—The opening day of a league baseball season appears to be a jinx for Hack Wilson, hard-hitting outfielder for the Chicago Cubs, who is under treatment in Chicago now as a result of twisting his ankle Tuesday while attempting to retrieve a drive off the bat of Horace Ford, Reds shortstop.

In 1921, Wilson, known popularly here as "Stouts," was breaking into the professional game, and in the opening game of the season broke a bone in his leg as he attempted to slide into home after being walked. It was his first game with the locals. He was in a hospital and on crutches for six weeks. His first assignment here was behind the bat, but when he came back into the game, to ease up his work the management sent him to the field, and he has been a fielder ever since.

BOWLING NOTES

MASONIC LEAGUE.

Whiting, of the Masonic League, lost the golden opportunity of the year by losing two games this week while La Fayette was dropping two unexpectedly to New Jerusalem. Albert Pike kept their record intact with St. John's over a period of eight years by losing all three. It is very peculiar that they have not been able to win a single game in that space of time as most all of their games have been decided by a very small margin—usually less than five pins.

The following shot 350 or better during the week: Moyer 374, Pratt (Petworth) 368, E. Heinzman, 361; Hunter, 359; Lewis (Parker), 353.

TYPOTHETAE LEAGUE.

Judd & Detweiler increased their lead over Fellowship Forum last week in the Typothetae League, by sweeping their set with Lew Thayer while the runner-ups were dropping two to Washington Printing Co. With but nine games to go, this appears to be enough of an edge to assure the big print shop boys the bunting for the second time in succession.

Mischou's 145 game was the best single score turned in while Mutsbaugh's set of 351 stood out in the three string totals.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS LEAGUE.

With only one week more to go, it looks as though "double-headers" due to postponements will play an important part. This week, the leading Ovandos dropped two games in its regularly scheduled set with Salvador, and another game in a roll-off with Pinta. In the meantime, Santa Maria swept its set with Genoa and took a fourth game from Columbia, and displaced Ovando in the lead by the scantiest of margins.

Columbia had less luck with Trinidad, losing the odd game. Before dropping two to Ovando, Pinto could win only one game in the set with Balboa, and so went down into last place. Christopher disposed of De Sota in two of their games.

The scores were very ordinary. Santa Maria, with 1,548, and Columbia, with 1,505, were the only teams to pass the 1,500 line. Santa Maria's set included 535 and 522, while Columbia tied with Salvador at 521.

LADIES DISTRICT LEAGUE.

Billie Williams, by steering her Billies Team home the winner in the Ladies District League, achieved one of the greatest victories on the alleys. Her team, once off to a winning pace, swept all opposition aside and came down the homestretch with twelve straight wins.

The consistent bowling of Catherine Quigley, who finished third in the individual average with 97 to 48, was a singular factor of the Billie's triumph.

It was a great race from start to finish. The teams were so evenly balanced that no particular team was a favorite.

Total pins decided the second, third, fourth and fifth places. Petworth, tied for second position with the Convention Hall pinettes, took the runner-up position on greater pinfall, while Arcadia claimed fourth place over Temple in a like matter.

ATHLETIC CLUB LEAGUE.

Frank Dubois' Jos. Phillips Co. bowlers coasted in to a pennant in the Athletic Club League as the season closed last week at Conventoin Hall. This all-star gained a lead over the Union Printers early in the season and finished six games to the lead.

Red Megaw was the individual leader with an average of 116 with a heavy odd pin total. He carried better than a 120 average the first 39 games.

Forfeiting a set to Hugh Reilly Co. killed all hope of the Union Printers during the closing weeks. They just managed to hold second place. Arlington took them into camp for three games last week by some close margins, and, incidentally, Arlington just staved off the National Fellowship Club which carried the fight for third position right to the end.

Several forfeitures and postponements tended to put a damper on the interest in the league at the close. Georgetown, with a good team, failed to put a team on the alleys several times.

S. R. LADIES LEAGUE.

The Southern Railway Ladies' Duckpin League closed this week with the Passenger Accounts in the lead by eleven games. This being the first season this team has rolled was sure a successful one.

Mary Pearson was the leading star of the Passenger Accounts, finishing with an average of 88, also claiming highest number of spares in the league. Jessie Goodrick rolled the highest game of the season, 124.

Stenographers finished second with a good team. Miss Rick, captain of her team, carries some of the honors by leading the league in strikes. Miss Ford rolled the highest set of 303, while Miss Leith holds high average.

Car Records and Key Punchers finished in third place, each winning 36 and losing 39, but Key Punchers were awarded third prize as a result of total pins.

Georgie Burns, of the Disbursing Team, led the league with the highest individual average. Disbursing also claims highest set of 498. Bookkeepers also ran.

NAVY BEATEN 9 TO 5, BY FORDHAM

Five Errors Figure in Defeat as 3 Hurlers Are Pounded.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 14.—Fordham University, of New York, sent the Annapolis Midshipmen down to defeat on the diamond today by a score of 9 to 5. The game was marked by some good and bad baseball, and in the latter respect the Middies were the chief offenders, being credited with five errors, a passed ball and slow fielding on two or three occasions.

"Chief" Bender sent three hurlers to the hill in the hope of stemming Fordham's attack. Each worked three innings, but the visitors banged out hits that counted for runs off all of them. Brandley, a portsider, started and the New Yorkers got to him in the third for a trio of markers. He was relieved by "Bobby" Moore, whose efforts in previous performances were good. He was touched for a single and homer in the sixth. Then Wilson took up the burden, and was less effective. He allowed two free passes, and was nipped for two singles and a triple that gave Fordham a quartet of runs.

The Middies got two runs in the third on Capt. Hannegan's drive to center for the circuit, with one on; another pair in the sixth on a pass, a fielder's choice and two singles. They accounted for the fifth tally in the ninth on a single by Keith, pinch hitting for Wilson, Millyean's single, and Ryan's wide throw to first.

The visitors tallied three in the third on two passes by Brandley, errors by Hannegan and Stroh and singles by Egan and Clancey. They tallied a brace in the sixth on Clancey's line drive to center for a homer with one one. Wilson passed two in the eighth, and singles by Neilan and Lebourne, a triple by Egan, and two miscues by the Middies gave Fordham four counters.

DOMESTIC MARKET FOR WHEAT SOARS TO NEW HIGH POINT

Unusually Poor Condition of Winter Crop Forces Prices to Season's Peak.

RYE ALSO ADVANCES WITH ACTIVE DEMAND

Confirmation by the United States Department of Agriculture in its April crop report of an unusually poor condition of winter wheat, together with the generally firmer world's market situation for bread grains, forced domestic wheat prices to the highest point of the season during the week ended April 14, according to the Weekly Grain Market Review of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The rye market also advanced sharply, influenced by the poor showing of the crop, the advance in wheat and a continued active demand. Corn and oats were also firm and prices tended slightly upward. The barley market was steady, but not materially changed. The flax market was dull, although prices showed some advance during the week.

The condition of winter wheat April 1, according to the department, was unusually low and was estimated at 68.8 per cent of normal. Only twice, in 1917 and 1925, has the April 1 figure been so low since the beginning of the department's record in 1879. In the hard winter wheat area conditions were reported about average, but in the Ohio Valley States, where most of the soft red winter wheat is grown, the condition was the lowest reported for April 1 since the department's record began. Conditions in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois were 32, 29 and 27 per cent of normal, respectively. While temperatures and snowstorms interrupted seeding operations in the spring wheat area, the condition in the Northwest is considered quite satisfactory, with the season still a week or ten days earlier than last year. The condition of winter wheat in the principal European countries is also reported to be quite as favorable as last season at this time. The winter wheat crop in Germany at the 1st of April was 84 per cent of the average for the preceding ten years. This is the lowest condition report as of April 1 since 1922. In northwestern Europe and also in France considerable winter killing has taken place, according to semiofficial reports.

World Market Firm.

While the principal foreign markets did not follow the full advance of the domestic wheat markets, the world market situation continued firm. The 1928 wheat crop in the Punjab, which produces more than one-third of the Indian crop, is now estimated at about 383,568,000 bushels, or about 4,500,000 bushels below last year's harvest in that area. Prices of native wheats in European markets advanced 2-3 cent and May wheat at Liverpool advanced about 3 cents, and at Buenos Aires about 1½ cents per bushel. Foreign wheats were quoted slightly higher, at Liverpool No. 3 Manitoba for June shipment being quoted at $1.62 to $1.63 pound, Rosa Fe to arrive at $1.50¾, and Australian wheat for June shipment at $1.63½ per bushel.

Prices of cash wheat in United States markets were also advanced sharply with soft winter wheat prices quoted as much as 10 cents higher than a week ago at some of the central Western markets. Stocks of soft winter wheat are reported to be practically exhausted at Chicago, St. Louis and other soft winter wheat markets. Farm and elevator stocks are also small and the advance in prices failed to materially increase offerings or receipts. At St. Louis No. 2 red was quoted at $1.90 to $1.92, and mills were reported turning to low protein hard winter to supplement the supply of soft wheat. This demand is also drawing soft wheat from the far Northwest, where soft white wheat was quoted at $1.45 to $1.50 per bushel. No. 2 red winter was quoted at Cincinnati at $1.90-$1.91, Toledo $1.87 to $1.88, and Chicago, nominally at $1.89.

Hard Winter Advances.

Hard winter wheat prices advanced 5 to 6 cents, but local demand in the various markets was not urgent. Crop conditions were reported as most satisfactory in the hard winter wheat area with the exception of some damage from dust storms in western Nebraska. The supply of high protein wheat was limited and premiums held firm. No. 2 hard winter 12½ per cent protein was quoted at the close of the week at Kansas City at $1.57 to $1.63½ per bushel, or about 15 to 21 cents over the May price; 13 per cent protein sold at 20 to 26 cents over the May. No. 2 hard winter 12½ per cent protein sold at Omaha at $1.62. The lower grades were readily taken by elevator interests. No export sales were reported, as domestic prices are above an export basis.

Receipts of spring wheat were smaller than usual at the principal markets and a large percentage was of low-grade red spring or durum. Premiums for good quality high protein wheat were advanced with No. 1 dark Northern quoted at Minneapolis at 28 to 37 cents over the May price for 13 per cent protein wheat; 14 per cent sold at 42 to 52 cents over the Minneapolis May, which advanced 3⅜ cents for the week and closed April 13 at $1.44½. The week's advance in domestic wheat prices widened the spread between the United States and Canadian wheat. No. 2 northern Manitoba was quoted at Winnipeg April 13 at $1.56⅝, as compared with quotations on best lots of No. 1 hard spring at Minneapolis at $1.91 to $1.96½. Durum wheat advanced about 6 cents the Duluth May closing April 13 at $1.38⅞. The bulk of the receipts at Minneapolis were of low quality and sold at around the May price to 2 cents under high protein amber durum brought premiums of 20 to 25 cents over the May price. No. 2 amber selling as high as $1.51¼ at Duluth and No. 3 was quoted at $1.48 to $1.50. No. 4 red durum was quoted at $1.37½ in that market.

Rye Cron Suffers.

Pacific Coast markets were rather quiet. Exports were practically out of the market at Portland Oreg., as Southeastern markets were overbidding them for wheat. Exporters were bidding $1.19 at country points for new crop white wheat for July delivery. This was around 25 to 30 cents below current prices. Wheat was firm and in good demand at San Francisco where No. 1, hard white, was quoted at $2.65 and feed wheat at $2.60 per 100. Good milling wheat ranged from $2.67½ to $2.72½ at Los Angeles where the demand was rather slow.

The rye crop has also suffered severely from winter killing and condition April 1 was reported at 79.3 per cent of normal, which is the lowest April 1 condition on record. The condition April 1 last year was 86.4 and the ten-year average 85.5. The condition is unusually poor in the Ohio Valley, but the low condition in the Eastern, Southern and north Central States is partly offset by approximately average prospects in North Dakota and other important north Central States west of the Mississippi River and in most of the Western States. These poor crop conditions, together with continued active export demand and rapidly diminishing stocks of domestic rye, advanced rye prices to the highest point for the season to date. Export sales were reported to Norway, Finland, Denmark and Germany. Export bids for No. 2, Western rye were at around $1.40⅜ per bushel, f. o. b. New York at the close of the week. No. 2 rye was quoted at Minneapolis at $1.21 to $1.21¾ and at Chicago at $1.24 per bushel.

Corn Quotations Gain.

There were no important changes in the corn market situation, but the high prices of bread grains gave a firm tone to the market and prices advanced ½ cent per bushel. Receipts at the principal markets were fairly large, but there was a continued good demand from feeders, industries and shippers, and shipments from the markets were reported only slightly smaller than current receipts. Cash prices advanced with futures, No. 3, yellow, being quoted at the close of the week at Chicago at $1 to $1.02, Kansas City, 94½ to 96½ cents; Minneapolis, 94½ to 96½ cents. At St. Louis, No. 2, yellow, was quoted at $1.00½ and No. 2, white, at 99 cents per bushel.

The oats market continues in a firm position, particularly for old crop grain. The prospective increase in acreage and generally favorable weather conditions have prevented any material increase in new crop future prices. Cash prices were about 1c higher but demand was of only moderate volume. There has been excellent demand for seed oats at Minneapolis, where elevator stocks have been decreasing rapidly. Stocks of oats in the principal markets are becoming unusually small and are less than half as large as a year ago. No. 3 white oats were quoted at the close of the week at Minneapolis at 55¾ to 57¼, Chicago 58 to 63½ and Kansas City 59 to 60 cents per bushel.

The barley market held steady, with prices slightly higher influenced by the advance in other grains. Maltsters were active buyers of good quality barley but very little of this was available at the principal markets. Feeding grades were also well taken. Barley of good malting quality was quoted at the close of the week at Duluth at 85-91c, Minneapolis 89 to 94c, Chicago 95c to $1.03 and Milwaukee 95c to $1.04. Feed barley sold at Minneapolis at 85 to 88c and at Chicago 90 to 94c. At the latter market feeding grades were selling about 2c lower than a week ago.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—Unfavorable weather reports from the South were reflected in further advances in the cotton market today. Prices made new high ground for the movement on all positions, May contracts selling at 20.08 and closing at 20.02. October advanced to 19.75 and closed at 19.72. The general market closed steady at net advances of 5 to 12 points.

The market opened steady at unchanged prices, to an advance of 6 points and soon showed net gains of 11 to 18 points on active months, July selling at 19.90 and December at 19.69. The early weather news was considered very favorable, pointing to rains or unsettled conditions followed by lower temperatures. Buying was active on the advance, and it was supposed to include covering or rebuying by recent sellers, with a broadening of commission-house demand. Some buying also was attributed to Liverpool and the trade.

The advance of about 2¾ to 3c a pound from the low levels early last February evidently attracted a good deal of realizing for over the week-end, and after the first rush of buying orders had been supplied, prices reacted 8 or 10 points from the best. The opinion of some local map readers that weather conditions might possibly change for the better by Monday morning, may have increased the disposition to take profits on long cotton. But the volume of business tapered off on the decline, and closing prices were within 5 or 6 points of the best. The attention of the trade appeared almost entirely monopolized by the weather news and apprehension of further delays in the new crop start, with possibility that considerable cotton might have to be replanted in some sections of the belt.

Private cables from Liverpool suggested nervousness over the new crop start in that market also, as there had been Continental and Bombay buying and sentiment was bullish on the unfavorable weather advices from the South, although business in cotton cloths and yarns was restricted.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 98,000 bales, against 188,000 last year and 60,000 two years ago.

Smaller Paper Money Limited This Year

(Associated Press.)

There will be little if any printing of the smaller sized paper money this year. A request of the Treasury Department yesterday for congressional permission to spend $309,000 of the amount appropriated for paper used in printing currency disclosed that unavoidable delays have arisen which will prevent the issuance of any great amount of the new sized currency this year.

The delays ocurred in procuring the paper, in the formulation of designs, and in the installation of the machinery.

Birger's Guardian Is to Be His Attorney

Benton, Ill., April 14 (A.P.).—On the ground that Charles Birger, condemned gang leader, is insane and incapable of handling his own affairs, Robert E. Smith, his attorney, today had himself appointed as Birger's guardian by Circuit Judge Charles Miller.

Roy Martin, State's attorney, was in court, but offered no objection. Birger is to have a sanity hearing Monday. He had been sentenced to be hanged yesterday for the murder of Mayor Joe Adams, of West City, but received an eleventh hour stay on an insanity plea.

Perry Wins Election To I. T. U. Position

Indianapolis, April 14 (A.P.).—Theodore Perry, of Indianapolis, progressive candidate, was elected first vice president of the International Typographical Union, it was announced at union headquarters here today on completion of the tabulation of votes of the special election held April 4. His opponent was John Phillips, of Philadelphia. The vote was taken to select a successor to Seth R. Brown, resigned. The final vote was 29,821 for Perry and 17,257 for Phillips.

T. B. PATON TO ADDRESS INSTITUTE OF BANKING

Will Discuss Legal Problems of Finance at Forum Dinner April 27.

EXCHANGE SESSION LIGHT

By F. W. PATTERSON.

While all of the forum dinner discussions this year held under the auspices of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, have been extremely popular with local bankers, the final dinner which will be given on April 27 at the Raleigh Hotel, is sure to prove the high spot in the season's meetings.

Judge Thomas B. Paton, general counsel of the American Bankers Association, one of the country's outstanding speakers on banking topics as well as one of the best informed men in the country on the intricate subject of banking, has consented to address the forum on that night. The subject of his address will be "Some Legal Problems in Banking," and following his talk he will lead the discussion which will come up with local bank officers participating.

The selection of the topic fits in well with the present situation in which Washington bankers are interested, as at this time their attention is focused upon the passage of bills in Congress which have particular reference to the uniform fiduciaries act, the joint deposit bill, which are at present on the Senate calendar, and considerable interest will naturally attach to an explanation by Judge Paton of the law underlying those important measures.

Inasmuch as there will be a big demand for places at this dinner it is urged that those who contemplate going make their reservations at once, sending a check for $2 to Frederick H. Cox, cashier, Commercial National Bank, treasurer of the forum committee. Harold W. Burnside, Farmers & Mechanics National Bank, who is chairman of the committee, has working with him in addition to Mr. Cox, James C. Dulin, jr., American Security & Trust Co., and T. Hunton Leith, Security Savings & Commercial Bank.

McKee Named Chairman.

H. H. McKee, president the National Capital Bank, a member of the advisory committee of the Stockholders Association of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, was elected chairman of that committee at the annual meeting held in the Virginia city on Friday. Another local banker named for a position of prominence in the organization was W. J. Waller, vice president of Federal-American National Bank, who was placed on the advisory committee to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Robert V. Fleming, president Riggs National Bank, whose term of office expired on Friday.

C. E. Tiffany, president of the Fauquier National Bank of Warrenton, Va., first vice president of the Stockholders Association, was elected president, succeeding John Poole, president of the Federal-American Bank, whose term of office as directing head ended with the meeting last week. George M. Keese, of the Richmond Federal Reserve Bank, who has a host of friends in the member banks of Washington and throughout the Fifth Federal Reserve District, was reelected secretary.

Closing Session Light.

The closing session of the week on the Washington Stock Exchange was the lightest in volume of trading of any day during the six days of activity, but little change in price levels was recorded and most of the stocks coming out sold firm or close to their last levels.

Mergenthaler Linotype, which has been especially active during the week, sold in a small lot at 103. Peoples Drug Stores preferred continued to show strength and sold in an odd lot at 128, even with the precious level. Merchants Transfer & Storage preferred, always strong, sold in two lots at 107½. Federal-American Co. preferred, which is closely held and appears but seldom, sold unchanged at 108.

Washington Gas Light failed to stir up any great amount of trading interest and transactions were held to a small sale at 90. Potomac Electric Power 5½ per cent preferred sold firm at 108½, while the 6 per cent preferred maintained its recent high point of 113. The common stock of Washington Railway & Electric, which last sold at 485, dropped off 5 points in the bid price with an offer of 460. Chapin-Sacks, 8 per cent preferred sold in two lots upward to 107½.

Bond transactions were meager with Washington Gas Light 6s series "A" moving at 106 for the $1,000, and Washington Railway & Electric 4s selling at 93⅜.

The weekly bid on the unlisted department failed to bring out any changes in the offering price, while asked price failed to materialize except in the case of Anacostia Bank with asked at 375 and bid at 325.

Officers Are Reelected.

Ezra Gould, president; R. H. Bagby, vice president; Thomas J. Groom, vice president and cashier; A. S. Offutt, L. W. Davis, Joseph M. McCarthy, assistant cashiers, and M. H. Buckingham, assistant secretary.

Members of the board who were present following their reelection for the year were: Walter K. Bachrack, R. H. Bagby, Ezra Gould, Mahlon Groo, Thomas J. Groom, George Hayes, Charles J. Kappler, Charles H. Kindle, L. Hoyt Lamb, Jesse B. K. Lee, Edward F. Pickford, J. C. Pyles, Edwin E. Roberts, E. Hume Talbert, John P. F. White and E. S. Wolfe.

The president's report showed that deposits of the institution which totaled $2,132,492 at the close of 1927, were $239,777 in advance of the previous twelve months, while the dividend payment to stockholders was 22 per cent within the year.

Kemmerer On Trip.

Dr. E. W. Kemmerer, professor of finance of economics at Princeton University and president of the Stable Money Association, has departed on a trip visiting the association's branches in the middle West and on the Pacific Coast and to participate in the Institute of Finance to be held at Occidental College, Los Angeles, April 19, 20, 21.

The Stable Money Association has been organized to spread the understanding of the evils due to fluctuations of the price level and of the various measures proposed for stabilization and consists of bankers, economists, industrialists, farm-labor leaders and many others.

Frederick A. Delano, of Washington, is one of its vice presidents. Others sharing the same title being Henry A. Wallace, Nicholas Murray Butler, John W. Davis, Fred I. Kent, Charles Evans Hughes, William Cooper Proctor, William H. Crocker, Henry M. Robinson and others. The objectives of the association are to minimize unemployment, stabilize commerce and provide a measure of value just and equitable to creditors and debtors, reduce the evils of "business cycles" and promote business and social stability.

Debits Fall Off.

Debits to individual accounts, as reported to the Federal Reserve Board by banks in leading cities for the week ended April 11, which included but five business days in a number of cities, aggregated $14,064,000, or 26.2 per cent, below the total of $19,064,000,000 reported for the preceding week, and 7.3 per cent above the total for the week ended April 13, 1927.

Aggregate debits for 141 centers for which figures have been published weekly amounted to $13,276,572,000, as compared with $18,198,866,000 for the preceding week and $12,317,722,000 for the week ended April 13,1927.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, April 14 (A.P.).—Breadstuff prices aimed for the zenith today, every delivery, both of wheat and rye, establishing a new top-price record for the season. Drought in the Southwest, with freezing temperatures and high winds, boding ill for the 1928 domestic wheat yield, had much to do with bringing about something akin to a buying stampede.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong at virtually the day's highest level, 2⅜c to 3⅛c net advance. Rye finished 2c to 3⅛c up, corn showing 1¼c to 1¾c gain, oats ⅝@¾c to 1⅛c higher and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12c.

Today climaxed three successive days of probably the heaviest grain dealings of the year on the board of trade, with wheat not only at the highest price of the present crop, but also 25c higher than a year ago. In some quarters it was asserted that big speculators who have been active of late on the stock exchange with sensational results had transferred their energies to the wheat pit.

In the general rush today to purchase wheat the May delivery price was hoisted to $1.54⅝ a bushel, compared with $1.53 the day's previous record, which heretofore had been unsurpassed since last July. Immense profit-taking sales on the upward swings of the market were readily absorbed, and in some cases the rise extended to more than 11c a bushel above quotations current earlier in the week. Ordinarily such a volume of selling to realize profits would have resulted in a reaction of several cents, but the broad character of the trading today made the market apparently immune to this effect.

In addition to fear of crop losses from unseasonable low temperatures in the Southwest, advices at hand today indicated that prevailing high winds there were sapping moisture from the soil and that in various places the consequent blowing of dust had become a serious menace, especially as the official forecast pointed to continued absence of rain. On the other hand, word of heavy snowfalls in the spring wheat belt failed, for at least the time being, to have any noticeable market influence.

Corn and oats as well as rye were active and higher, mainly in consequence of wheat strength. Wet weather over the corn belt was also a factor, and there was talk of good export business in oats.

Provisions were firmer, sympathizing with upturns both in hog values and in grain.

...D UTILITY BONDS ...POINTS OF FIRMNESS

Profit Taking Sets In Among Semispeculative Group; Coppers Under Pressure.

POLISH 6S AT NEW PEAK

New York, April 14 (A.P.). — Quiet trading in the bond market today followed yesterday's tightening of the time money market, and some selling principally in the semi-speculative group reflected profit taking and the sagging of prices on the big board. The week's new offerings, approximately $115,000,000, compared with $228,000,000 in the preceding week, presented only nominal competition to the listed market.

In general, the railroad and public utility groups presented points of firmness, while industrials inclined to heaviness. New York traction lines continued to move upward, but with lessened force, and there was further accumulation of the St Paul issues, particularly the adjustment 5s, which sold at 75 for the first time. Great Northern 4½s were in fair demand, but Peoria & Eastern 4s sustained a net loss of about 2 points.

Copper bonds, which have been advancing consistently in new high territory, were under pressure as heavy realizing developed. Andes 7s fell back more than a point and Anaconda 7s were fractionally lower in the early dealings, although rallying slightly just before the close.

Polish 6s reached a new peak at 86⅜, and the 7s and 8s were moderately active around their previous high for the year. This was coincident with reports from abroad that a new loan of $50,000,000 or so is being arranged by the European republic. Italian public utility 7s improved their year's top price, and several new peaks were raised in the Mexican list.

Nearly $600,000 of Treasury 4s changed hands at slightly lower prices, but other Government securities were quiet and irregular.

DOMESTIC MARKET FOR WHEAT SOARS TO NEW HIGH POINT

RYE ALSO ADVANCES WITH ACTIVE DEMAND

Confirmation by the United States Department of Agriculture in its April crop report of an unusually poor condition of winter wheat, together with the generally firmer world's market situation for bread grains, forced domestic wheat prices to the highest point of the season during the week ended April 14, according to the Weekly Grain Market Review of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The rye market also advanced sharply, influenced by the poor showing of the crop, the advance in wheat and a continued active demand. Corn and oats were also firm and prices tended slightly upward. The barley market was steady, but not materially changed. The flax market was dull, although prices showed some advance during the week.

The condition of winter wheat April 1, according to the department, was unusually low and was estimated at 68.8 per cent of normal. Only twice, in 1917 and 1925, has the April 1 figure been so low since the beginning of the department's record in 1879. In the hard winter wheat area conditions were reported about average, but in the Ohio Valley States, where most of the soft red winter wheat is grown, the condition was the lowest reported for April 1 since the department's record began. Conditions in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois were 32, 29 and 37 per cent of normal, respectively. While low temperatures and snowstorms interrupted seeding operations in the spring wheat area, the condition in the Northwest is considered quite satisfactory, with the season still a week or ten days earlier than last year. The condition of winter wheat in the principal European countries is also reported to be quite as favorable as last season at this time. The winter wheat crop in Germany at the 1st of April was 84 per cent of the average for the preceding ten years. This is the lowest condition report as of April 1 since 1922. In northwestern Europe and also in France considerable winter killing has taken place, according to semiofficial reports.

World Market Firm.

While the principal foreign markets did not follow the full advance of the domestic wheat markets, the world market situation continued firm. The 1928 wheat crop in the Punjab, which produces more than one-third of the Indian crop, is now estimated at about 123,568,000 bushels, or about 4,500,000 bushels below last year's harvest in that area. Prices of native wheats in European markets advanced 2-3 cent and May wheat at Liverpool advanced about 3 cents, and at Buenos Aires about 1½ cents per bushel. Foreign wheats were quoted slightly higher, at Liverpool No. 3 Manitoba for June shipment being quoted at $1.62 to $1.63 pound, Rosa Fe to arrive at $1.50¾, and Australian wheat for June shipment at $1.63½ per bushel.

Prices of cash wheat in United States markets were also advanced sharply with soft winter wheat prices quoted as much as 10 cents higher than a week ago at some of the central Western markets Stocks of soft winter wheat are reported to be practically exhausted at Chicago, St. Louis and other soft winter wheat markets. Farm and elevator stocks are also small and the advance in prices failed to materially increase offerings or receipts. At St. Louis No. 2 red was quoted at $1.90 to $1.92, and mills were reported turning to low protein hard winter to supplement the supply of soft wheat. This demand is also drawing soft wheat from the far Northwest, where soft white wheat was quoted at $1.45 to $1.50 per bushel. No. 2 red winter was quoted at Cincinnati at $1.90-$1.91, Toledo $1.87 to $1.88, and Chicago, nominally at $1.89.

Hard Winter Advances.

Hard winter wheat prices advanced 5 to 6 cents, but local demand in the various markets was not urgent. Crop conditions were reported as most satisfactory in the hard winter wheat area with the exception of some damage from dust storms in western Nebraska. The supply of high protein wheat was limited and premiums held firm. No. 2 hard winter 12½ per cent protein was quoted at the close of the week at Kansas City at $1.57 to $1.63½ per bushel, or about 15 to 21 cents over the May price; 13 per cent protein sold at 20 to 26 cents over the May. No. 2 hard winter 12½ per cent protein sold at Omaha at $1.62 The lower grades were readily taken by elevator interests. No export sales were reported, as domestic prices are above an export basis.

Receipts of spring wheat were smaller than usual at the principal markets and a large percentage was of low-grade red spring or durum. Premiums for good quality high protein wheat were advanced with No 1 dark Northern quoted at Minneapolis at 28 to 37 cents over the May price for 13 per cent protein wheat; 14 per cent sold at 42 to 52 cents over the Minneapolis May, which advanced 3⅜ cents for the week and closed April 13 at $1.44⅛. The week's advance in domestic wheat prices widened the spread between the United States and Canadian wheat. No. 2 northern Manitoba was quoted at Winnipeg April 13 at $1.56⅝, as compared with quotations on best lots of No. 1 hard spring at Minneapolis at $1.91 to $1.96⅛. Durum wheat advanced about 6 cents the Duluth May closing April 13 at $1.38⅞. The bulk of the receipts at Minneapolis were of low quality and sold at around the May price to 2 cents under high protein amber durum brought premiums of 20 to 25 cents over the May price. No. 2 amber selling as high as $1.51¼ at Duluth and No 3 was quoted at $1.48 to $1.50. No. 4 red durum was quoted at $1.37½ in that market.

Rye Crop Suffers.

Pacific Coast markets were rather quiet. Exports were practically out of the market at Portland Oreg., as Southeastern markets were overbidding them for wheat. Exporters were bidding $1.19 at country points for new crop white wheat for July delivery. This was around 25 to 30 cents below current prices. Wheat was firm and in good demand at San Francisco where No. 1, hard white, was quoted at $2.65 and feed wheat at $2.60 per 100. Good milling wheat ranged from $2.67½ to $2.72½ at Los Angeles where the demand was rather slow.

The rye crop has also suffered severely from winter killing and condition April 1 was reported at 79.3 per cent of normal, which is the lowest April 1 condition on record. The condition April 1 last year was 86.4 and the ten-year average 85.5. The condition is unusually poor in the Ohio Valley, but the low condition in the Eastern, Southern and north Central States is partly offset by approximately average prospects in North Dakota and other important north Central States west of the Mississippi River and in most of the Western States. These poor crop conditions, together with continued active export demand and rapidly diminishing stocks of domestic rye, advanced rye prices to the highest point for the season to date. Export sales were reported to Norway, Finland, Denmark and Germany. Export bids for No. 2, Western rye were at around $1.40⅜ per bushel, f. o. b. New York at the close of the week. No. 2 rye was quoted at Minneapolis at $1.21 to $1.21¾ and at Chicago at $1.24 per bushel.

Corn Quotations Gain.

There were no important changes in the corn market situation, but the high prices of bread grains gave a firm tone to the market and prices advanced ½ cent per bushel. Receipts at the principal markets were fairly large, but there was a continued good demand from feeders, industries and shippers, and shipments from the markets were reported only slightly smaller than current receipts. Cash prices advanced with futures, No. 3, yellow, being quoted at the close of the week at Chicago at $1 to $1.02, Kansas City, 94½ to 96½ cents; Minneapolis, 94½ to 96½ cents. At St. Louis, No. 2, yellow, was quoted at $1.00½ and No. 2, white, at 99 cents per bushel.

The oats market continues in a firm position, particularly for old crop grain. The prospective increase in acreage and generally favorable weather conditions have prevented any material increase in new crop future prices. Cash prices were about 1c higher but demand was of only moderate volume. There has been excellent demand for seed oats at Minneapolis, where elevator stocks have been decreasing rapidly. Stocks of oats in the principal markets are becoming unusually small and are less than half as large as a year ago. No. 3 white oats were quoted at the close of the week at Minneapolis at 55¾ to 57¼, Chicago 58 to 63½ and Kansas City 59 to 60 cents per bushel.

The barley market held steady, with prices slightly higher influenced by the advance in other grains. Maltsters were active buyers of good quality barley but very little of this was available at the principal markets. Feeding grades were also well taken. Barley of good malting quality was quoted at the close of the week at Duluth at 85-91c, Minneapolis 89 to 94c, Chicago 95c to $1.03 and Milwaukee 95c to $1.04. Feed barley sold at Minneapolis at 85 to 88c and at Chicago 90 to 94c. At the latter market feeding grades were selling about 2c lower than a week ago.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—Unfavorable weather reports from the South were reflected in further advances in the cotton market today. Prices made new high ground for the movement on all positions, May contracts selling at 20.08 and closing at 20.02. October advanced to 19.75 and closed at 19.72. The general market closed steady at net advances of 5 to 12 points.

The market opened steady at unchanged prices, to an advance of 6 points and soon showed net gains of 11 to 18 points on active months, July selling at 19.90 and December at 19.69. The early weather news was considered very favorable, pointing to rains or unsettled conditions followed by lower temperatures. Buying was active on the advance, and it was supposed to include covering or rebuying by recent sellers, with a broadening of commission-house demand. Some buying also was attributed to Liverpool and the trade.

The advance of about 2¾ to 3c a pound from the low levels early last February evidently attracted a good deal of realizing for over the week-end, and after the first rush of buying orders had been supplied, prices reacted 8 or 10 points from the best. The opinion of some local map readers that weather conditions might possibly change for the better by Monday morning, may have increased the disposition to take profits on long cotton. But the volume of business tapered off on the decline, and closing prices were within 5 or 6 points of the best. The attention of the trade appeared to be almost entirely monopolized by the weather news and apprehension of further delays in the new crop start, with possibility that considerable cotton might have to be replanted in some sections of the belt.

Private cables from Liverpool suggested nervousness over the new crop start in that market also, as there had been Continental and Bombay buying and sentiment was bullish on the unfavorable weather advices from the South, although business in cotton cloths and yarns was restricted.

Consumption of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 98,000 bales, against 188,000 last year and 60,000 two years ago.

Smaller Paper Money Limited This Year

(Associated Press.)

There will be little if any printing of the smaller sized paper money this year. A request of the Treasury Department yesterday for congressional permission to spend $309,000 of the amount appropriated for paper used in printing currency disclosed that unavoidable delays have arisen which will prevent the issuance of any great amount of the new sized currency this year.

The delays ocurred in procuring the paper, in the formulation of designs, and in the installation of the machinery.

Birger's Guardian Is to Be His Attorney

Benton, Ill., April 14 (A.P.).—On the ground that Charles Birger, condemned gang leader, is insane and incapable of handling his own affairs, Robert E Smith, his attorney, today had himself appointed as Birger's guardian by Circuit Judge Charles Miller.

Roy Martin, State's attorney, was in court, but offered no objection. Birger is to have a sanity hearing Monday He had been sentenced to be hanged yesterday for the murder of Mayor Joe Adams, of West City, but received an eleventh hour stay on an insanity plea.

Perry Wins Election To I. T. U. Position

Indianapolis, April 14 (A.P.).—Theodore Perry, of Indianapolis, progressive candidate, was elected first vice president of the International Typographical Union, it was announced at union headquarters here today on completion of the tabulation of votes of the special election held April 4. His opponent was John Phillips, of Philadelphia. The vote was taken to select a successor to Seth R. Brown, resigned. The final vote was 29,821 for Perry and 17,257 for Phillips.

T. B. PATON TO ADDRESS INSTITUTE OF BANKING

Will Discuss Legal Problems of Finance at Forum Dinner April 27.

EXCHANGE SESSION LIGHT

By F. W. PATTERSON.

While all of the forum dinner discussions this year held under the auspices of the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, have been extremely popular with local bankers, the final dinner which will be given on April 27 at the Raleight Hotel, is sure to prove the high spot in the season's meetings.

Judge Thomas B. Paton, general counsel of the American Bankers Association, one of the country's outstanding speakers on banking topics as well as one of the best informed men in the country on the intricate subject of banking, has consented to address the forum on that night. The subject of his address will be "Some Legal Problems in Banking," and following his talk he will lead the discussion which will come up with local bank officers participating.

The selection of the topic fits in well with the present situation in which Washington bankers are interested, as at this time their attention is focused upon the passage of bills in Congress which have particular reference to the uniform fiduciaries act, the joint deposit bill, which are at present on the Senate calendar, and considerable interest will naturally attach to an explanation by Judge Paton of the law underlying those important measures.

Inasmuch as there will be a big demand for places at this dinner it is urged that those who contemplate going make their reservations at once, sending a check for $2 to Frederick H. Cox, cashier, Commercial National Bank, treasurer of the forum committee. Harold W. Burnside, Farmers & Mechanics National Bank, who is chairman of the committee, has working with him in addition to Mr. Cox, James C. Dullin, jr., American Security & Trust Co., and T. Hunton Leith, Security Savings & Commercial Bank.

McKee Named Chairman.

H. H. McKee, president the National Capital Bank, a member of the advisory committee of the Stockholders Association of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, was elected chairman of that committee at the annual meeting held in the Virginia city on Friday. Another local banker named for a position of prominence in the organization was W. J. Waller, vice president of Federal-American National Bank, who was placed on the advisory committee to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Robert V. Fleming, president Riggs National Bank, whose term of office expired on Friday.

C. E. Tiffany, president of the Fauquier National Bank of Warrenton, Va., first vice president of the Stockholders Association, was elected president, succeeding John Poole, president of the Federal-American Bank, whose term of office as directing head ended with the meeting last week. George H. Keesee, of the Richmond Federal Reserve Board, who has a host of friends in the member banks of Washington and throughout the Fifth Federal Reserve District, was reelected secretary.

Closing Session Light.

The closing session of the week on the Washington Stock Exchange was the lightest in volume of trading of any day during the six days of activity, but little change in price levels was recorded and most of the stocks coming out sold firm or close to their last levels.

Mergenthaler Linotype, which has been especially active during the week, sold in a small lot at 103. Peoples Drug Stores preferred continued to show strength and sold in an odd lot at 128, even with the precious level. Merchants Transfer & Storage preferred, always strong, sold in two lots at 107½. Federal-American Co. preferred, which is closely held and appears but seldom, sold unchanged at 108.

Washington Gas Light failed to stir up any great amount of trading interest and transactions were held to a small sale at 90. Potomac Electric Power 5½ per cent preferred sold firm at 108½, while the 6 per cent preferred maintained its recent high point of 113. The common stock of Washington Railway & Electric, which last sold at 485, dropped off 5 points in the bid price with an offer of 460. Chapin-Sacks, 8 per cent preferred sold in two lots upward to 107½.

Bond transactions were meager with Washington Gas Light 6s series "A" moving at 106 for the $1,000, and Washington Railway & Electric 4s selling at 93⅝.

The weekly bid on the unlisted department failed to bring out any changes in the offering price, while asked price failed to materialize except in the case of Anacostia Bank with asked at 375 and bid at 325.

Officers Are Reelected.

Ezra Gould, president; R. H. Bagby, vice president; Thomas J. Groom, vice president and cashier; A. S. Offutt, L. W. Davis, Joseph M. McCarthy, assistant cashiers, and M. H. Buckingham, assistant secretary.

Members of the board who were present following their reelection for the year were: Walter K. Bachrack, R. H. Bagby, Ezra Gould, Mahlon Groo, Thomas J. Groom, George Hayes, Charles J. Kappler, Charles H. Kindle, L. Hoyt Lamb, Jesse B. K. Lee, Edward F. Pickford, J. C. Pyles, Edwin E. Roberts, E. Hume Talbert, John P. F. White and E. S. Wolfe.

The president's report showed that deposits of the institution which totaled $2,132,492 at the close of 1927, were $239,777 in advance of the previous twelve months, while the dividend payment to stockholders was 22 per cent within the year.

Kemmerer On Trip.

Dr. E. W. Kemmerer, professor of finance of economics at Princeton University and president of the Stable Money Association, has departed on a trip visiting the association's branches in the middle West and on the Pacific Coast and to participate in the Institute of Finance to be held at Occidental College, Los Angeles, April 19, 20, 21.

The Stable Money Association has been organized to spread the understanding of the evils due to fluctuations of the price level and of the various measures proposed for stabilization and consists of bankers, economists, industrialists, farm-labor leaders and many others.

Frederick A. Delano, of Washington, is one of its vice presidents. Others sharing the same title being Henry A. Wallace, Nicholas Murray Butler, John W. Davis, Fred I. Kent, Charles Evans Hughes, William Cooper Procter, William H. Crocker, Henry M. Robinson and others. The objectives of the association are to minimize unemployment, stabilize commerce and provide a measure of value just and equitable to creditors and debtors, reduce the evils of "business cycles" and promote business and social stability.

Debits Fall Off.

Debits to individual accounts, as reported to the Federal Reserve Board by banks in leading cities for the week ended April 11, which included but five business days in a number of cities, aggregated $14,064,000, or 26.2 per cent, below the total of $19,064,000,000 reported for the preceding week, and 7.3 per cent above the total for the week ended April 13, 1927.

Aggregate debits for 141 centers for which figures have been published weekly amounted to $13,276,572,000, as compared with $18,198,866,000 for the preceding week and $12,317,722,000 for the week ended April 13, 1927.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, April 14 (A.P.).—Breadstuff prices aimed for the zenith today, every delivery, both of wheat and rye, establishing a new top-price record for the season. Drought in the Southwest, with freezing temperatures and high winds, boding ill for the 1928 domestic wheat yield, had much to do with bringing about something akin to a buying stampede.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong at virtually the day's highest level, 2⅜c to 3⅛c net advance. Rye finished 2c to 3⅛c up, corn showing 1¼c to 1¾c gain, oats ⅜@¾c to 1⅛c higher and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12c.

Today climaxed three successive days of probably the heaviest grain dealings of the year on the board of trade, with wheat not only at the highest price of the present crop, but also 25c higher than a year ago. In some quarters it was asserted that big speculators who have been active of late on the stock exchange with sensational results had transferred their energies to the wheat pit.

In the general rush today to purchase wheat the May delivery price was hoisted to $1.54⅜ a bushel, compared with $1.53 the best previous record which heretofore had been unsurpassed since last July. Immense profit-taking sales on the upward swings of the market were readily absorbed, and in some cases the rise extended to more than 11c a bushel above quotations current earlier in the week. Ordinarily such a volume of selling to realize profits would have resulted in a reaction of several cents, but the broad character of the trading today made the market apparently immune to this effect.

In addition to fear of crop losses from unseasonable low temperatures in the Southwest, advices at hand today indicated that prevailing high winds there were sapping moisture from the soil and that in various places the consequent blowing of dust had become a serious menace, especially as the official forecast pointed to continued absence of rain. On the other hand, word of heavy snowfalls in the spring wheat belt failed, for at least the time being, to have any noticeable market influence.

Corn and oats as well as rye were active and higher, mainly in consequence of wheat strength. Wet weather over the corn belt was also a factor, and there was talk of good export business in oats.

Provisions were firmer, sympathizing with upturns both in hog values and in grain.

GIRLS FRIENDLY SOCIETY

Miss Clara Nourse has returned to the Holiday House after a four months' tour of Europe. The Holiday House is open for guests, and reservations may also be made for luncheons, bridge parties and dinners by telephoning Alexandria 27-F-11.

The spring conference of the Girls' Friendly Society in America, will be held tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday, at the Washington National Center, 1533 New Hampshire avenue. The conference will open tomorrow morning. The discussion from 2:15 to 4, will be led by the Rev. John W. Suter, jr., executive secretary, department of religious education, national council of the Protestant Episcopal Church, his topic being "The Department of Religious Education and the G. F. S. A."

From 4:30 to 5:30 a meeting of the committee on worship will be held. At 7:45 p. m. Dr. Adelaide T. Case, professor of religious education, Teachers College, New York City, chairman of department activities, G. F. S. A., will speak on "What of the Coming Year?"

Tuesday morning, at 9:30 Mrs. F. H. Ginn, diocesan president of the society in Cleveland, Ohio, will open the conference with meditations. From 10 to 12:30 the topic will be "Our Work With Individuals." Dr. Adele Streesman, of the medical department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., New York City, opening the discussion which will be led by Mrs. Harrison Elliott, expert on discussion methods New York City. The discussion will be continued in the afternoon session. At 7:45 p. m. Mrs J. W. Pfau, chairman of the finance committee G. F. S. A., will speak on "Interpreting National Finance." Followed by a talk on "The Why and How of the Branch Budget," by Miss Margaret Smythe, branch president of St. Barnabas' Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

Mrs. Ginn will also open the conference on Wednesday morning at 9:30 with meditations. From 10 to 12:30 the discussion will be led by Mrs. Elliott, the topic being "What Is Our Equipment and What Are Our Resources?" The afternoon session will be devoted to interest groups, the subject to be determined by the conference. From 4:30 to 5:30 a meeting of the Holiday House committee will be held. At 7:45 p. m. a summary of the conference and closing services will be held by Miss Florence Newbold, executive secretary of the field division of the G. F. S. A. A trip to Mount Vernon and the Washington Holiday House has been planned for Thursday April 19.

The Rev. W. F. Carpenter opened the meeting of the branch at St. David's chapel on Tuesday afternoon. Afterward a rehearsal of the spring entertainment was held. Extra rehearsals were held during Easter week.

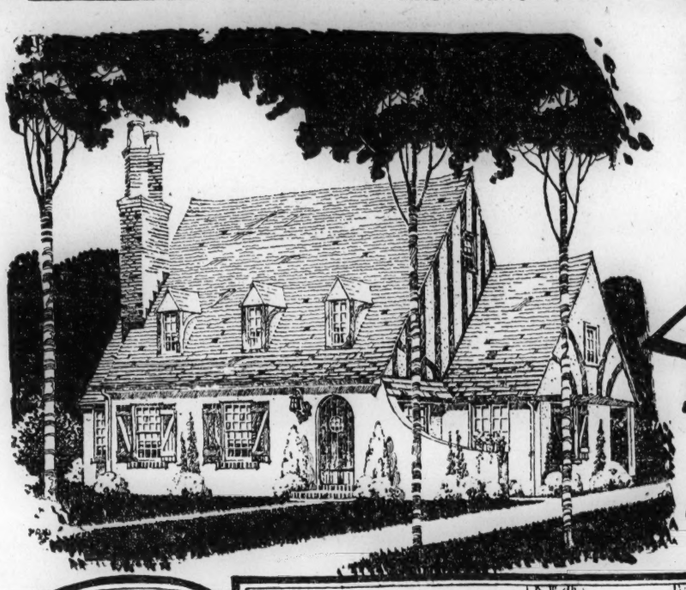

The branch at St. John's Church, Bethesda, Md., will have a benefit movie at the Chevy Chase Theater on April 25, at 3 p. m., the attraction being "Black Cyclone." The junior members of the branch are trying to raise money to spend a week at the seashore as a group and have already given a dinner and will later present two plays to help pay their expenses.

The branch from the Church of the Advent met at the home of Miss Helen Taylor, branch president, on Monday evening. The girls valued and packed a box of bandages and drugs for a mission in Virginia, and discussed plans for a benefit by the national players later on.

A waffle birthday party was given by Mrs. C. C. Cawson and the members of the branch at St. Mark's Church on Tuesday evening for Mrs. Grace Luttrell Roberts, branch secretary. Mrs. Roberts was also presented with a hand-painted dish. The branch is planning a play to be presented on April 26.

The branch at the Chapel of the Nativity had a social and "stunt night" on Tuesday evening. Miss Frances Johnson was chairman of the refreshment committee and Miss Edna Britt was in charge of the "stunts." The branch will present "Lucia's Lover" at the spring entertainment, under the direction of Mrs. Clyde Bell.

TO RENOUNCE WAR.

Two drafts of a proposed multilateral treaty to renounce war have been prepared for the consideration of Great Britain, Italy, Germany and Japan. One draft is the work of Secretary Kellogg and the other is the work of Foreign Minister Briand. There is as much difference between them as between light and darkness.

It is assumed in many quarters that the United States and France have agreed upon a plan to renounce war and that they are simultaneously pressing the plan upon the other great powers. This assumption is an error. The only point upon which France and the United States have agreed is that they shall consult the other powers. France does not accept the Kellogg plan, and Mr. Kellogg has already rejected M. Briand's proposals.

Mr. Kellogg sends to the other powers the draft of a treaty in which the signatories renounce war as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another, and agree that the settlement of all disputes of whatever nature or origin which may arise among them shall never be sought except by pacific means.

That is all. The proposed treaty does not provide that it shall not be effective until all nations have signed it; or that the failure to observe it by one nation will release all the others; or that the new treaty shall not be substituted for or prejudice prior obligations, such as the League of Nations covenant, military alliances, or Locarno agreements; or that the signatories are not to be deprived of the right to arm and defend themselves. Mr. Kellogg proposes simply that the powers shall renounce war and agree to settle all differences by pacific means.

This proposal is in conflict with many treaties, notably the treaty embodying the League of Nations covenant. In that agreement the members of the league reserve the right to make war and to abolish the neutrality of all nations. The Locarno pacts require certain nations to go to war in defense of others if attacked. Other treaties oblige certain nations to preserve the neutrality of others, by making war if necessary. All agreements made for the preservation of peace in Europe are based upon the idea that war shall be the means of setting all conflicts whenever necessary.

The draft of M. Briand's proposal has not yet been published, but its principal features were outlined by him in his note of March 30 to Secretary Kellogg. His plan is as follows: A treaty renouncing war should be made, but, unless the signatories agreed otherwise, it should not be binding until all nations had agreed to it. The treaty should provide that all nations should be released if one of the parties should fail to keep its word. The agreement to renounce war should not deprive the parties of the right of legitimate defense. It should be made clear that the new treaty does not supersede or prejudice the previous obligations contained in the covenant of the League of Nations, the Locarno agreements or treaties guaranteeing neutrality.

Thus, it is apparent that M. Briand's idea of "renouncing war" is entirely different from Mr. Kellogg's idea. M. Briand suggests that an unconditional treaty would expose the signatories to "juridical difficulties resulting from the respective positions of various powers with regard to one another." Hence the treaty could not operate with respect to one power "unless the other states exposed to the possibility of grave controversies with that party were also signatories thereof." As M. Briand sees it, practically all nations are exposed to the possibility of controversy, therefore he holds that the treaty renouncing war should not be binding upon any power unless binding upon all.

Mr. Kellogg in his note to the powers suggests that if they will agree to the unconditional renunciation of war the act will have "tremendous moral effect and ultimately lead to the adherence of all the other governments of the world." This is true, beyond doubt, but it is already apparent that France will not enter into an unconditional agreement to renounce war. Thus, at the very outset, Mr. Kellogg's plan strikes the immovable obstacle set up by the covenant of the League of Nations. M. Briand in his note spoke of "seeking * * * any adjustments which in the last analysis may be forthcoming with respect to the possibility of reconciling previous obligations with the terms of the contemplated new treaty."

If the great powers are now willing to scrap the war-making machinery of the League of Nations, the Locarno agreements, and military alliances, they can enter into an unconditional treaty to renounce war. Then they can disarm and reduce their fighting equipment to the bare requirements of internal order. The rivalry of navies will disappear, and merchant shipping will not be kept ready for war purposes. Doubtless the United States would then eagerly accept the jurisdiction of a remodeled world court, and international cooperation in good works could proceed without the fear that sociological proposals were a mask for political intrigue.

But all this is contingent upon a mighty "if." The chances of success on Mr. Kellogg's part are one in a million. Nevertheless, it is well that the United States should make this simple and sweeping proposal to renounce war. Let the other great powers accept it if they will.

PACIFISTS IN THE D. A. R.

Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has issued a statement setting forth the policy of the organization and incidentally paying her respects to a few irresponsible pacifists who attacked the society for its championship of the Government's naval program. These pacifists, while members of the society, have not been prominent in the organization, and apparently they hold membership solely for the purpose of "boring from within," in the hope of defeating its patriotic purposes.

Included in the attack made by these pacifists was the charge that the D. A. R. had an official blacklist, upon which were the names of prominent citizens who had incurred the displeasure of the society because of their pacifist leanings. Mrs. Brosseau shows that while the national society has no such blacklist, the State leaders are within their legal and moral rights when they advise their chapters regarding speakers who seek to enfeeble the United States rather than supporting the loyal policy of the D. A. R.

There need be no doubt as to the attitude of the D. A. R. when this matter comes before it. Mrs. Brosseau has faithfully interpreted the spirit of the society and of American womanhood when she has supported a program for better naval defense. The women of the United States are not cowards or defeatists. They do not believe in surrendering American rights or in sacrificing American life through failure to provide means of defense. The veterans' hospitals shelter many of their sons who might now be strong and well if the United States had been able to exert its strength when the need arose. American mothers, who bear a double burden whenever there is war, are determined that this country shall never again be caught unprepared if they can prevent it. They feel that this mighty Nation can be depended upon to use its strength wisely and not provocatively. They do not suspect the motives of the United States Government, nor do they believe that the American people would run amuck if the Navy should be increased.

With the United States armed in proportion to its size and importance in the world, the decision as to peace or war would rest with Americans, for no other nation would be likely to make war against America armed. If, however, any nation should be so insane as to make war against this country, without regard to its state of preparedness, it would still be necessary to be armed. The difference between prepared defense and improvised defense would be a few thousand American lives thrown away. Which mother is willing to give her son rather than see the United States suitably armed for defense?

The pacifists are incurably wrong in logic and common sense. They base their case upon ignorant trust in foreign nations and in disloyal distrust of their own country. Cowardice is a large element in their makeup, together with its twin, false witness. The women who have attacked the D. A. R. deserve immediate expulsion as well as exposure. There can be no place for them in a patriotic American society.

THE BREMEN'S FLIGHT.

The fact that the courageous crew of the monoplane Bremen were forced to land many miles short of their announced destination does not becloud the glory of their accomplishment. Through fog and storm they guided their fragile craft over 2,000 miles of restless ocean. They accomplished what never before had been accomplished.

Increased evidence has been produced to show that the East-to-West flight across the Atlantic constitutes the supreme test of man and ship. The Bremen, theoretically, should have been able to complete the voyage from Baldonnel Airdrome, Dublin, to Mitchel Field, Long Island. Head winds retarded her. Storms forced her out of the plotted course. Her fuel was exhausted many miles short of her destination, and it was only a kindly Providence that brought her over tiny Greenly Island, upon which she was landed.

Baron Ehrenfield von Huenefeld, Capt. Herman Koehl and Col. James J. Fitzmaurice, crew of the Bremen, have gone through a harrowing experience. What their feelings must have been as they realized that the fuel supply was running low, and as they searched the boundless waste beneath them for a sign of land, can only be imagined. They are disappointed in not reaching their objective, but their achievement, nevertheless, is great. For the first time, man has flown from Europe to America. For the first time aviation will have learned what is in store for those who take flight over the ocean toward the setting sun. Five men and two women have gone to their deaths in similar adventures, and no one knows what befell them. Huenefeld, Koehl and Fitzmaurice have gained an experience that will be useful to all oceanic aviators. Their contribution to aeronautics is permanent and invaluable.

THE S-4 FINDINGS.

The final report on the sinking of the S-4 will be much more generally approved than the first findings, which sought to throw the blame not only on the commanding officers of the two vessels engaged in the collision but upon Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumby, who commanded the salvage operations. Judged from the viewpoint of the layman the unfortunate accident was due more to the failure to make known the fact that submarine operations were in progress in the waters off Provincetown than any other factor.

It is generally agreed now, since the S-4 has been brought to the surface and examined, that everything was done that could have been to raise the sunken vessel. The realization that some of the men were still alive created a degree of hysteria during which the difficulties of the situation were misrepresented. The work was carried on and concluded under the most adverse circumstances. All of the men connected with the task, notably the divers, showed devotion and heroism in the greatest degree.

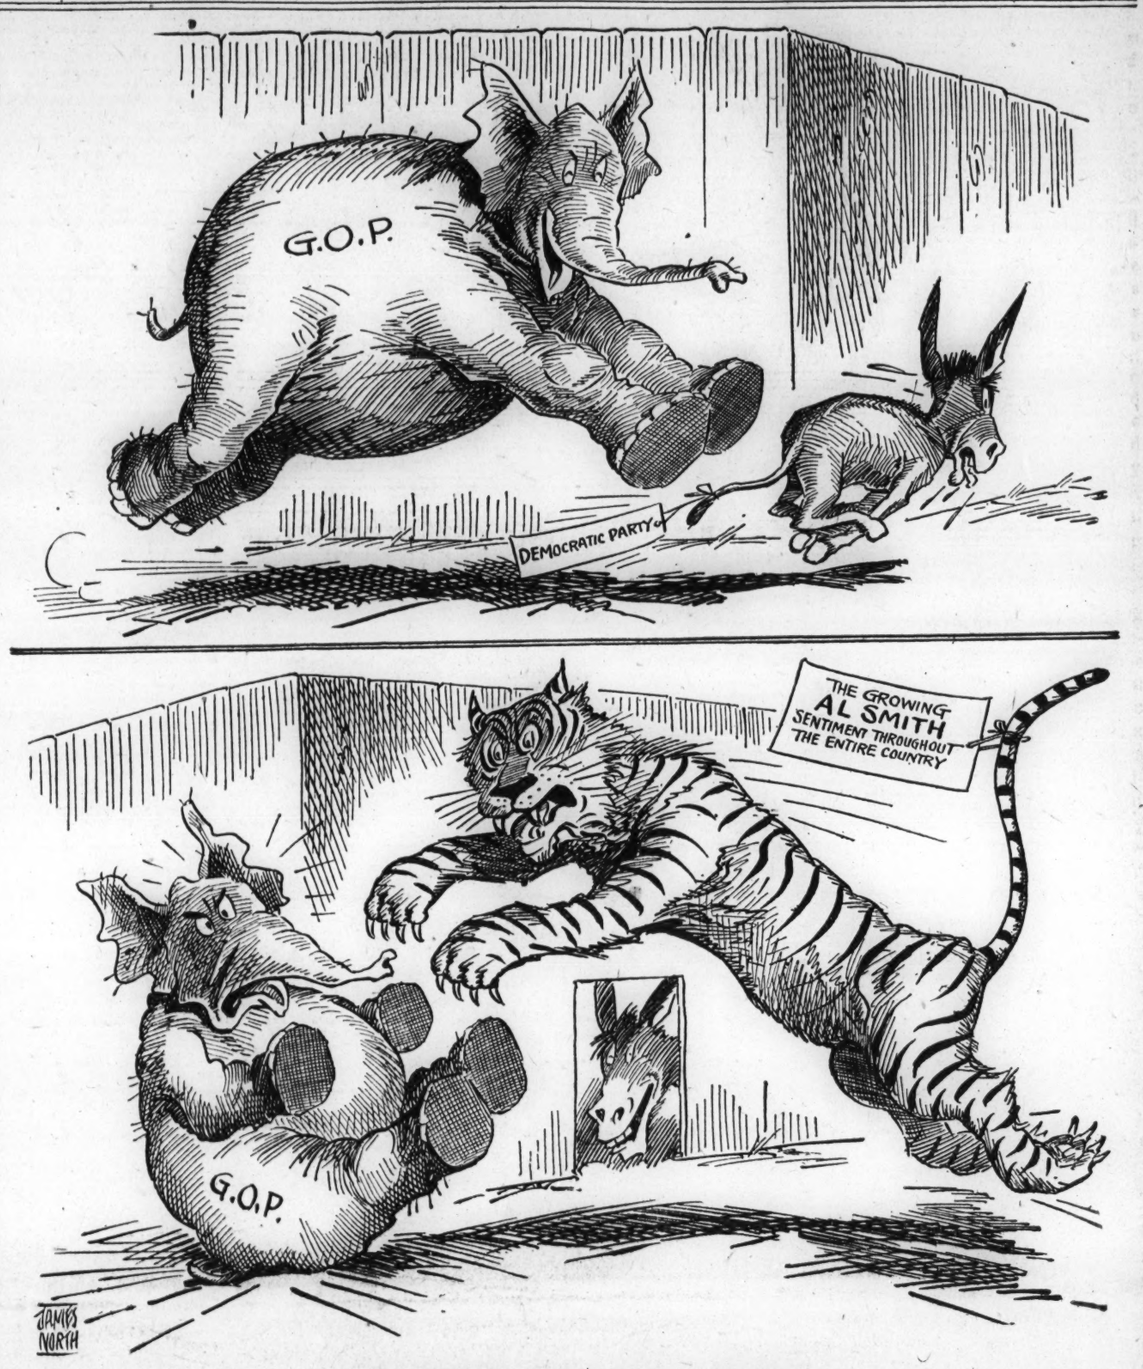

Some valuable information may be derived from the tragic sinking of the S-4. The Navy Department already has announced that many protective devices, which were not included in the S-4, have been incorporated in the newer submarines. Other details have been brought to light by the study of the raised vessel. If this knowledge is properly used and underwater operations are properly safeguarded in the future, the Nation may hope to be spared such another shock as it experienced when the final message came from those imprisoned in the S-4.

A DRY WASHINGTON?

Mayor Mackey of Philadelphia who surprised the country last week with the announcement that he is and always has been a prohibitionist, now makes a preposterous suggestion. In reply to Federal criticism of dry enforcement in Philadelphia, he recommends that the dry members of Congress take a hand in enforcing prohibition in Washington.

"They have many times the force in Washington that is available here to clean up the city," says Mayor Mackey. "They have a chance to show that it can be done, if it really can. Down in Washington, where they have all dry members of Congress, who make these laws, and who also have legislative authority over the District of Columbia, they could mobilize the greatest force of Treasury agents in the country. They have the greatest administrative authority in the country and more Federal employes sworn to support the Constitution than in any other municipality, and yet Philadelphia is making the greatest effort of any city in the country to enforce prohibition. Why doesn't Congress give the rest of the Nation a real example of the enforcement of dry laws, if prohibition is enforceable?"

It would be both interesting and novel if Congress should accept the challenge of the Philadelphia Mayor. A crusade of the sort suggested would hardly find as many members enlisted in the ranks as appear on the floor to vote dry whenever the occasion requires. The recent conviction of the "Man in the Green Hat" recalls the fact that bootleggers have their customers in Congress as well as elsewhere, and that adherents of the prohibition law do not always consider it personal in application.

The Elephant Encounters a Surprise.

AND THIS FROM BUSINESS MEN.

The United States Chamber of Commerce is doing neither itself nor the country any good by attempting to save face in its tax reduction campaign. The chamber insisted last fall that a $400,000,000 tax cut could and should be made. Events have shown this position to be thoroughly unsound. Representatives of the organization now advance a plan for a $394,000,000 reduction program. On the surface this would seem to be virtually the same proposal as the prior one. The amount is close enough to the original sum, but the method of arriving at the total has been radically altered. As Ogden L. Mills, Undersecretary of the Treasury, stated, it is a "carefully masked but nevertheless complete retreat."

The representatives of the chamber do not deny that the adoption of their plan might create a deficit. They minimize that prospect. "In view of the credit standing of the Government and the low interest rates it can obtain," they say, "there should be no great cause for alarm, even though a deficit, through unexpected developments, should arise." Presented by business men, this is a proposal that they would not consider in managing their own business affairs. They do not represent the average business man or corporation when they make such a proposal.

Another novelty suggested by the chamber is that the interest on the war debt be used, not for the reduction of the obligations which this Government incurred during the war, but for running expenses. This is an ingenious form of bookkeeping designed merely to defraud the taxpayer. The United States did not obtain, without interest, the money loaned to foreign nations. Since it must continue to pay a premium to those from whom it borrowed, what better place can there be to apply foreign interest payments than upon the debt?

The final theory of the proponents of the chamber plan is that by tax reduction sufficient to eliminate any surplus the margin between revenues and expenditures will become so small as to force economy upon Congress. With such a brake, it is contended that Congress will be more sparing in the distribution of public funds. But the chamber goes further, and proposes that Congress shall have a deficit to deal with.

The best that can be said for the chamber's presentation is that it is ingenious. It is a masterpiece of "face saving." Having revised its total figures only $6,000,000, the organization seems to be bent upon convincing the public that it was on the right track all the time. A much better stand would be for the chamber to acknowledge its error. Nothing is to be gained by stubborn insistence upon excessive tax reduction. It has been clearly shown how far reduction may be made, and beyond that Congress should not go.

BRAIN ATHLETES.

Before long the world may be shocked by the commercialization of college brains, instead of brawn as is now the case. Announcement has just been made that Harvard and Yale will meet on an educational battlefield this spring. Mrs. William Lowell Putnam, sister-in-law of A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard, has established a trust fund in memory of her husband, from the income of which some $5,000 a year is to be used for prizes and expenses in an effort to improve scholarship through teamwork competition and the stimulus which comes from working for the glory of one's alma mater—incentives hitherto, according to the deed of gift, confined to college athletes.

In accordance with the plan a competitive examination will be held on April 30 between teams of ten men representing Harvard and Yale. The subject will be English literature, and a jury of neutral college professors will rank the papers. It is not stated what provisions are to be made for spectators, or whether the successful contestants will receive their major letter. It will not be long, however, before some means will have to be adopted for taking care of the old grads at these contests. A father whose son is a member of the "brain" squad can hardly be expected to remain quietly at home while the struggle is on. A stadium will be needed, and arrangements will have to be made for allotting tickets to the classes in rotation to prevent an annual ticket scandal.

The danger will come when proselyting is resorted to by the alumni to make certain of victory. It will, of course, be much more difficult to find likely material for the "brain" team than it now is to get promising athletes. The new idea will have to be in operation a few years before prep school boys become enthusiastic over it. The inducements held out to intellectual giants, therefore, may have to be even greater than those now used to attract athletes. In the present stage it may be possible to introduce a few "ringers" in the form of Oxford or Cambridge graduates, but before many years have passed the incentive provided by a winning "brain" team may prove as powerful a stimulus to matriculation as a successful eleven is today.

The Easter day parades served once more to bring into public notice the fact that the top hat is passing. The "two gallon" hat was noticeable by its absence on Fifth avenue. Even greater strongholds of the "topper" are surrendering. It is no longer obligatory to wear such venerable headgear in London. True, members of the London Stock Exchange stick to the badge of their trade, but one may enter the foreign office and other government departments equipped with a soft hat. The politician here and abroad must still have one for state occasions, but the problem before long may be finding a place where they are on sale.

VIEWS OF READERS ON LIVE TOPICS, LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Demands of Cities for Referendums and Rule by Pure Democracy Seen as Menace to Representative Government by Writer Who Cites Conditions in Chicago as An Example. Recalling That Most of the Population Is Now Urban, He Asks if Conditions Will Not Grow Worse Rather Than Improve.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I fancy I sound an old croaker, but after reading in this morning's paper of the Chicago election, I say to myself, can Democracy endure? Watchers for the Deneen forces, I read, were shot, slugged, kidnaped without interference from the police.

I note that Lord Bryce constantly said that our cities were but failures in government. I note that for the first time in our history our population, formerly rural, in 1920 became preponderantly urban, 54 per cent of our people now living in cities.

I note with this tendency comes the call for pure democracy, everybody allowed to decide everything by referendum. I marvel at how little the laity realize the labor and cost of a referendum vote. Voters do not turn to referenda unless personally instructed, and personal education of each voter is simply beyond the purse of most causes.

So I say: Can our democratic form of government last when our population lives mostly in cities? Can it last when more and more that city population demands no longer representative government, but pure democracy, government by referendum?

This is the idea toward which we are moving. Chicago seems to lack all the restraint necessary for successful self-government by representatives.

And yet Chicago and New York are multiplying along with the tendency to pure democracy. At least, conditions call for thought. E. H. TILDEN.

Cambridge, April 11, 1928.

Automobile Thefts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under the District code the stealing of any article of $50 or more in value is grand larceny, and the punishment for grand larceny is imprisonment in the penitentiary. Why do the courts show such extreme leniency to those who steal automobiles? Frequently the stolen car is worth more than $1,000, yet the act is not treated as grand larceny. I have been told that in this city there are two boys who have been arrested three times, charged with car stealing, but in neither case was even a jail sentence given.

If car stealing is to be stopped it must be treated as the code directs and severe penalties inflicted on the thief. So common has this offense become and so lenient have been the courts that even girls have entered the list of stealing. Thefts by schoolboys are of weekly occurrence. Some drastic action is necessary to put an end to such depredations. So bold have the offenders become that they take an auto in broad day and from the immediate front of the owner. It is larceny pure and simple. A SUFFERER.

A TREE CITY.

By WM. TIPTON TALBOTT.

City of Trees,
Glad Capital of Trees,
Thoughts that are auguries
Of growth in you
May well possess a civic dreamer who Sees in the hush of summer skies
The breath of summer skies
Stir in the leaves.

He sees homelights that glow
From year to year to cheer you as you grow,
Clad in your garb of green.

As in the dreams of your first planners seen,
Mature you grow.
In the white pride
Of chaste and classic coutours beautified—
Plinths, columns, architraves,
And domes;
Epic memorials marking well-kept graves;
Boulevards,
Green streets that skirt front yards
Of humble homes;
Schools where the love of truth and country thrives;
Great flower beds, river parks, encircling drives,
And trees.

Stirred by such auguries,
Our trust is that we may
While life endures
Be subject to the lures
That with fresh variance from day to day
Renew
Our dreams of you,
Our bondage to the beauty that is yours,
City of Trees,
Glad Capital of Trees,
Bright, radiant, glad Metropolis of Trees.

Objection Is Made to Appointment of Education Board Members by District Supreme Court—Writer Declares District Commissioners Should Be Given Plenary Powers to Maintain Efficient Control of Schools—Present Method Held Unsatisfactory as Judges Have No Powers of Discipline.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Four methods of selecting the members of the Board of Education are now engaging the mind of the citizens of the District of Columbia.

1. Appointment by the judges of the supreme court, as at present prevails, is universally conceded to be unsatisfactory. The court itself has gone on record to this effect. The objection is not merely a theoretical one. In addition to the patent fact that the mixture of judicial and administrative functions is contrary to our theory of government, the practical objection is obvious, in that the court has not the power of discipline or dismissal over its own appointees. The members of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia as appointed by the supreme court of this jurisdiction, are the only self-responsible officials under our entire scheme of government. There is no power under the Government whereby they can be removed for malfeasance or nonfeasance in office.

2. The choice of the school board by popular election would be very unwise under the present political status of the District of Columbia. The education of the young, above all other features of government should be kept out of the maelstrom of politics. The City of Washington is filled with frustrated politicians thrown upon the National Capital by the exigencies of national politics. They are eager to exercise their suppressed talent. It would be little short of a calamity to let loose all of the petty wiles and guiles of the game on our school system. I believe that it is political principle that the populace become the more reckless and excitable when the least responsibility is involved in political agitation. There is more noise and confusion and cross-bickering in the quadrennial squabble for delegates by both parties in the District of Columbia, than in the States where important political problems are at stake. It is easy to predict that the unseemly squabbles of school board politics would disgust Congress with the idea of granting a more comprehensive basis of local self-government.

3. It has been seriously proposed to place the power of appointment in the hands of the President of the United States. This would be the most unfortunate step of all. Our school system then would not only be involved in local politics, but in national politics. The President's chief advisers on all questions are the heads of the political organizations of his own party. He could not of his own knowledge and familiarity know the relative merits of individuals for this important local function. The positions would be used to pay off political obligations. This would be especially true as concerns the colored members of the board. Here would be easy berths to satisfy the claims of colored politicians without encountering the objections usually met with in assigning them to places in the Federal service.

Recently the suggestion was made to place the office of recorder of deeds under the District government. The proposition was logical and obviously in the interest of economy and good administration. Only one objection could be urged against it, and that was that the present plan enables the President to meet the traditional political aspirations of the colored race.

There is no more reason why the President should appoint the school board in the District of Columbia than that the Governor of Maryland should select the head of the schools in Baltimore. It would certainly be more reasonable to have the President appoint the chief of police or the head of the Fire Department than directors of the schools, for these functions bear more directly upon Federal interests. Let us by all means keep the schools free from the entanglement of politics, and especially from the entanglement of foreign politics.

4. There is but one logical and normal place to vest the appointment of the local school board, and that is in the Commissioners of the District of Columbia. The President appoints the Commissioners, and therefore has reserved control over every feature of government under their jurisdiction.

The Commissioners should have immediate control over all departments of the local government. Congress had just as well detach the sewer department and set it up as an independent entity as to do so with the schools. Indeed, we once heard a superintendent of the District schools boast that he was a coordinate department of the Government. The squabble between the Commissioners and the school board has amounted to open disgrace in years gone by. The lack of articulate relationship leaves the way open for perpetual bickering and wrangles between these two illy related functioning bodies. The members of the school board should be appointed by the Commissioners and made responsible to them, just as is the case with the heads of all other branches of the District government.

The Commissioners are in touch with all of the outstanding citizens in their jurisdiction. They know exactly the men and women best suited to conduct the educational system. To deprive them of this normal portion of their duty and responsibilities merely serves to decentralize the local government and to rob the Board of Commissioners of the prestige and dignity which are their just due.

At one time the appointment was vested by Congress in the Board of Commissioners. The change was made because of some incidental dissatisfactions, some temporary unhappiness in school administration. At first the board was elected by the people, then it was placed in the hands of the Commissioners, and finally given over to the judges. Observation proves that the Commissioners selected as competent and as disinterested citizens as were chosen under either of the other methods. It maw be conceded that good citizens will be chosen under any plan. But the great question is the efficient control and management of the schools, and not merely the method of appointment. From every point of view the balance of advantage lies with lodgment of plenary powers in the Commissioners. KELLY MILLER.

Robert T. Lincoln Inherited His Father's Clear View, Humor, Broad Sympathies and Patience and From the Todd Family His Physique, Says Correspondent; Regretted He Did Not Go to Ford's Theater, for He Might Have Saved Life of His Father.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the Evening Star of April 6 appears the following description of R. T. Lincoln: "* * * The moody man who inherited such a wake of sorrow but who resembled his parent little in looks or disposition * * *."

Men who frequented the "Bob Lincoln Corner" of the Metropolitan Club, within the last decade and a half, can recognize but one unimportant item in this description as in any way descriptive of Robert Todd Lincoln. He did not, in general physical effect, resemble his father in looks, as was always more than apparent.

He was not moody. He was never overborne or oppressed by his father's greatness. He had the fine appreciation of that greatness, that could come only to a man of his own wide experience in the more important affairs of the country, administrations, in diplomacy, in business and in politics, coupled with a touching filial affection, understanding and admiration for that intimate companion of his boyhood, his father.

He inherited his father's clear view of the right, his broad sympathies and his wonderful patience. He inherited the Todd physique and the Lincoln mind, soul and feeling.

His detached view of self, which enabled him to estimate himself as if he were some other person, was startlingly like that of his father.

He had his father's sense of humor and was a most delightful raconteur.

It seems to me that no one can begin to get a little comprehension of what was Abraham Lincoln who has not heard Robert Lincoln relate the preliminaries of and the circumstances attending that Cabinet meeting in which Chase denied, in Trumbull's presence, what he himself had told that senator in regard to the administration's giving in to the Confederacy and how and why this denial brought no rupture of the Cabinet and no split in the Republican party at that most critical crisis.

Of course, Mr. Lincoln could be cruelly hurt by any disrespect for his father's memory, intentional or otherwise, as he was hurt by that artistic insolence, the Barnard statue of Lincoln.

Tributes to his father's memory, great and powerful or crude and humble, were ever recurring satisfactions to him. The Lincoln Memorial was, for him, a constant delight and was, perhaps, the most satisfactory of all tributes.

That he did not go to Ford's Theater with the party the night his father was killed, was alway a source of keen regret; for he thought that had he been of that theater party, his place, as a youngster, would have been against the closed door or in the doorway of the box through which Booth entered, and would thus have been interposed, with perhaps, happy results, between his father and Booth. He felt keen regret that he was not of that theater party, but never remorse.

He bore his sorrows and he carried his joys, in his wonderful inheritance as his father's son, as a Lincoln should.

His decision to have his father's papers kept confidential, for a time, lest early publicity might wound some one, came naturally to a man of his fine feelings.

That he was oppressed by an indefinite but ominous evil contained in his father's confidential papers, seems childish nonsense to people who knew Robert Todd Lincoln.

He was never moody, he was a genial acquaintance, a most delightful companion and the most loyal of friends.

God rest his soul.

W. W. KIMBALL.

Guessing Fest Holds Welch Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "expert" once more—this time the statistical expert! The annual guessfest is now on. This time the occasion is the Welch bill; and the several bunches of statistical guessers have turned in their guesses One lot thinks it will cost the Government about $90,000,000, another aggregation of figurative guessers thinks it will cost about $68,000,000, and another still less—about half the biggest guess.

The retirement-liberalization bill has been made to wait for these expert guessers to turn in their guesses, and now the Welch bill is to suffer from the same "excuse." In the first case they are now busy calculating what the cost to the Government is for the retirement measure—so much from the Government and so much from the employes—regardless of the fact that, except for the cost of administering the law, it has not cost the Government a red cent, but, on the contrary, the whole cost has been borne by the employes, and the surplus is now about $70,000,000.

The Senate committee has reported a bill liberalizing the retirement law; but has only slightly reduced the age at which an employe may retire after 30 years' service. It has been said that certain of the higher-ups believe that the age of 60 is too young for voluntary retirement, on the theory, I suppose, that all these employes are going to rush from the service as soon as they are 60; when the fact is that, except in rare cases it will take a team of horses to pull them away from the pay roll. Probably not one of the committee that reported this bill ever did one consecutive day's work under taskmasters (for that is what chiefs and foremen are) by the whistle or bell, or would know a day's labor if they met it in the middle of the road.

REASSURED by the continued progress in the condition of her mother, Mrs. Andrew Goodhue, Mrs. Coolidge returned to the White House Friday after an extended absence in Northampton, Mass. There has been no announcement, however, of garden parties at the Executive Mansion for this spring, and whether or not they will be given will doubtless depend on the state of the health of Mrs. Coolidge and also of Mrs. Goodhue's condition. The usual garden party for the veterans in service hospitals in Washington and vicinity is one of the most unique and picturesque features of the spring season. This entertainment was established by Mrs. Harding shortly after her coming to the White House, and even the seasons when the President and Mrs. Coolidge have not given the usual out-of-door fetes, they have never failed to entertain these veterans.

THE return of Mrs. Coolidge may bring announcement of where the summer White House will be this year. Many offers have been made to the President and Mrs. Coolidge of spacious estates, not only in the South and West, but in various parts of New England as well. President and Mrs. Coolidge remained in Washington two summers, when they enjoyed the expanse of grounds, the trees and fountains of the Executive Mansion, but this year they probably prefer to go away for a rest and change, after their strenuous winter in Washington.

EVER since society started on a round of after Easter gayeties again, which will, no doubt, last until the late summer this year, as is always the case before a presidential campaign, which keeps many families in town before they go to the conventions, the Capital has been thronged with record crowds of visitors. Every one seems to have guests now. Everywhere one meets sightseers, and the hotels were filled to their capacity all last week.

The week began with a dinner given by the Baby Cabinet, made up of the Assistant Secretaries of the executive departments. It was held on Monday night at the Willard Hotel, and the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Herbert Hoover, was the guest of honor.

The dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, was the guest of honor Tuesday night at a dinner given by Mr. Gilbert Grosvenor at the Cosmos Club. That evening there was also a concert at the Pan-American Building, when Dr. Leo S. Rowe entertained at the fourth concert of Latin-American music by the United Service Orchestra. There was a brilliant audience, who were most enthusiastic over the program. Every seat was taken in the Hall of the Americas, which shows the popularity of these concerts.

* * * *

THE Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Ferrara were dinner hosts Wednesday night in which their guests of honor were the Italian Ambassador and Nobil Donna Antoinette de Martino. There was a large dinner that night at the Mayflower, when the Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis were the honor guests of the members of the military affairs committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives and their wives. Senator and Mrs. Lawrence Tyson entertained at dinner also on Wednesday and again on Friday night.

Mrs. William Howard Taft, wife of the Chief Justice, and Mrs. Curtis D. Wilbur, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, were the guests of honor at a luncheon on Thursday at the Mayflower, when their hostess was Mrs. Charles H. Harlow. There were 50 guests, who were seated at a table in the shape of a Greek cross. The table decorations were unusually beautiful, with all kinds of spring flowers in silver vases, with silver birds on the corners of the table. Other luncheon hostesses on Thursday were Mrs. C. C. Dill, wife of Senator Dill, when Mme. Matsudaira, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, was the ranking guest; Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Bloom, who entertained for Mme. Tellez, wife of the Ambassador of Mexico, and Mrs. William Kearney Kerr, whose ranking guest was Mrs. Pierc Butler, wife of Justice Butler.

* * * *

THE Vice President and Mrs. Dawes were dinner hosts both Thursday night and last night, each time having about 110 guests. The luncheon hostesses on Friday were Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, wife of Senator Copeland; Mrs. Everett Sanders, wife of the secretary to the President, and Mrs William Fitch Kelley, who entertained in honor of Mme. Sze, wife of the Chinese Minister. The Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. van Royen, who lately returned from a trip to Havana, entertained at a small dinner on Friday night.

The Ambassador of Italy and Nobil Donna Antoinietta de Martino were dinner hosts last night when their ranking guest was the Ambassador of Peru, Dr. Hernan Velarde. Another dinner was given by the Minister of Bolivia, Senor Don Eduardo Dietz de Medina, who entertained in honor of the newly appointed United States Minister to Bolivia, Mr. David E. Kaufman.

A MARRIAGE of great interest to Washington took place on Thursday in London, when Col. George T. Langhorne, U. S. A., and Miss Mary Waller, of Chicago, were married at Hedsor Parish Church, Cliveden. The wedding was held in the church at Cliveden as it was near the home of Lady Astor, who is a cousin of Col. Langhorne. Lady Astor was present at the ceremony, as was Mrs. Powell Clayton, whose home is in Washington, and who is Col. Langhorne's sister. Col. Langhorne is well known here, although he has been away for four years. He has been stationed in the Phillipines for some time, and was for several years with the late Maj. Gen. Wood, Governor General of the Philippines. At one time Col. Langhorne was acting Governor of Moro. He is in the Cavalry, and has made quite a record as a polo player.

Entertainments keep Society Busy

Col. Langhorne is a veteran of the Spanish-American War, and when the World War started he was military attache in Berlin. He afterwards was in command of the American troops on the Texas border.

Mrs. Langhorne was also active in war work, having done canteen service in France in 1918 with the Americans under the Y. M. C. A. For the last few years she has been traveling in the Orient. After the wedding on Thursday, Col. and Mrs. Langhorne were presented to the King and Queen in London.

The great attraction and important social event of this week in Washington will be the coming of the Metropolitan Opera Company, which will give four performances. The Metropolitan artists first came here 20 years ago, when the company made its appearance in the Capital for two years in succession, but did not return until last season, when it was so much appreciated.

The opera is always a treat, especially in Washington, where there are so many music lovers and where it has been, until lately, rather a rare occurrence, so it is being very eagerly anticipated. Then, too, it is coming at a time when a special interest is taken in entertaining, just after the Lenten season, and a number of events are being planned for the social calendar for this occasion.

Among the boxholders, some of whom have subscribed for all the performances, are the Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Ferrara, the Ambassador of Germany and Frau von Prittwitz und Gaffron, Brig. Gen. Augusto Villa, Military Attache of the Italian Embassy; Mrs. James Couzens, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Royall Holcombe, Mrs. Charles Boughton Wood, Mrs. James F. Curtis, Mrs. Clarence C. Williams, Mrs. Thomas W. Phillips, jr., Mrs. Lyman B. Kendall, Mr. and Mrs. William McClellan Ritter, Miss Alice Clapp, Mrs. Ross Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Crounse, Mrs. Edward C. Walker, Mrs. George Mesta and Mr. and Mrs. John Campbell White.

Judging by the number of patronesses, headed by Mrs. Coolidge, boxholders and subscribers for the concert for the benefit of All Hallows Guild, the Garden Guild of Washington Cathedral, at the Mayflower on Tuesday, this will be one of the outstanding events of the week. The concert committee of All Hallows Guild, to whose untiring labors are due the beautiful gardens of the cathedral, is headed by Mrs. John Gibbons. Mme. Yolanda Mero and Mme. Hulda Lashanska, who are to give the recital, have much musical renown.

The committee in charge includes, besides Mrs. Gibbons, Mrs. David A. Reed, wife of Senator Reed; Mrs. Jesse H. Metcalf, wife of Senator Metcalf; Mrs. George Wharton Pepper, wife of former Senator Pepper; Mrs. G. C. F. Bratenahl, wife of the dean of the cathedral; Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. Charles J. Bell, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Frank B. Noyes, Mrs. Francis T. A. Junkin, Mrs. George B. McClellan, Mrs. Daniel W. Knowlton, Mrs. Adolph Casper Miller, Mrs. McCook Knox, Mrs. Harold Marsh and Mrs. Henry Marquand.

There will be many entertainments during the next week in honor of the officers and delegates to the Thirty-seventh Continental Congres. The evening sessions of the congress, in the new auditorium, are always brilliant, as diplomats, officials, and many others of prominence, occupy the boxes.

On Tuesday night Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau and the national board of management will entertain at a reception in the Memorial Continental Hall for the congress, when thousands of women from all parts of the country will pass down the line before the heads of this patriotic organization which was founded in this city 37 years ago, and which contains in its membership many of the leading women of America.

Guests at White House.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge have as their guests at the White House Mrs. Trumbull and Miss Florence Trumbull, wife and daughter of the Governor of Connecticut. They will remain for the D. A. R. Congress, which Mrs. Trumbull will attend.

The Vice President and Mrs. Charles G. Dawes entertained at dinner last evening, when their guests were the Minister of China and Mme. Sze, the Minister of Hungary and Countess Szechenyi, the Minister of Colombia and Mme. Olaya, the Minister of the Irish Free State, Mr. Timothy Smiddy; the Minister of Greece and Mme. Simopoulos, the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, the Minister of Egypt and Mme. Samy Pasha, the Minister of Poland and Mme. Ciechanowska, the Minister of Bulgaria and Mme. Radewa, the Minister of Sweden, Mr. W. Bostrom; the Minister of Roumania, Mr. George Cretziano; the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Andrew W. Mellon; the Attorney General, Mr. John G. Hails and Farewells of Society assisted by the debutantes of the season.

The Fashion Review, to be given the evening of April 23 at the Willard Hotel by the Mary Washington Chapter of the D. A. R., will display costumes old and new, in living portraits, from the days of 1628 to the present time. The proceeds will go for the joint benefit of Wakefield, the birthplace of George Washington, and the Mary Washington Chapter. The National Society has called upon each chapter for contributions to assist in the enlargement of its patriotic activities in promoting the high ideals of Washington in the minds of young America.

In the tableau to be presented, Miss Janet Richards will take the stellar role, explaining the costumes as they appear, and giving interesting comments on the times they portray.

Miss Hester Ann LeFevre is chairman of the girls' committee assisting Mrs. A. S. Gardiner, chairman of the review committee, and Mrs. Frank S. Hight, vice regent of the local chapter, in charge of the program. Those on Miss LeFevre's committee are Miss Janet Phillips, Miss Florence Wetherill, Miss Rebecca Davidson, Mrs. Charles David Hayes, Miss Nancy Hamilton, Miss Charlotte Childress, Miss Adair Childress, Miss Betty Davis, Miss Sara Worthington, Miss Betty Ridsdale, Miss Frances Gore, Miss Violet Whelen, Miss Eleanor Smith, Miss Bina Day Deneen, Miss Mary Bradley, Miss Sallie Hewes Phillips, Miss Adelaide Henry, Miss Jeanette Hume, Miss Alice Abadie, Miss Anna Abadie, Miss Francesca McKenney, Miss Celeste Pope, Miss Sarah Major, Miss Helen Stone, Miss Helen Minnegerode, Miss Margaret Berry, Miss Betty Alexander, Miss Marian Ruess, Miss Helen Gatley, Miss Jane Love, Miss Harriet Whitford, Miss Frances Hill, Miss Elizabeth Dunlap and Miss Frances Breck. Fashions of Capital Women

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THERE is a swishy rustle to the fashions of the hour caused by the return to the first place in the sun of style of the pompadour taffeta of the days when the chief requirement of a modish skirt was that "it could stand alone."

The Easter costumes for day and evening wear featured this revival of a favorite fabric of 50 years ago, but with the admirable difference that while it has all the importance and grace and fascination of the days of yesteryear it lacks the great weight and bulk, so triumphant are the works of the modern artisans who make materials.

Those who peer into the crystal ball of fashion predict the return of the days of lined dress skirts, when even the tinest girl knew whether or not her mother or her friends had on real silk lined skirts, because of the faint swish as they walked.

Some of the high notes of fashion as seen in the Easter parade, particularly for these taffeta effects, were the inclination to fullness below the hips in front, projecting points below the hemline, longer in the back than in the front hemlines and a fish tail drag to many a stylish dress.

Curves Are Coming Back.

But in spite of ripple of pouff and tier, huge bows on the hips and even a suggestion of the old-time bustle, we are solemnly warned to keep the straight silhouette, so those who regret any attempt at the passing of the girlish figure will be satisfied for a time. It is only fair to warn, however, that curves are coming back, and, in fact, in many cases have taken the place of straight lines in the world of fashion, probably because the straight line became entirely too straight to be at all artistic. Let us hope that the curve will not bring back into the sphere of woman the hour-glass figure which, no matter how natural the fair may claim it is, can only be achieved by the tightening of the corset strings at the waistline. This bugaboo, however, is a long way off, for the majority of women have no corset strings to tighten, preferring some of the many scientific corset substitutes on the market.

For the warm days, the stylists still insist that wash fabrics will be worn more than they have been for the last ten years. With the desire for a rustly softness no doubt such materials as organdies and swiss and lawns, with a suspicion of starch in them, will be prime favorites. Voile, worn over taffeta slips, also fill this requirement and when they are of the new flowered materials banded or flounced in taffeta, they are quite modish but certainly far removed from the realm of the wash dress, no matter what the modiste may call them.

The intriguing little bunches of French flowers, which has gayly wended their way from the shoulder to the waistline, "popped" up at Easter as an ankle corsage, fastened to one side of the strap or the left pump or slipper. Of course, some were seen in the daytime by the ultra modish. Many were seen at the Easter dances and balls.

Flower Turban Attractive.

Like veritable springtime flowers, the flower and feather close-fitting hats made a gay note in the array of somber black satin and straw hats worn by most of the women at the churches, at the parties and on the promenades Easter Sunday and the days that followed it. The flower turban or hat is very attractive when it is becoming and fits close to the head and is fashioned in colors toning in perfectly with the rest of the costume.

Of course, the feather turbans are a little newer and in colors, but are apt to be a little more trying than the soft, silky flower ones.

If one wears a straw hat—and many did for the Eastern festivities and still many more will in the weeks to come—they must be in colors to match the costume and are apt to be on the strictly sport variety, without trimming. Of course, one sees black straw hats, but the satin and felt and even brocade are apparently considered much smarter.

While the small hat is certainly holding its own, the hat with some brims, medium brims or the extremely wide ones, are also counted on, and the hat closet is not complete without several of these. Large untrimmed straw hats to wear with real summery frocks and sport costumes are being displayed and are in the wardrobes of many of the women who intend to spend most of the spring and summer in Washington, as well as those who intend to leave early for the seaside or mountain, back to their home State or their country estates.

Transparent brimmed large hats are worn with many of the dressy afternoon costumes, designed for weddings or garden parties or formal teas.

Snake and Lizard Shoes Worn.

Shoes and bags and gloves of the woman of fashion of today have their inspiration very often from the creeping things of the world which women so carefully avoid when they sally forth for a walk.

Crocodile, snake, lizard and kindred skins fashion the daintiest of the spring footwear. Far out of the sun of fashion indeed is the woman who does not flaunt some trimming or article of reptile origin when she goes out in this day.

Some of the most attractive of the sport coats designed for real sport wear have collar and cuffs and buttons of some kind of reptile skin with shoes and bandings on the gloves to match and perhaps a band about the sport hat.

The popularity of skins has brought into the realm of the things that are smart kid skin for trimming of coats and even tailored dresses of gold and silver, and every color of the rainbow. Narrow bands of colored kid often bind the collar and cuffs of the kasha dresses with their matching capes, which have appeared on the horizon as the smartest kind of promenade costumes.

Of course, this type of costume is rather trying except to certain figures, but when it is smartly becoming, it is very much so indeed.

To go back to the subject of hats, many of the small hats seen in the Easter week parades had some kind of a veil designed especially for wear with it. Many of the small satin hats had tiny nose veils, but here and there one saw a full face veil arranged with meticulous precision, which is the despair of any one but a woman with a gift for arranging it.

Some of the filmy veils were worn around the hat and tied under the chin in ribbon effect, but like every other such mode, this style had to be peculiarly suited to the wearer.

Altogether there seems to be more color in spring-time costumes than there has been seen for many seasons, although the black motif still remains a most modish one.

Styles for Children.

In this progressive age or perhaps because women as a rule favor simple and comfortable clothes, the little girl's dresses do not differ so much from those of their mothers. Therefore, it is not surprising that for the feminine juvenile population of this and other cities the Easter costume par excellence was the ensemble.

The ensemble costume has proven so useful and comfortable to women that the little girls like it too. The dress is an entire costume when the matching coat is taken off, and mother or her daughter does not have to worry so much about the color of the frock, or whether it will conform to the color of the coat. The wise mother realizes that one frock with one coat is not enough for the active little girl of today, but it is possible to keep the ensemble note and perhaps a band about the sport frocks, some of them of the wash variety with the outer wrap.

The scarf collar has replaced the fashion, which was secretly considered rather foolish, of wearing fur collar in the balmy days of spring, and the warm days of summer. The scarfs are attached to the coats and frequently lined with contrasting colors or in the case of ensemble, with the material of the dress to be worn with it or exactly matching silk.

Two Shades of Green Pleasing.

Countess Cornelia Szechenyi, daughter of the Hungarian Minister and Countess Szechenyi, wore at an Easter luncheon Sunday a dress of two shades of green crepe silk finely pleated in tiers. With this she wore a small green skull cap.

Miss Janet Newbold looked very attractive at the same luncheon in a figured dress of light green and rose and gray silk made on simple lines. With this she wore a small straw hat and a gardenia on her shoulder and a large silver fox fur.

Mrs. Stanley Rinehart is wearing an ensemble costume of black satin made with a white georgette waist, with full jabots. With this she wears a close fitting black straw hat.

Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh has a smart costume of brown satin crepe, with which she wears a wide brimmed satin hat of brown embroidered in gold. Her coat matches the dress and is trimmed with fur, and she wears a scarf with faintly visible large red roses in it.

Mrs. David Lawrence had on last week a costume of bois de rose georgette with a hat of the same color and a large fox fur.

Mrs. Frederic William Wile is wearing a dress of blue trimmed in red, with a blue straw hat. Her scarf is a large fur.

Mrs. Sidney Tallaferro is wearing an ensemble costume of black and white with the dress of figured material and the cape lined like the dress. With this she wears a red hat.

Mrs. Sanford in Blue.

Mrs. Edward Sanford, wife of Mr. Justice Sanford, had on at a luncheon a gown of silvery blue metal cloth with a small black hat and a fox fur.

Mrs. Ira E. Bennett is wearing a dress of black satin with the shiny side trimmed with the dull side. With this she wears a black satin turban trimmed with bright blue flowers.

Mrs. Claude Langlais looked very attractive one day last week in a violet crepe costume with a small hat with its crown covered with tiny violet flowers.

Mrs. Myron Whitney wore one day last week a costume composed of a beige dress and beige coat and small brown hat.

Mrs. Samuel Beverley Williamson is wearing a black crepe romaine dress with a black satin coat with a scarf collar and a small black satin hat.

Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson wore for a tea a dress of bois de rose crepe satin with a beige hat trimmed with bois de rose ribbon.

Miss Marjorie Eustis had on a tailored suit for a promenade last week. With this she wore a beige hat and a large fox fur.

Miss Wylie in Green.

Miss Margaret Wylie is wearing a green sport dress with a green hat and a beige sport coat with a scarf collar.

Mrs. Thomas A. Clayton has a pale beige gown with which she wears a coat of a darker color trimmed with fur, and a small beige felt hat.

Mrs. Campbell Turner is wearing a costume of black satin with a full skirt and a surplice. With this she wears a small black satin hat with a tiny nose veil.

Mrs. John P. Jackson, wife of Commander Jackson, had on at a luncheon a gown of black satin, with cape effect. Her hat was of black satin with a medium brim and soft crown.

Mrs. Caperton, wife of Rear Admiral Caperton, has a dark-wine-colored sport dress, with which she wears a black coat trimmed with fur, and a black hat.

Black Velvet Worn.

Mrs. George D. Hope is wearing an ensemble costume of black velvet embroidered in silver. With this she wears a close-fitting black hat. She has an evening gown of black and gold brocade with a train lined with red velvet and a large bow on one hip.

Mrs. George T. Marye has a dark blue ensemble suit with a gray fur collar coming down in revere effect in the front and fur cuffs. With this she wears a small blue hat.

Mrs. Frederick Steiwer, wife of the senator from Oregon, has a gown of metal lace, made on plain lines, with a V-shaped neckline and no sleeves.

Mme. Kiep, wife of the Counselor of the German Embassy, had on recently an evening gown of black chiffon, made with a tiered skirt edged with rhinestones and a softly draped surplice bodice lopped in a bow at one side.

Mme. Santiago Bedoya, wife of Dr. Bedoya, Secretary of the Peruvian Embassy, wore one day last week an ensemble costume of beige chiffon with pipings of blue satin. Her hat was a beige felt one bound in blue.

Mrs. Henry Allen Cooper is wearing an evening gown of black velvet outlined in rhinestones, with a large motif of rhinestones on one hip.

Mrs. Robert Owen has an ensemble costume of black satin trimmed with fur. With this she wears a small black hat.

Mrs. Henry Fitzhugh has a dress of blue crepe satin with a small blue straw hat and a large fox fur.

Beige Chiffon Seen.

Miss Pauline Bostrom, daughter of the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, had on at a tea a gown of beige chiffon, made with a finely pleated skirt in tiers and a scarf collar with pleated ends to the loosely fitted bodice. Her hat was a close-fitting black one.

Mrs. James M. Willey, retiring State regent of the District of Columbia D. A. R., is wearing a costume of black chiffon, combined with satin. With this she wears a small close-fitting hat.

Mrs. John M. Beavers, vice president general of the D. A. R. from the District of Columbia, has an ensemble costume of blue chiffon with which she wears a blue coat and small blue hat.

Mrs. Henry B. Joy, candidate for vice president general, from Michigan, of the D. A. R., who already has arrived for the congress which convenes tomorrow morning, had on at a luncheon recently an ensemble costume of black satin with a black chiffon bodice embroidered in silver and a small black satin hat.

The florists must have done a thriving business last week, for almost every day many women on the streets and in the corridors of the hotels were wearing corsage effects of violets, pansies and orchids.

Mrs. William E. Jardine, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, has been the banner bearer in the habit of many Washington official women, including Mrs. Coolidge, of wearing real flowers tucked in the scarfs of their coats or pinned on the shoulders of the gowns instead of artificial ones. This style has been taken up to a certain extent by the younger girls for dances, although many of them take the precaution of having artificial flowers in their party bags to pin on when real flowers wilt in the crowded ballrooms.

The shoulder pins of bright-colored stones and odd shapes matching the long dangling earrings have rather taken the place of necklaces for evening wear. Some women like the pins and bracelets together, while others wear matching earrings and bracelets. Seldom does one see all three, earrings, pins and bracelets, worn at the same time or even earrings, necklaces and bracelets. In the world of ornamentation like in every other department of dress restraint forms the artistic motif.

A WEDDING GIFT—

STEINWAY

"THE INSTRUMENT OF THE IMMORTALS"

Aside from its sentimental value, the real charm of a Wedding Gift lies in its usefulness and permanency.

There are Steinways in service today that were given as Wedding Presents more than 50 years ago. They have been handed down as heirlooms from one generation to another. About them cling memories dearer than those associated with any other object in the household.

The beauty of its rich, sympathetic quality of tone—its resonant, harmonious bass—its sparkling, mellow treble—its instant response to your moods—all combine to make the Steinway MORE than a mere piano; it is like an intimate friend who has shared in your happiness and trials and, never faltering, remains loyal and true under any and all conditions—ever a source from which flows comfort, pleasure and inspiration.

STYLE "M" EBONIZED OR MAHOGANY

New Steinway Pianos, $875 up

Any Steinway Piano may be purchased with a cash deposit of 10%, and the balance will be extended over a period of two years. Used pianos accepted in partial exchange.

Capt. Arthur W. Dunbar, head of the Naval Hospital, and Mrs. Dunbar entertained at dinner last night in compliment to Dr. and Mrs. Carroll Storrs Alden.

Miss Ruth Cockrell, of Dallas, Tex., has returned to Wellesley College, after an Easter visit to her cousins, Capt. and Mrs. Sinclair Gannon, in the commandant's quarters of the Naval Academy.

Mrs. William E. Olivet left early this week for Long Beach, Calif., where she will visit her son-in-law and daughter, Ensign and Mrs. Alvord J. Greenacre. Prof. Olivet will join her on the West Coast after the June week exercises at the Naval Academy, where he is an instructor in the department of modern languages.

New York

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—Engagement announcements were social New York's piece de resistance during the first week of the "little season," which began with Easter week. Society's leaders have vied with each other in entertainment for those concerned. A box at the opera, loaned for an evening by Mrs. Ogden Goelet, was an unusual courtesy extended to Miss Betty Tailer, whose engagement to Walter Gurnee Dyer was announced. Miss Tailer entertained a party of friends in the box, where she held an informal reception between acts.

Bridge parties, always a popular diversion of the little season, have been put to work by Mrs. William B. Leeds (Princess Xenia) and other social leaders. Bridge tournaments, which society attended on board the Berengaria this week, were given in aid of the Central Council of Seamen's Associations to provide clothing, books and entertainment for seamen. Marine refreshments and decorations were features.

Wardrobes for the shore are now as carefully planned by fashionable women as evening costumes. Pajama suits with long pointed trousers of chiffon in bright checks, worn with black chiffon coats, are fashionable for lounging on the beaches. A different bathing suit is required for each day, while other suits for taking sun baths are carefully cut so that the decollette of the lowest evening gown will not reveal an inch of skin untanned.

Peter Rabbit, circus clowns and Jack and the beanstalk amused the small guests at the Easter party with which the Junior League entertained the children of its members last week. Sue Hastings' marionettes gave the pantomimes for the children. Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt was in charge of the party, which concluded with an Easter egg hunt.

Isis, Egyptian goddess of spring, King Tut and Pharaoh's daughter were features of a pageant representing the festival of spring at the Carnival of Imagination this week. Dancing girls, slaves and priests took part. The carnival, held at the Waldorf-Astoria, in an Egyptian temple setting, was given for working girls in need of financial aid.

Colored motion pictures of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" attracted society to the entertainment given by the American Shakespeare Foundation at the Hotel Drake. Shakespearean readings were given by Sothern and Marlowe. Proceeds were for the benefit of the Shakespeare Memorial Theater at Stratford-on-Avon. Mrs. Vincent Astor and Mrs. August Belmont were among the patronesses.

A rainbow ball is society's latest benefit plan for the aid of crippled children. Rainbow lights played over the guests, rainbow balloons, and dancers costumed in colors of the spectrum will be features of the carnival entertainment to be given next week.

The sweeping hoop skirt and petite pancake hat of 1830 made a brief return at a costume dance of that year given by Bonnie Mae Murray at the Butterfly ball in aid of the House of Rest for Consumptives. The old-time polka and schottische were illustrated in Miss Murray's dance.

India and East Indian personalities are taking society's interest this spring. Songs written by Rabindranath Tagore, sung by the poet's niece and accompanied by an ancient Hindu instrument, attracted many social leaders to the Hotel Plaza, where Mrs. Alice Kelley gave an illustrated lecture on India.

Lace coats, the "dernier cri" in evening wraps, will be exhibited in the fashion review at the Magic Carpet Society's charity carnival to be given for the benefit of the Judson Health Center next month. The wraps of beige or black lace have several linings of pastel-shaded chiffon, any one of which may be snapped into the coat to suit the wearer's fancy.

Man Tags 500 Geese With Bible Verses

Kingsville, Ont., April 14 (A.P.).—Two hundred and three wild Canadian geese were liberated today with tags, each bearing a verse of scripture—Jack Miner's method of spreading the gospel.

The geese, including 37 which had been tagged both in 1926 and 1927, were caught and tagged by Miner as part of a regular system by which he has determined that the birds winter in North Carolina and go to Hudson's Bay territory and Baffin Land to breed and spend the summer. Nearly 500 geese have been tagged by Miner this year with his address and the scripture verses.

Rio Grande "Leak" Due to Meter Reading

San Benito, Tex., April 14 (A.P.).—The "leak" in the Rio Grande has been found.

Engineers of the United States Geological Survey attribute to differences in the Mexican and American methods of reading river gauges the "disappearance" of water between Del Rio and Laredo. For many years the reports of gauge reading indicated there was an enormous loss of water.

Mexico tends the gauges on the lower Rio Grande, while the United States controls those along the upper reaches of the stream.

Deaf Juror in Case Hears Not a Word

Special to The Washington Post.

Baton Rouge, La., April 14.—One of the civil cases on trial in the Federal District Court here was almost completed when a juror arose and said: "Your honor, I been a sittin' here all through this case, and I ain't heard a thing yet. Because I'm deaf."

Judge Burns mildly reprimanded the juror for having kept his affliction secret so long. The lawyers in the case agreed to proceed with the deaf one doing his best as lip reader.

THE POST Melody Way CLUB

EIGHTH LESSON

Copyright, 1927, by W. Otto Miessner

So many girls and boys have told me how much they had regretted not having learned to play when they were younger that I want very much to make these lessons interesting. The young folks far away from musical centers especially interest me.

One little girl in California, for example, lives away up in the mountains. Every Saturday she takes the stage at eight in the morning and travels for four hours down 50 miles of dangerous mountain roads, to join a Melody Way Class in a little valley town. At 2 o'clock she takes the stage again and reaches her home at 6. Eight hours on a stage once a week to get a music lesson! What an inspiration she should be to those with opportunity at their very door!

Not long ago, I met a dear old lady past 60, who told me that she had just recently joined a Melody Way Class of older folks. She boasted proudly that she could now play six pieces! She was as pleased with herself as any 6-year-old. Don't you admire her ambition to become a pianist?

No matter what your age now, you were young "once upon a time." How well you remember the stories that began, "Once upon a time!" And even before those days, your mother crooned to you this soothing lullaby, "Sleep, Baby, Sleep."

Then, when you were a little older, barely able to toddle, Santa Claus brought you a drum. What boy (or girl) does not cherish fond memories of that first tenor drum? You can still imagine those days, I'm sure. Your second piece for this week, "The Tenor Drum," is just about the size of that first little drum of yours.

"Sleep, Baby, Sleep"

You will notice four new features in this piece. First, you will miss the familiar three-toned chords at first glance, but they are there if you know how to group them together.

The next thing you will see is the new measure sign, 4/4, which means, four-quarter measure. There are four counts in each measure, with a quarter note to each count.

The third thing to strike your eye is the new Key Signature of two sharps. What keys are sharp, where is Do on the treble staff and on the bass staff and what is the key of the piece?

The fourth thing you must see is that the first and last phrases begin on the first beat, while the middle phrases begin on the fourth beat and end on the third.

There is still another odd side to this piece which you would never discover; therefore, I will show it to you later.

Analysis

You will save time in the end and gain a much clearer understanding of this piece (or any other) if you will first study it carefully and systematically, taking up in order the following elements:

1. Rhythm
2. Melody
3. Harmony
4. Form
5. Mood

1. Analyze the Rhythm

The measure sign tells you that you must give four counts to each measure. You can best feel the rhythm of four-beat measure by tapping and counting, like this:

Tap—	Heel	toe	toe	toe	Heel	toe	toe	toe
Count—	1	2	3	4	1	2	3	4
Words—	Sleep	—	ba	by	Sleep	—	—

This is the rhythm of the first and last phrases. The following is the rhythm of the three middle phrases which begin on the fourth beat, like this:

Tap—		toe	Heel	toe	toe	toe	Heel	toe	toe
Count—		4	1	2	3	4	1	2	3
Words—	(2)	Thy	fath-	er	guards	the	sheep	—	—
	(3)	Thy	moth-	er	shakes	the	dream-	land	tree
	(4)	That	hap-	py	dreams	may	fall	on	thee

Observe that these rhythmic motifs cross the measure bar like this:

(The true measure, then, begins on 4 and ends on 3:

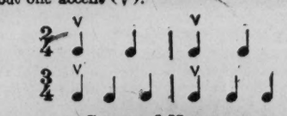

4 1 2 3 — 4 1 2 3

The reason for these broken measures, so called, lies in the poetry. In this line above, the strong or primary accent falls upon the syllable moth- (in mother) and upon the word dream. There is a weaker, secondary accent on the words shakes and tree. In fact, this song might have been written in two-quarter measure. In that case all of the accents would have been strong.

Speak and drum these two types of phrase-rhythms until you can feel the flow of each phrase as a whole. Then find each phrase rhythm in the music, framing the notes, first with the fingers, then making a mental picture.

Simple Measure

There are but two kinds of simple measure—two-beat and three-beat. From these, all kinds of compound measures may be combined. Simple measures have but one accent (V).

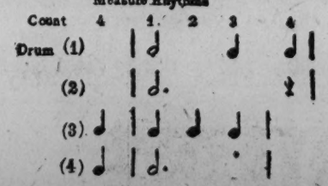

Compound Measure

There are many kinds of compound measure. "Sleep, Baby," is in four-beat measure, made by combining two two-beat measures. This makes it sing more smoothly, since there is only one strong accent to each group of four beats. Marches, on the other hand, have more vigor, more snap, for being written in two-beat measure with a strong accent on each first count or left.

You now have several new measure-rhythms to add to your list.

Measure Rhythms

Copy these on small cards as before and practice drumming them in all sorts of combinations of the notes.

2. Analyze the Melody

(a) Observe that the Melody, like the rhythm, of the first and last phrases, is the same:

1	2	3	4		1	2	3	4
Mi	—	Re	Re		Do	—	—	—

(b) Observe that the Melody of the second phrase follows the direction of the first phrase (except the first tone):

4	1	2	3	4		1	2	3
Mi	So	So	Fa	Fa		Mi	—	—

(c) Observe that the Melody and rhythm of the third and fourth phrases is the same.

4	1	2	3	4		1	2	3
Do	Fa	Fa	Re	Re		So	So	Mi

Place your Key Finder with the middle Do on the D next to the right of Middle C. Then play the Melody on the keyboard and at the piano, one phrase at a time.

1. Follow the above diagram guided by the Key Finder.
2. Name the letter-name of each Melody note.
3. Play as you follow the notes.
4. Memorize the Melody.

Repetition

When two phrases are alike, the second phrase is called a repetition. Motifs and figures may also be repeated. Indeed, this is a device much used by composers because it saves ideas, balances the parts and makes the music easy to remember.

Examples of Repetition

Phrases—
"Little Wooden Shoes" (Third and Fourth)
"My Pony" (Third and Fourth)
"Magic Music" (First and Third)

Motifs—
"Lady Moon" (Second phrase)
"My Pony" (First and Last)
"Wooden Shoes" (Third and Fourth)

Figures—
"Magic Music" (So MD
"To a River" (So Mi)
"Lady Moon" (Mi Re Do)
"Happiness" (So Mi Do)

Sequence

You noticed that in "Sleep, Baby, Sleep," the first and second phrases sounded somewhat alike, the second being higher up on the scale. This kind of imitation is called a sequence. We often use this word in other connections, such as Rain, Snow, Hail.

Sequence is another device by which a composer makes the design interesting. You might compare this with the patterns in wall paper, in rugs, in dress goods or in laces. You can find it, too, in Nature, in the branches, leaves, blossoms and petals of flowers and plants. Therefore, it is often said that artists can, after all, only copy Nature's designs.

Examples of Sequence

Phrases—
"Sleep, Baby, Sleep" (First and Second)
"Evening Song" (First and Second)

Motifs—
"Evening Song"
Do Do Mi Mi (First phrase)
Re Re Fa Fa (Third phrase)
Mi Mi So So (Second phrase)
"Magic Music"
So Mi So (First phrase)
Fa Re Fa (Second phrase)
Mi Do Mi (Second phrase)

Figures—
"Evening Song"
Fa Mi Re (Fourth phrase)
Mi Re Do (Fourth phrase)
"Magic Music"
Fa Re
Mi Do

I feel sure that this little "detour" or side-trip will have given you an interesting glimpse of the composer's workshop and the tools or devices he uses to weave his musical patterns into the forms and shapes of his Melodies. It will develop your taste to know these signs of good workmanship. Also, it will help you to read more quickly and to memorize more surely. Finally, you will play with greater freedom and pleasure because you are truly interpreting the composer's thoughts and designs. Now, play the Melody once more and see if I am not right!

3. Analyze the Harmony

Can you see and hear these harmonies or chords in the first phrase?

Count—	1	2	3	4	1	2	3	4
R. H.—	Mi	—	Re	Re	Do	—	—
L. H.—	Do	So	Ti	So	Mi	So	Do	x
Chords—	I	—	V	—	I	—	—

Harmonies made of separated tones are called broken chords.

When the tones in the L. H. do not seem to make a complete chord, you will usually find the missing tone in the R. H. Melody. Let's take the broken chords of the remaining phrases:

Count—		1	2	3	4	1	2	3	4
L. H.—	(2)	Mi	So	Re	So	Do	So	Do	x
	(3)	Re	So	Ti	So	Mi	So	Do	So
	(4)	Re	So	Ti	So	Mi	So	Do	So
	(5)	Do	So	Ti	So	Mi	So	Do	x

Do-So, Mi-So and Do-Mi belong to the I Chord. Re-So and Ti-So belong to the V Chord. Therefore, you should now know how to accompany these Melodic figures or intervals with the right chords.

4. Analyze the Form

An easy way to make an outline of the Form of a piece is to give each phrase a letter. When a phrase is repeated, use the same letter. This then is a diagram of the form or mould in which "Sleep, Baby, Sleep," is shaped.

Now you discover that this tune has five phrases. It resembles a four-room house with a sort of back porch tacked on. This odd form was made by adding or tacking on the last phrase, a repetition of the first. It is a period form of four phrases, plus one.

5. Analyze the Mood

The words and the tune itself should make you feel the mood. You can even feel it by merely humming the tune. Imagine you are singing a little child to sleep! Even a great artist, like Fritz Kreisler, would try to imagine this if he were playing a "Lullaby" on his violin! Therefore, when you play, try to imagine!

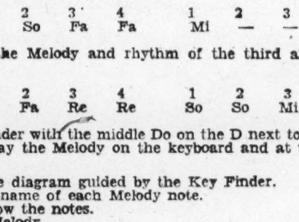

"The Tenor Drum"

"The Tenor Drum" is also in four-beat measure. Study the two rhythmic phrases:

Count—	1	2	3	4	1	2	3	4
(1)	Rat	x	tat	x	Rata	tata	tat	x
(2)	Goes the	tenor	drum-	mer	Just	like	that	x

Practice on these measure rhythms. Drum them separately, copy them on cards, locate them in the printed piece:

Measure Rhythms

Now you shall have no further help from me on this piece, because you know, already, every little separate part in it. This should put you on your mettle! Try it and see if you can play it without help!

You know, when we take journeys, it is all very well to have a guide, part of the time. But the traveler with a little spirit of adventure in him will want to make some little excursions "on his own." So, here is your chance to "try your wings"—I was about to say—which might better be said, "try your fingers."

That your little adventure with "The Tenor Drum" may prove interesting, if not exciting, is my wish today for the members of the Melody Way Club.

Ten Test Questions

Answers Next Week

1. Name the key of "Sleep, Baby, Sleep."
2. Name the key of "My Pony."
3. Name the key of "Magic Music."
4. What keys are sharp in "The Tenor Drum?"
5. Name the chords in last measure of "The Tenor Drum."
6. Give an example of Motif Repetition for Mi Re Do So.
7. Give an example of Figure Repetition for Mi Re Do.
8. Give an example of Figure Sequence for Fa Mi Re.
9. What is meant by "staccato?"
10. What is meant by "legato?"

Answers to Last Week's Questions

1. The sign that tells the key.
2. The sign that describes the measure.
3. F sharp and C sharp.
4. F sharp, C sharp and G sharp.
5. B flat.
6. F sharp, C sharp, G sharp, D sharp.
7. None!
8. Third.

LANDSCAPE CLUB SHOW THIS WEEK

By ADA RAINEY.

THE exhibition of the Landscape Club at the Arts Club holds the center of interest the present week. The exhibition is well worth while, not only by reason of the present group, but by reason of the Landscape Club itself, its ideals and its accomplishments.

The club is now composed of 39 members, who have been added from time to time from the artists in the city who are active in painting the out of doors. For this is the delightful way of painting that the members of the club employ. Nearly all of the men paint in the open. There are few studio paintings. This is as it should be. To paint landscapes in the open is to gather something of the wideness and the freshness of the great spaces of nature. The club was started among a group of men who took their Sundays and holidays to paint out of doors. Few were professional painters at that time, but the group, growing, has added to its membership professional painters and one sculptor, H. K. Bush-Brown. There are now many well-known painters in the group, and most of the leading artists in the city. The Landscape Club is composed exclusively of men. The artists have been added mostly by encountering kindred spirits who have been painting outdoors and have been attracted to the work the club was doing. For it is now an important element in the art life of Washington.

It can be said without fear of treading on anybody's toes that the Landscape Club is the most vital art group in town because it has more exhibitions during the year than any of the older and more formal organizations. They have recently had a traveling exhibition in the South and West, which has been very well received. The group has from three to four or more shows during the year in various places throughout the city and thus gets in contact with different groups who otherwise might not see paintings and become interested in art. The club has exhibited in the Mount Pleasant Library, in the Ambassador Theater and in a book store on Seventeenth street, where art exhibitions have been previously unknown. In other words, the men that compose this group are live wires and are making vital contacts with the city. Their special points of emphasis, the beauty of the river, the meadows, Rock Creek Park and nearby Virginia and Maryland, are the equal of any found anywhere. This has been the conclusion of the painters who have returned from painting in Europe. They are well content to paint the Capital City and its rolling environs. The members are also members of many of the other clubs and exhibit in the well-established exhibitions here and elsewhere. Yet one has the feeling that they are happiest when showing in their own Landscape Club, for here their work is an organized unit which has an individuality that shines when it has its own setting

This is true in the present exhibition at the Arts Club, where the paintings look particularly well hung. The paintings that show their qualities especially well are some of the snow scenes by Rolle, the autumn scenes by Benson B. Moore and "The Hillside," by Clark. The last is about the best painting Roy Clark has accomplished. He apparently has been groping for a freedom of expression that is coming out more and more effectively. In the "Hillside" there is a delightful employment of pattern which has been used successfully.

Schram has been very successful with his shadows in "Hillside Shadows," which is not an easy task, while his "Old Beach" is also effective. "Ocean and Rocks" and "Incoming Tide," by Perkins are strong studies of the sea, while "The Boat" is outstanding. It is well constructed, vital and has fine tones and a breaking up of light on the hull that is excellent. "The Dunes," by Brown, is an effective study of bright light on the white sand that is interesting. "Ice Fringed Shore" is dark for a painting by Mr. Moore, but his autumn scenes are vivacious with broken lights and good pattern.

There is a certain stiffness in "Woods Near Black Pond," by Jex, but his painting in the lower room is much more flexible.

There is nice color in "Half Frozen Stream," by Rolle, while his "Sunshine and Shadow" is one of the most satisfactory canvases in the little show. "Early Spring" and "Moonlight in the Cove Anisquam," by Jameson, show the tender and subtly modulated moods of nature effectively painted. "Misty Day" and the "White House," by Niepold, both are interesting.

Charles Dunn is the most modern in this conservative group and his two water colors, "Quimper, Brittany" and "Breton Landscape," stand out strongly by reason of his work. Both are strong and effective, with a certain individuality of touch that is precious. Mr. Dunn is growing perceptably in his art. In fact, most of the painters show increasing skill in their work with each year which makes the task of following the work of these men a pleasant one.

"The Portrait," by Barrows, is rather stiff and uncompromising.

In the lower room there are a number of water colors which show to advantage. Dr. Holmes, director of the National Art Gallery, is represented by two, "Nasturtiums" and "Maryland," the latter a fine fluid water color of the best traditions. Dr. Holmes is a master of his medium. "May Morning," by Watts, is rather too yellow-green, but otherwise springlike, while "Alpine Landscape," by Weisz, is interesting. His portrait of "Sonia" is an entirely different style from his previous work. It is rather smoothly painted and it seems as if Mr. Weisz is in danger of becoming rather academic, although in some ways this is one of the best portraits that he has painted, but something of his past vigor has departed.

Of the others there are landscapes by Dergans, Mitchel, Pain, Jex, Jameson and Clark, all of which stand up well in the present environment. The exhibition will be on view until Friday.

Miss Malone Exhibits.

At Wardman Park Hotel, Blondelle Malone has an exhibition of her paintings of French gardens. This is to celebrate her golden jubilee, not 50 years of paintings, but of life. Miss Malone is unique in thus stressing her years, which most women, be they artists or otherwise, seek to conceal and not celebrate. Be this as it may, Miss Malone is an excellent painter, who has made a specialty of painting gardens and has been tremendously successful in her favorite subject. She has painted throughout Europe, in Japan and in her own Southern States of South Carolina and Georgia.

Miss Malone was a pupil of Twachtman and has exhibited in the Society of International Water Colorists in Paris, in the Lyceum Club there, and elsewhere, including New York and Washington. She has had high praise by critics for her paintings wherever she has exhibited. Miss Malone is an undoubted artist. She has a keen decorative sense which she makes the most of, and her garden views are always effective.

She has the enthusiast's ardor for her work and paints in the scorching sun as well as in the cold. For it is sometimes cold when the flowers are in bloom and she has painted the cherry trees in Potomac Park when there was a cold northwest wind when every one who could ran to shelter, yet this artist stayed out in the freezing weather to obtain the effect before the blossoms were entirely swept away by the wind. In the foyer of the Wardman Park Theater hang 20 canvases of French gardens which have in them the beauty of the formal garden of the Luxemburg and the freedom of the roses and the tulips of La Batatelle, in the Bois de Boulonge and the great charm of La Hale. They are well worth a trip to see. There is color, charm and brilliancy in these paintings which would lend a permanent delight of color to the walls of some otherwise dark interior. The paintings will be on view until the 28th.

Post Responsible for Show.

This department has recently been greatly cheered by a letter from an artist who said that though the articles on art in The Sunday Post the recent exhibition of Washington artists at the Hecht store, had come into being. This is indeed good news. There are few things more heartening to a writer than to feel that what has been written has gone abroad and has fallen on fertile soil. It came about in this wise. An artist in the Department of Agriculture sent one of the articles in which it was suggested that it would be an excellent thing if some of our department stores would have an exhibition of paintings, to the Hecht store, where it was acted upon quickly and the recent exhibition was the outcome. It is expected that this exhibition will be but the first of many which will increase in importance and numbers. Art being entrees into commerce, there is no knowing where it will stop. We devoutly bid it "God speed."

* * * *

Recognition Is Growing.

There is no denying the fact that art is becoming more recognized here in the city. Not only have the department stores sounded the note, but the hotels are following suit. Take the exhibition of Miss Malone at Wardman Park, for instance. This is the first time, if we mistake not, that there has been an exhibition of paintings there, although an exhibition of tapestries was held not very long ago. The Muse has wedged her way into the Club St. Marks, too—although by the back door she gained entrance, yet she was in full flair at the recent show of the Independent Artists of Washington, which was much discussed.

* * * *

Independent Show.

Speaking of the Independent Artists' recent show at the Club St. Marks, now that it has passed into the realm of the departed, it yet sheds an influence that will continue to increase. The show was a great success from the artistic point of view and because it aroused much interest in painting. Financially it will strike about even with the commissions from the sales added to the entrance fees.

This show was undertaken by three artists who had at heart the greater awakening of interest in art here in the city and gave of their time and talents, without remuneration, to bring about a more vital understanding of art, especially modern art, that much maligned term. They were Mrs. George Weaver, Miss Josephine Page and Peppino Mangravite. The results were entirely satisfactory to the instigators and to a large number of the public as well.

There were a large number of people who saw the exhibition, many who came to study several times and some, of course, who came to scoff. This scoffing is but what was expected. Anything so new as the advanced phases of modern art is not understood by the public, which naturally laughs at what it can not understand. This is human nature. But the interesting thing is that, although there were numbers of artists who criticized the paintings unfavorably, most of them were tremendously interested and stimulated. The result is that there is a movement among the artists to incorporate the independent artists of Washington into a society of the nature of the Independent Society of Artists of New York and Chicago. This is but the initial impulse which will in time doubtlessly blossom into something really significant. From such beginnings do important developments arise.

A number of sales were made and a new impulse was given to art in the city. Most important of all is the fact that an impression was made on the minds of many. This is a psychological impression which will bear fruit in the future. Perhaps the art of the future will in no way resemble that of the present phases of "modern" art. But a step has been taken into the realm of new ideas and progress which will be worked out later. Many of those who went to the exhibition frankly asked what it was about and were told in simple language the aims and ideas of the new men and women who sense another view in art and are interested to "get this across" to the public.

Lucille Douglass Show

An exhibition of pastels and etchings made by Lucille Douglass, noted American artist, journalist and traveler, during a two-year sketching trip through China and Indo-China will be shown at the Yorke Galleries, 2000 S street, from tomorrow to April 28. The exhibition will be under the patronage of the French Ambassador.

A feature of the exhibition will be a group of drawings and etchings of the recently discovered ruined city of Angkor in Cambodia, which Miss Douglass visited in her travels. She has been commissioned by the French colonial government to make a series of etchings.

Miss Douglass is also the illustrator of a book, "New Journeys in Old Asia," by Helen Churchill Candee, just published by Frederick A. Stokes & Co.

The artist will give an illustrated lecture on her visit to Angkor at the Wardman Park Theater on April 25 at 4 o'clock. M. Claudel will be present and the affair will be open to the public.

Fascinating tales—of travel in little-known lands, adventures with strange people, and research among the remnants of a lost civilization—are told by Lucille Douglass.

"Far-off places," says Miss Douglass, "have always held fascination for me—when I was 9 years old an uncle gave me a worn set of Hezekiah Butterworth's travel books, long since out of print. I pored over them and made a silent, solemn vow that I would visit every spot mentioned in them. With the exception of Bagdad and a town in Russia, I have been to every one, but I like China best of all. The Chinese seem to get the maximum of contentment out of life, and the whole atmosphere of China, in spite of its unsettled political and social situation, is one of serenity and ease."

Interested in portraying the true spirit of China, rather than the Occidentalized side which is usually turned to the tourist, Miss Douglass journeyed far into the interior to out-of-the-way districts, where communication was difficult and travel often hazardous. On one occasion, during the worst period of the revolution in the Yang-Tze Valley, she overrode the anxious protests of the American consul and journeyed by chair, alone except for two coolie attendants, far into the mountains, to sketch a lovely temple she had heard of. At the last bend in the tortuous path the temple came into view—literally swarming with rebel soldiers. Knowing that to turn and run would mean death, she ordered the coolies to go ahead, alighted from the chair, calm to outward appearances at least, set up her easel and calmly began to paint. A small group gathered and soon the entire company crowded around watching her work. When the sketch was finished she gathered up her belongings, received the officers' salute, and was allowed to go away unmolested. She confesses to a distinct feeling of relief when the bend in the path was reached and the temple disappeared from view.

"The greatest thrill which I have received in all my travels," Miss Douglass said, "was one, not of danger, but of beauty. In 1925 I accompanied Helen Churchill Candee, the writer, through Cambodia, in French Indo-China, in order to make illustrations for Mrs. Candee's book, "New Journeys in Old Asia." Our main objective was Angkor, the newly discovered ruined city in the jungles. We had heard many stories of its magnificence and had taken part in many discussions as to the fate of its million inhabitants, wiped out suddenly, no one knows how, a thousand years ago. But we were totally unprepared for the absolute shock of sheer beauty which left us gasping as we parted the undergrowth at the edge of a lake and saw for the first time that exquisite city, glowing like fire in the sunrise.

Hutty Exhibition.

A fleeting visit to Charleston, S. C., revealed the fact that Alfred Hutty, who has had an exhibition of his etchings at the Dunthorne Gallery and at the Smithsonian Building, and is beloved of Washingtonians by reason of his great interest and skill in rendering trees, is having a one-man show at the Fort Sumter Hotel, in Charleston. Here are to be found etchings, lithographs and paintings by Mr. Hutty which will be on view through the month. His etchings are too well known here to comment on, but his paintings are something not known here even to many of his friends.

There are paintings in oil and water color, the latter even stronger and more vital than the former. Mr. Hutty's color is good in his water colors; it is brilliant at times, adequate always. Especially fine are "An Hour of Repose—Brittany," "In the Village of Noirmoutier" and "Hill Top Farms" among his water colors, while in the oils are "Wisteria Time in Magnolia Gardens," "In Bedon's Alley, Charleston," "Our Hill in Autumn," "Indian Summer" and "Day's End" are effective. Mr. Hutty here shows himself an accomplished painter as well as a famous etcher.

Living in Charleston in the winter and in Woodstock in the summer, Mr. Hutty has an enviable contrast from which to work with in his paintings and etchings. Of this he takes full advantage and his etchings of many of the picturesque corners of old Charleston are delightful. Especially is this true of "Smyth Gate," which he has etched to such advantage and behind which the artist and his wife have the most delightful of studios surrounded by one of the most picturesque and romantic gardens imaginable. Here they make their abode during the winter months. Both are enthusiastic over Charleston and its possibilities of becoming the "art center" of the country and its charms for artists to paint or etch. Of the latter there is no doubt.

unique collection of American art, consisting of more than 200 drawings, water colors and etchings by as many well-known American artists, has arrived in Washington, where it will be exhibited at the Yorke Gallery, 2000 S street northwest, for one week beginning tomorrow. On its return to New York the collection in its entirety will be sold at silent auction for the benefit of the children of New York's East Side. The written bids, which art connoisseurs have expressed themselves as expecting to run into five figures, will be opened at the sale at the Magic Carpet Carnival, to be given by the Judson Health Center in Madison Square Garden on the night of May 2.

Mrs. Gilbert Eubens, known professionally as Pearl Doles Bell, the novelist and scenario writer, has acted as a committee of one in supervising the project. With the help of the Milch Galleries in New York she appealed to famouse artists throughout America to contribute examples of their work to the portfolio, which is to be known as "the pen and brush collection." Almost without exception, the artists responded by sending excellent representatives of their art.

The collection is said to comprise a complete survey of American art of this day. In order that all the outstanding artists of our time might be represented, a number of monetary contributions have been made for the purchase of works by John S. Sargent, James A. McN. Whistler, Abbott Thayer, Willard Metcalf and J. Francis Murphy.

LEGISLATORS LIVES FILLS SCHOOL NEED

SPEAKERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES. By W. H. Smith. (Simon J. Gaeng, Baltimore.)

A book that should be in every public library and in every private library where there is a desire to keep abreast with the history of the country. The author is a well known newspaper writer, and has been a frequent contributor to The Post. He has had long and intimate acquaintance with the leaders in political thought, and is a close observer of passing events. It is not an extended biography of any of the great men who have been called to the third highest office under our Government but is an intelligent glance at the salient points in their public service.

The style is easy, showing a graceful use of the English language, making the reading pleasant as well as instructive. The House has had some very great men among its Speakers, such as Muhlenberg, Trumbull, Macon, Hunter, Clay, Crisp, Colfax, Barbour, Blaine, Winthrop, Clark and Randall, any one of whom would have made an admirable head of the Nation, and it is well that their memory should be kept before the young as an inspiration. As a people we have paid too little attention to recording what our public servants have done from time to time to build us up as a Nation, to direct our governmental policy and aid in making prosperity permanent. The volume now under consideration is a move in the right direction, and its author deserves commendation for his careful and painstaking effort to make good the lapse of former historians.

His two introductory chapters will be of special interest to the general reader. In one he tells of the origin of our House of Representatives, and draws a comparison between it and its model—the British House of Commons. In the other he gives an interesting account of the ceremonious method of selecting a Speaker for the House of Commons and his induction in office. This will be new to many readers, as our American books have not given much of the details of British parliamentary customs.

Many of the public schools of the cuntry have small libraries, and they should be largely made up of works on American history and American biography. This book of Mr. Smith will be a welcome addition to all such libraries. In his "foreword" Mr. Smith relates an interesting story told by the late Champ Clark as to the lack of information about our great men demonstrated in an examination Mr. Clark made of applicants for an appointment to West Point. It is very possible that our public schools give too little attention to such matters, and the pupils leave the schools largely ignorant of the men who have made us a great Nation. Such volumes as that of Mr. Smith will go far toward a correction of this evil.

Terse Reviews

ALGER. By Herbert R. Mayes. (Macy-Masius, New York.)

Horatio Alger, jr., was the delight of America's boyhood and it is a matter of congratulation that Mr. Mayes has at last given us some intimate glimpses of the man himself.

The author of the biography very cleverly sets forth that only in the matter of his books for boys was Alger anything of a success. In practically everything else he failed, yet there is a multitude of American boys who bless his name for carefree hours in the land of imagination and their first introduction to the romance of achievement and the adventure to be found in the great wide world.

Mr. Alger was a consistent friend of newsboys who appear to have had a special claim upon his affections. Many men who appreciated the Alger books in boyhood would find much to interest them in this book.

THE SIMPLE STORY OF MUSIC. By Charles D. Isaacson. (Macy-Masius, New York).

The great story of music is told vividly in this book and in such a manner that a child of fourteen can grasp its definitions without much effort.

Dr. Isaacson begins with the history of music from earliest times and brings it by easy stages up to the present day.

The author at one time conducted people's concerts with great success and therein taught many persons that music is simple to understand and beautiful to comprehend. Recently Dr. Isaacson has become the manager of a radio station where he has become the musical benefactor of crowds of listeners. Many useful facts are given in connection with the musical history of nations.

ALICE IN THE DELIGHTED STATES. By Edward Hope. (Lincoln MacVeagh. The Dial Press.)

Lewis Carroll has found a worthy successor in Edward Hope, who has penned this delightful book of nonsense in much the same vein, only he has placed his story in the present instead of the Victorian era.

These Delighted States of which Mr. Hope writes appeared first in the columns of the New York Herald Tribune, where they obtained such a large following that, upon request, they were put into book form.

The value of the book is enhanced by the illustrations by Rea Irvin, which carry out the general spirit of the volume in a most admirable manner.

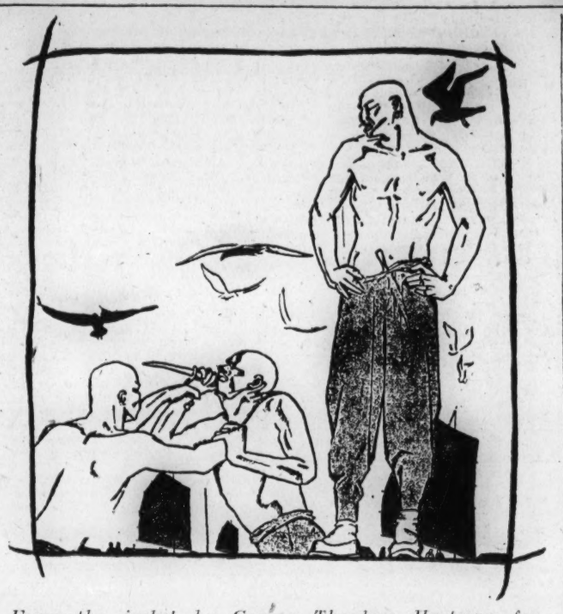

THE FAMILY IN THE MAKING. By Mary Burt Messer. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

In these days when the family is the most threatened it is timely to read such a book as this which is bound to have a stabilizing effect on all privileged to examine its pages.

Rightly the author has classed the family as of equal importance with the state and he states that the reason for its previous neglect in the historical sense is because of the obscurity of its dominant figure—woman.

The advance of woman is hailed as something more than a demand for equality with men, instead it is shown as a recognition of certain spiritual values inherent in womankind which are her unique gifts to human progress.

Among the topics discussed are those of the social evil, cruelty, desertion, drunkenness, insanity and incompatibility as affected by the changing social attitudes of this age and generation.

RUSSIAN EMIGRES' STORY IS REVEALED IN LETTERS OF FORMER CAPITAL GIRL

The dramatic story of the Russian emigres, those high-born souls who found themselves caught up in the vortex of revolution and torn from all their beloved surroundings and plunged into the darkness of exile is graphically told in "The Transplanting," a narrative from the letters of Marie Balascheff, edited by Martha Genung Stearns (the MacMillan Co., New York), daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Stearns, of Boston.

In this volume the poignant tragedy which stalks the footsteps of the emigre and the heroism and bravery of enduring daily trials are depicted with a sure and sympathetic brush. Unconsciously, Mme. Balascheff, daughter of Prince Cantacuzene, who spent part of her girlhood in Washington while her father was Russian Minister to the United States, has revealed the bravery and fine caliber of her own nature and the power to endure which comes from an abiding sense of noblesse oblige. There is no whine or complaint in a single word contained in any of the letters which Mrs. Stearns has so admirably and painstakingly translated, giving added charm to the original text through her understanding of the spirit of the woman who wrote these wonderful letters.

In vivid contrast to the post-revolution days, Mme. Balascheff has told of her girlhood days in Washington, her childhood in Russia and visits to the homes of English royalty and her meetings with Queen Victoria.

Knew Queen Victoria.

In the days when Salisbury and Gladstone were powerful political figures in London and Mme. Balascheff's father was counselor of the Russian Embassy in the British capital, little Marie frequently passed Sundays with the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh and their five children at Clarence House, London. Speaking of the Duchess of Edinburgh, the writer said: "I do not think the Duchess Maria Alexandrovna could have been very happy or particularly popular in England; she was so very Russian at heart. She saw a good deal of the members of the Russian Embassy, and was very kind to my father and me. It was here that Queen Victoria paid several visits to the family when I happened to be present, continued Mme. Balascheff. "I was never allowed to feel the difference of position between the young princesses and myself. Strange to say, I did not realize it all at that time as far as the children were concerned, but the visits of the queen did impress me, and stand out clearly in my memory."

The truly royal can impress even a little child and it is fascinating to read of how the great Victoria of England, who stamped her personality upon an entire age, could make even the young people about her feel her queenly state. "What was my impression of Queen Victoria?" wrote Mme. Balascheff. "Some women are born to reign. The Empress Elizabeth, for instance, whose slim grace and beauty left me a life-long impression. But the old queen was neither slim nor tall nor beautiful. She wore plain widow's weeds, and spoke of very commonplace, every-day details before me, as any thrifty severe old lady of her time might have done. Yet, there was an air of authority about her which I find it difficult to put into words. She was—the queen! She questioned her grandchildren minutely upon their studies and pastimes, and appeared to take the greatest interest in everything that concerned them."

Present From Queen.

Queen Victoria was very kind to children, however, for we learn further on in the book from Mme. Balascheff of a gift she made to her cherished for years. The memory of this present is still vivid with the author, for she writes: "I can not tell whether it was during her first visit or a later one that Queen Victoria sent for me and gave me a present. I received it with due respect but insufficient appreciation at the time. It was a light gray woolen shawl with the dark gray and crimson stripe of the Balmoral tartan; no other had a right to this tartan. In later years an English lady-in-waiting who had accompanied her princess to our court caught sight of it in my studio, and asked me with some asperity how I had come by it. My children's English nurses handled it reverently. Finally, in 1918, a drunken soldier of the red guard, who was rumaging among my things 'requisitioned it,' and his wife or child may now be wearing the tartan of Balmoral."

Other glimpses of monarchy seen by young Marie included meeting the Czar of Russia, Emperor Alexander III. Out of the past she presents a picture of this sovereign as she remembered him from a meeting long ago when Russia was not in the throes of revolution.

"He stood in our midst towering above us—the symbol of Russia in her might—looking down at us with direct, smiling eyes," she says. It thrills me after all these years to catch the faintest likeness to him in his descendants. Eyes like his, so clear and true and honest, I shall never see again. He was so big and so simple. One hand played with the aiguillettes of his plain uniform, as was his custom, the other rested lightly on my youngest cousin's head. The moment he was alone with us, he had drawn us out and was taking an interest in all our private concerns. One felt that he was not only one to be implicitly obeyed and gladly died for at need, but also an entirely reliable friend, one to be trusted as few grown-ups could be—because he understood so well. We felt quite at home with him."

Attended Art Class.

It is interesting to learn that while in Washington Marie Cantacauzene daughter of the then Russian Ambassador attended the Corcoran Art School and Mrs. Minnigerode Andrews writes of this period as follows:

"At the Corcoran School of Art there were a few fashionable girls with whom art was a fad and never lasted. One wonderful princess we had, Mary Cantacuzene, daughter of the then Russian Ambassador. Her governess always attended her, and sat quietly knitting in a corner of the life class while Mary studied Perryman's construction or Nellie Reyburn's contour. This noble Russian girl was a genuine inspiration to us, and one of the persons from whom I learned democracy. It does take the conceit out of you to find that you are being outdone on every hand by those you fancied to be your inferiors. Mary was our superior. Not in rank for that does not count; but in education, in courtesy, in character. And this she must have realized. But not a student in that school ever had cause to regret the association, not one but recognized the pace she set. And when she was present, we all were princesses, for she treated us as such.

"When the princess won the gold medal, she declined to acept it, saying that it was due an American girl and should not be taken out of the country. It therefore passed to the next student, and she was content with the bronze one."

Splendid Time Here.

Mme. Balascheff in her letters takes occasion to mention the influence of May Minnigerode, now Mrs. Minnigerode Andrews, on these Corcoran Art students. She speaks in glowing terms of her American years as follows:

"Then my father was named Russian Minister to the United States, and we left Europe for over two years. I was not 'out' yet and was far too much engrossed by my work at the Corcoran School of Art to see much of society or to take any part in its gayeties. Nevertheless, I had a splendid time. There was scope and space and beauty, and as much bracing pure air as the heart could wish. After Europe, it made me feel just as you do when you get a whif of the sea."

The story moves with the swift recital of human history after that.

In her exile Mme. Balascheff thinks of the freedom and old days in the United States and speaks of that country as an ideal place for the emigres.

Mme. Balascheff hotly defends the loyalty of the Russian sovereigns to the allied cause. She evidently cherishes no illusions as to a return of the monarchy to her homeland, however, for she has written: "There are a few optimists who still believe that the past is not past. I do not share their illusions. Instead, I believe that there is a future, though I may never live to see it. If they have sinned, the Russian people have also suffered, and with the aid of God they will work out their salvation."

So from her poultry farm in France, where she is striving to carve out the destiny of her sons and her family in a manner befitting the generations of gentlefolk behind her this noble emigre teaches Americans how little of the material is really needed where high thinking and high living abound.

The thanks of the reading public are due Mrs. Stearns for having preserved these beautiful letters for posterity.

BARDS SOUND SPRING NOTE FOR EDITORS

The certain harbinger of spring in editorial offices is the poetry influx on all sides. From publishers, from would-be contributors, from young and old the flood of rhymed words begins as surely as spring itself, on or about March 21.

This year has been no exception to the general rule and vistas of spring days are given in the bright-hued covers which adorn slender volumes of verse, near verse and hardly verse at all which find their way to the reviewer's desk.

Well, what would we do without our spring poets? Suppose, like laurel, their work is only green for a season, at least it has had its day in the sun and that is more than all human beings can claim for themselves. So, in this mellow mood let's at the spring poets!

"The House of Happiness," by B. Y. Williams (George Sully & Co., New York), reads the title of the first one picked up. B. Y. Williams, ah, yes, a magazine poet of some renown in England as well as in the United States of America. Where can we find "The House of Happiness," Mr. Williams, in these hurly burly days? His answer comes, strong and clear:

Take what God gives, O heart of mine
And build your House of Happiness.
Perchance some have been given more,
But many have been given less.
The treasure lying at your feet,
Whose value you but faintly guess,
Another builder, looking on,
Would barter heaven to possess.

There is sound philosophy in this and something of the divine essence of poetry, as well. Everyday philosophy such as we see measured out every 24 hours by our newspaper poets, bless them, for they are the only bards of today who can sell their wares for the coin of the realm.

Now and then B. Y. Williams strikes a high note of patriotic feeling as in the poem called "What Do You See When the Flag Goes By." It's verses are not many, the question stanza with which the poems begins and ends is a timely one in these days when internationalists decry any national feeling as selfish.

"What do you see when the flag goes by?
Just a banner of red and white and blue?
Just a patch of gay color against the sky?
What does it mean to you?

Each man and woman must answer this as he will but we like B. Y. Williams' stanza when he says:

And some will see the poppies flaming red
Beneath blue skies that lie across the sea,
And brave young souls made white by sacrifice—
The sacrifice by which a world is free.

This is not great poetry but it has cheer in it and comfort for sad hearts and promise of better things. Perhaps that is the mission of the poet nowadays. Who knows?

And here's another book of verse. "Flutes of Childhood," by Thomas Emmet Moore (George Sully & Co., New York), who is a Shakesperian scholar of some renown and the author of several anthologies as well.

Now indeed we will find the real element of spring—youth, childhood of the year. For here are sweet visions of childhood, faint echoes from the Land of Never, Never, whispered refrains from days that were.

The name poem sounds the keynote:

Flutes of Childhood
Softly blowing,
Notes of wildwood
Fainter growing,
Echo from the tide of years
Melodies of mirth, and tears.

One will look in vain for the magic touch of Stevenson in these verses. That is almost too much to have expected in the year of grace 1928.

This is the age of sophistication and therefore even poetry about children will, necessarily, be of that type, more or less. Yet the fancies of childhood persist even in a machine age and this theme is delicately treated in

WHAT BABY HEARD.

What are you doing, baby dear—
There, where the flowers are bending?
Ring they a chime that is softly clear,
To tell you that rest-time, now, is near,
Or is it dream-songs the yare sending?

"Ah, hush!" my wee maiden answers, slow—
Oh, where are her thoughts a-winging?
How grave the sweet face that again bends low,
'Mid flowery lace, like driven snow!—
"Ah, hush! while the flowers are singing."

Pipe on, mystic flutes! The world will ever listen eagerly for your song and be grateful to the minstrels who play even a little tune upon you.

Book Notes

Napoleon has been described by H. G. Wells as an unmitigated scoundrel, "neatly vulgar, bright and complete," and by Elie Faure as an artist who has answered some lyric cry in the heart of man. In "The Stream of History," soon to be published by Scribner's, the author, Geoffrey Parsons, admits it is difficult to get a balanced judgment of such a superman. He says, "It is easy to admire the vast energy of the young Napoleon who became, at 30, the master of his country. It is impossible not to be disgusted by the overweening ambitions of the emperor in his last years of arrogance and tyranny."

Mussolini as "the bad boy of Europe" is playing true to type, says his friend and associate, Vittorio de Fiori, in his biography, "Mussolini, Man of Destiny."

As a small boy, says Mr. de Fiori, he was an aggressive turbulent urchin, "who frequently came home with his head cut open by a rocky missile, his face swollen and scratched or his eyes blackened. But even then he knew how to take care of himself, and now he almost boasts of the fact that in his boyhood he was a holy terror.

"His mother occasionally tried to take him to church, but Benito could not remain there long, especially during lengthy, tedious services. The feeble light of the candles, the penetrating odor of the incense, the monotonous singing of the psalms and the deep-toned voice of the organ seemed to have a strange, perturbing effect on him. Nevertheless, his mother insisted upon giving him a religious education, and decided to send him to a Salesian school. But," says Mr. de Fiori, "Mussolini was a rebellious student and inevitably ran away from school."

Mr. de Fiori tells the story of his friend through the escapades and exploints of his boyhood and young manhood up to his rise to power as Il Duce.

MADDEN WILL TALK ON CONGRESS BILLS TO WOMEN'S GUILD

Chairman Will Be Principal Speaker at American University Dinner.

STUDENT CONFERENCE PLANS ARE COMPLETE

Noted Educators Will Make Addresses; Debating Teams Close Their Seasons.

Representative Martin B. Madden, chairman of the House appropriations committee, will be the principal speaker at the annual benefit dinner of the woman's guild of American University Saturday night in the college dining hall on the campus, Nebraska and Massachusetts avenues. Although the specific topic of Mr. Madden's address was not announced, it is understood he will deal with Federal problems.

The dinner is to be given as a benefit for the scholarship fund and also for additional furnishings for the women's residence hall. Mrs. James Shera Montgomery, wife of the chaplain of the House of Representatives, is chairman of the committee on arrangements. Mrs. Susie Curtis is in charge of the sale of tickets, and Mrs. D. O. Kinsman and Mrs. George B. Woods in charge of decorations. Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, president of the guild, will preside.

American University will close its intercollegiate debating season tomorrow with a dual debate with Washington and Lee College. There will be two contests, on the two campuses, with each college defending both sides of the same question, "Resolved, That American private investments should not be given military protection by the United States Government." The last debate for the girls' teams was held Thursday night, also a dual contest with Western Maryland.

Annual Student Conference.

The first annual student conference of American University, for discussion of vital topics in student national and international life, will be held Friday and Saturday of this week, under the leadership of noted speakers.

Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of the school of economics and government of National University, who was formerly Minister from Czechoslovakia to Japan and to the United States, will lecture and lead discussion Friday morning at a session opening at 11 o'clock at Hurst Hall on the campus, from the topic, "What is America's part in international Cooperation?"

The Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will be the conference speaker Friday afternoon at 2:30 from the subject, "What is the attitude of the modern college student toward the church?"

The evening program Friday will start with a banquet in the college dining hall at 6 o'clock, and will be conducted on the subject: "What is the attitude of the modern college student toward other races?" The speaker will be Arthur Moor, of Temple University.

The conference will conclude with a Saturday morning session at which William Knowles Cooper, general secretary of the Washington Y. M. C. A., will speak from the topic, "Can the ideals of the college be maintained as the college grows?" The student committee in charge consists of: Randall Penhale, chairman; Ethel Moulton, Pauline Frederick, Jack LaFavre, Roger Craven, and Sara Martz. Dr. Arthur Jackson is the faculty adviser.

Installation of Chapter.

A new chapter of the graduate fraternity Chi Psi Omega, will be installed for some Johns Hopkins University students Saturday night by John Marshall Chapter of the fraternity, at 1907 F street, the headquarters of this American University chapter.

The new chapter is being formed after formal action taken by the national officers, authorizing its establishment by the local John Marshall Chapter. The new group is to be named after Daniel C. Gilman, first president of Johns Hopkins University. Following installation, an informal stag dinner and entertainment will be held at the City Club.

The International Relations Club at a special meeting Thursday at the college elected Janie S. Scanlin, of this city, as delegate to the annual conference of International Relations Clubs to be held at Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, Friday and Saturday. It was also decided to admit four students yearly from the School of Political Science, the remaining 21 members to come from the college, by election, and formal approval by the faculty.

A political debate in chapel Thursday, and "Republican party convention" Saturday night marked the political developments of the week, while plans are also on foot for the Democratic convention, this week, and general election Wednesday, April 25.

Heads of Political Groups.

Randall Penhale, "Republican committee chairman," presided for his party at Thursday's debate, and other Republican speakers were: Hugh Speer, Fred Carpenter, Jack LaFavre, Sara Martz, Raymond Spaeth, James Cagliola, Ellsworth Tompkins, and Donald Olmstead. The Democrats were headed by Aldred Jones, and other speakers included George Sixby, Roland Rice, William Warner, Edward Brooks. The guest of honor at the "Republican convention" was Mrs. Louise M. Dodson, of Hoover headquarters here.

Three entertaining one-act plays were presented Friday night at the auditorium on the campus by students of the dramatic course, under Will Hutchins, professor of art. Mr. Hutchins was coauthor with Prescott Warren of one of the plays, "The Day That Lincoln Died," which was given by the following cast: Edwin Brooks, Hattie Teachout, Willis Delaplain, Laura Everett, Elizabeth Joyce, Clarence Knapp and Marion Cross. The cast for "The Lost Silk Hat" included Milton Crist, James Johnson, Arthur Gerth, Edgar Manherz and Lynn Corson, while the "Will-o-the-Wisp" was presented by Delsie Appel, Kay Heath, Geraldine Wentwood and Rosalie Dimmette.

Dr. Lucius C. Clark, chancellor of the University, is in Pennsylvania today to deliver addresses at the dedication of churches at Clearfield, Pa., and Tyrone, Pa.

Dr. Edward T. Devine, dean of the graduate school of American University, will deliver an address Tuesday night before the American Association of University Women.

Miss Mary Louise Brown, dean of women, gave a luncheon last night in the college dining hall in honor of Miss Gladys Branegan, dean of home economics, Montana State College, Bozeman, Mont.

Turkish Society Girl Is to Guide Morgan

Constantinople, April 14 (A.P.).—A Turkish society girl is to guide J. P. Morgan and party on sightseeing trips to the mosques and bazaars. The arrangement was made by Ambassador Grew to prevent bother with impetuous professional guides. Mr. Morgan's yacht is in the Golden Horn.

PARENT-TEACHER ACTIVITIES

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, will be the speaker in the last of the "Parental Education Lecture Course" lectures. He will speak on the above subject at the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets, at 8 o'clock, Monday, April 16.

The George Washington University Glee Club and the Jefferson Junior High Orchestra will furnish the music. Senator Arthur Capper will preside. Mrs. J. N. Saunders is chairman of arrangements.

Dr. Marvin is arranging to establish a course in parental education at the university next fall.

The guests of honor will be the officers of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations and Mrs. W. T. Bannerman. The three-reel motion picture, "Our Changing World," will be shown.

Monthly Meetings.

The regular monthly meeting of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations will be held Tuesday, April 17, at 1 o'clock at the Interior Department.

Parent-Teacher Institute.

The Parent-Teacher Institute will be held in the auditorium of the Interior Department, Eighteenth and F streets northwest, April 17 and 18, 10 to 4 each day. Miss Frances Hays, extension secretary, National Congress of Parents and Teachers, will be the director of the institute.

Registration, 9:30 to 10. School associations sending delegates for full two-day institute (ten hours) will be given credit on State honor roll. Each person attending full course will receive a certificate. There will be a fine exhibit of school buildings and grounds in the halls of the Interior Department. For information apply to Mrs. J. N. Saunders, chairman, 3618 Porter street northwest.

Woman to Lecture.

The Open Fields School announces a course of lectures by Marietta Johnson, leader in progressive education, to be held at the Parish Hall, Grace Episcopal Church, Woodside, Md., Sunday afternoons at 3 o'clock. Her first lecture will be April 15 on "Is Your Child Flourishing or Languishing?"

Program for Congress.

The thirty-second annual convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, April 28 to May 5, at Hotel Cleveland and Euclid Avenue Church.

Topics: The three ages of childhood, in relation to "The Seven Fold Program of Home and School:" 1. The preschool age. 2. The grade school age. 3. The high school age.

Speakers: Dr. John J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education; Dr. D. Thom, national chairman of mental hygiene; Dr. W. E. Blatz, St. George's for Child Study, Toronto, Canada; Dr. Randal J. Condon, superintendent of schools, Cincinnati, and fifth vice president national congress; Mr. Frank H. Cheley, author of "The Job of Being a Dad;" Dr. Robert Vinson, president Western Reserve University, Ohio.

Virginia Wiman, Langley Junior High.

Flag salutes by Frances Hall Gregory, Carbery.

Stuart Junior High.

The April meeting of the Stuart Junior Home and School Association was held Thursday evening, April 5, at 8 o'clock, in the auditorium of the school.

"Our Studies and Our Lives" was the subject of an address given by Dr. Joy Elmer Morgan, editor of the Journal of the National Education Association. He also told of the conferring of the medal of honor upon Mrs. Lindbergh at the N. E. A. convention recently held in Boston. Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter, president of the District Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations, was a guest and speaker.

The program was preceded by a short business meeting, and included the following features by pupils of the school: "Mother Machree" and "Sing Along," by Mason Lipscomb; selections from "The Japanese Girl," 'Love's Old Sweet Song," "Washington," "Stuart Junior High School Song," sung by the Girls' Glee Club. The presence of both father and mother at the meeting enabled two gold stars to be placed upon the honor roll for parents.

James F. Oyster.

Mrs. Charles F. Knockey has been installed as "School Mother" of the James F. Oyster School. She supervises the playgrounds and the distribution of milk, and is in charge of the clinic.

Central High.

Since May 1 is Child Health day, Central High School Parent-Teacher Association will stress the subject of health at its next meeting, April 19, at 8 p. m. After the regular business meeting, which will be held in the library of the school, a practical demonstration of a swimming lesson will be given by Mr. Brunner at the swimming pool. Mr. Brunner is teacher of swimming at Central High School. Then the members of the association will go to the gymnasium to observe a practical lesson in gymnasium work given by Miss Elsie Sanders, instructor of physical training work at the school.

Children's Reading.

The State chairman, Mrs. W. H. Ross, 2811 Woodley road, requests all presidents of local Parent-Teacher Associations, or their chairman of "Children's Reading" or library work, to send a report to her of what has been done by their respective associations this past year; whether libraries have been established, books contributed, especially good reference books, or talks given or papers read on the subject of "Children's Reading."

The State chairman wishes to be able to compile a full report of this work done in the District of Columbia.

Force-Adams.

The summer-round-up chairman, Mrs. Fred Waldman, requests that names of children, 5 or 6 years of age, who will enter school for the first time in September, be sent to her at Force or to Adams in care of Miss Gore.

The president, Mrs. Chambers, hopes that chairman of all committees, as well as others interested, will attend the Parent-Teacher Institute to be held April 17 and 18 at the auditorium of the Department of Interior.

It is hoped that many of our members will attend the "Get-together luncheon" in connection with the State convention, April 23 to 24. Luncheon, April 24, at 1 p. m. at the Raleigh Hotel. Reservations must be made before April 20. Audrey Gill and Dorothy Graham will act as pages at the convention, April 23.

Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia and the World Book have been purchased for the school library.

Hubbard-Raymond.

The regular meeting of the Hubbard-Raymond Home and School Association, April 16, has been postponed by vote of the executive committee to Monday evening, April 23, when it will be held at the Hubbard School.

Brookland.

Mr. William C. Jackson spoke to a large number of parents and teachers of the Brookland School at their meeting Friday, March 13. He made a strong plea not only for more playgrounds for the city, but for well trained, well paid workers to carry on the work.

Miss Margaret Pepper, principal, asked the association to purchase a blanket for the use of the school in emergency cases. The necessary fund was appropriated and in addition the members authorized the purchase of a comfortable couch and suitable coverings for the pillows.

The president, Mrs. Carleton, appointed Mrs. Charles Molster, Mrs. Robert Kause and Mrs. F. J. Brunner as a nominating committee to arrange a ticket for the election of officers for the April meeting.

Mrs. Brunner's second grade won the count for the greatest number of parents present.

Bunker Hill.

The Bunker Hill Association met at the school Thursday, April 5, at 3 p. m.

A very instructive talk was given by Miss Catherine Watkins on parental education. A resolution was passed to establish a study group, under the direction of Mrs. Sherman, the first meeting to be held in May. The attendance picture was won by the kindergarten. A very successful luncheon was held last month, the proceeds to be used for the benefit of the school.

Parkview Platoon.

Parkview Platoon School P.-T. A. elected officers April 5. Mrs. George Jones, secretary, was the only new officer elected.

A rising vote of appreciation was given Mrs. C. H. Ruoff, on her successful year as president. Mrs. Ruoff thanked the members for their cooperation and asked that they assist her in the work of the coming year.

The association constitution has been printed in booklet form and is ready for distribution. Get one and know your constitution.

"Intelligent Membership," mentioned in the February State Bulletin, has been adopted by this association. The membership committee finds the card file system a great time saver.

Miss Scrivener, principal of Parkview, reported on her trip to the N. E. A. The flexibility of the work-study-play plan was emphasized by the speaker.

Miss Rose Phillips, director of Platoon Schools, Detroit, was entertained at dinner on April 9, by a committee headed by Mrs. C. H. Ruoff, Parkview P.-T. A. president. The lecture by Miss Phillips, under the auspices of the District of Columbia Parent-Teacher Associations, proved the economy and elasticity of the platoon plan.

Miss Phillips said: "The platoon school belongs to our day and generation. Every step taken has been checked and the result found excellent; a richer, fuller school life for all children."

Bryan Mothers Club.

The Mothers' Club of the Bryan Association met at the school April 4. The president, Mrs. John F. Hamaker, had planned a surprise, and the members were taken to Hains Point, on the Speedway, where every one enjoyed the talk on "Truthfulness" by Mrs. C. E. Kettler, as well as the delightful scenery and balmy spring air.

The next meeting of the Bryan Association has been changed to the third Thursday, April 19, instead of the usual fourth Thursday of the month, due to the rehearsal of the spring play at Eastern High School the 26th.

Langley Junior High.

The Langley Junior High School has changed its meeting night from Tuesday to Wednesday. At the regular monthly meeting April 18 at the school, Dr. Richmond, of St. Elizabeths Hospital, will give a talk on "What We Mean by Insanity."

The dramatic club under the direction of Mrs. Hoffman will give a play, "The Red Lamp."

Keene P.-T. Group.

The Joseph R. Keene Parent-Teacher Association held its monthly meeting in the school Tuesday before a large gathering. Mrs. F. D. Morris, president, presided, and Mrs. George P. Grove, assistant secretary, read minutes of the previous meeting in the absence of Mrs. J. C. Brown, the secretary.

The pupils of Mrs. M. E. Drake, teacher of the Seventh grade, opened the meeting by songs and recitations which were appropriate to the occasion.

The annual event of the bird houses was one of the features of the evening. This event is one in which the children of the school build bird houses which are exhibited and judged at this meeting. Cash prizes were awarded them as follows: First, Freda Dittes; second, Elizabeth Dittes; third, Bernard Joy; fourth, Betty Cheeney; fifth, Thomas Steel; sixth, Herman Hitz, and seventh, Boyd Collier.

The judges for the awards were Miss Esther W. Scott, nature teacher of division 1 to 9 of the District Public Schools; Mr. Clarence Shoemaker and H. J. Overman.

A moving picture show was also one of the events of the evening consisting of reel films of the Sao Paulo, Brazil, coffee plantation. Mr. William E. Smith, president of the Palmetto Coffee Co., addressed the association and furnished coffee for the evening.

Carbery P.-T. Association.

Mrs. Norman Sanoridge, vice president, presided at a meeting of the Carbery Parent-Teacher Association April 3 in the absence of the president, Mrs. John W. Davis, who is ill. Mrs. William H. Rowe read the State president's message and Mrs. Josephine Moore reported from the Public School Association. Grade mothers reporting were Mrs. Frame, Mrs. Lamb, Mrs. Eastman and Mrs. W. L. Hagen, for publicity.

The annual Easter trips conducted by the association took place April 12. Groups of children in charge of the mothers started from the school at 9:15, going to various Government buildings and to Mount Vernon. These trips are eagerly looked forward to by the children and are both instructive and enjoyable. It was voted to have a party at the next meeting of the Reading Circle April 19, this being the closing meeting of the study group. It was also decided to hold a luncheon at the school on May 2. Mrs. Gregory is chairman and Mrs. Lamb vice chairman.

Mrs. William H. Rowe announced the State convention of the District Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations April 23 and 24. She also stated that the slides for the playground would be installed this month, these having been purchased by the association. Mrs. George Fox gave a report from the district congress. The banner for attendance was won by the first grade, Miss Dyson, teacher.

Langdon.

Langdon Parent-Teacher Association met at the school on Friday night, April 13. Robert L. Haycock spoke on "How Our Schools Are Named."

A number of members of the Langdon Association have registered for the short course in parent-teacher work to be held next week.

Maury.

The Maury Parent-Teacher Association will meet on Thursday, April 19, at 2 o'clock, in the kindergarten room of the school.

Mrs. G. W. Lady, State chairman of "study circles," will be the speaker.

Juvenile Protection.

The Parent-Teacher representatives to the Juvenile Protection Association will meet Wednesday at 2 p. m., at the Epiphany Parish Hall, 1317 G street northwest.

Barnard.

The Barnard Parent-Teacher Association will hold its regular monthly meeting at the school on Thursday evening, April 19, at 8 o'clock.

Fairbrother-Rossell.

The regular monthly meeting of the Fairbrother-Rossell School was held last Wednesday.

Reports were made by Mrs. Calvin Welty, Mrs. G. S. Fraser, Mrs. Edward Altman and Mrs. Jerome Lyle.

Arrangements were completed for a benefit at Keith's Theater on April 24, the proceeds of which are to be placed in the general fund of the association. All friends are requested to purchase tickets from the members.

A Dutch play was given by the fourth grade pupils of Miss M. E. O'Neil's class and one on Pure Food by those of Miss Maude White's class. Both plays were well acted and heartily applauded.

A delightful travelogue on Japan was presented by the sixth grade pupils of Miss McClures' class. The children wore Japanese costumes and served refreshments provided by their teacher.

Blair.

The regular meeting of the Blair-Hayes P.-T. A. will be held at the Blair school on Thursday evening, April 25, at 8 o'clock. The speaker will be the Rev. H. B. Melton. Tickets are selling well for the Mother Goose entertainment to be given at the Stuart Junior High on April 27. A chorus of 30 girls is to be trained by Mrs. Kinsella to sing the old favorite nursery rhymes. The entire performance is under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Naylor, kindergarten teacher at the Hayes School.

Dr. J. C. Wright, director of the Federal Board for Vocational Education, will speak before the Woodridge Parent-Teacher Association next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the Woodridge School. Several attractive musical numbers have been arranged for by the program committee and refreshments will be served.

John Greenleaf Whittier.

The John Greenleaf Whittier Parent-Teacher Association will hold its April meeting Monday, April 16, at 3:15 p. m. in the school building. There will be an executive meeting at 2:30.

Please don't forget the card party Wednesday evening, April 18, in the school building.

State Bulletin.

In congratulations from the president of Kentucky Parent-Teacher Association, Mrs. B. M. Starks, concerning our Parent-Teacher Association Bulletin, she says, "I have enjoyed your wonderful bulletins and have had much help from them."

Plan for Histories.

MRS. J. E. HAYES, National Historian.

The first step in the fulfillment of our obligations is to urge the election of a historian for each local association. Local associations often exist for years without such official, depending upon the recording secretary to keep all necessary records.

The secretary's record must of necessity contain many items essential to the history of any group, such as motions and actions, which are merely records of the fulfillment of routine duties. The historian's record should contain merely the outstanding achievements and any change of policy which may be enacted during the year.

The following material should be filed by the historian if no other provision is made for its preservation: Hand books, year books, bulletins, State leaflets, special bulletins, national leaflets written by State workers, programs, convention material, songs, &c., stationery, Child Welfare Magazine, records of secretary and treasurer no longer in use.

Wherever the scrapbook method has been given a trial it has proved most interesting and valuable. A loose-leaf notebook or scrapbook is recommended because it permits the additions of material from time to time and makes it possible to keep random material in consecutive order.

All clippings pertaining to the activities of the association which have historical significance, distinguishing such clippings from the press-book material in that the mere recording meetings held, &c., is of no historical value unless something of achievement or policy change is a part of the report.

Pictures from newspapers or photographs of activities enliven the photograph and make it more readily appreciated by chance readers. Pictures which show a cooperative work with other associations' agencies are interesting. Graphs showing growth of membership are stimulating.

If there is no history of your organization on file, search through whatever records are available and compile a chronology of events, such as may be tabulated in single sentences, such as:

1908. Organized. Thirty-two members. Mrs. X first president. Made great progress in improving conditions in school buildings.

1909. Worked for and helped to make possible passage of compulsory attendance law. Began health clinics, &c.

1910. Limiting the items to those acts of real significance in the history of the movement.

Such a record kept up to date and published at intervals in the bulletin would stimulate interest and suggest activities which might be undertaken by other associations of State branches.

Annual Benefit.

The Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations is very fortunate in getting George Kelly's Pulitzer prize play, "Craig's Wife," for its annual get-together benefit at the National Theater, Tuesday, May 22. This play ran two solid seasons in New York, starring Crystal Herne.

Remember, friends, this is your organization and its success depends on you. Lindy may have made Paris without a backseat driver, but this organization cannot steer "Craig's Wife" to a successful landing without your support.

Round-up of Children.

The first registration blank from a local association to be received in the State office came from Force-Adams, naming Mrs. Fred Waldeman as local campaign director. All local presidents' names were sent to the national campaign office in Philadelphia this past week. It is to be hoped that every association will feel the responsibility of seeing that every child of their community who enters school next fall is physically fit. The May Day—Child Health Day—will be the formal opening of the summer roundup campaign. There is very little time to spare, so every association chairman with a strong committee get to work. Mrs. H. N. Stull is State chairman for the campaign, and Mrs. H. R. Smalley is State chairman for affiliated organizations.

Scrap Books.

Publicity chairmen who are making scrapbooks are asked to please note that no books received after Wednesday, April 18, will be eligible for selection to be sent to the national convention. This is an extension of two days beyond the date first announced, and is the last day which can possibly be allowed for the books. Books may be brought to the institute on Tuesday or Wednesday, if so desired, or sent to the office. Several books have already been sent in.

To Classify Associations.

Notice has been received from the national office that each State must send the number of associations which have qualified as "standard" and "superior" during the past year, to the national office by April 20, in order that recognition may be given at the national convention to the State having the largest number of each.

If there are any local associations that have fulfilled the requirements of either of these classes, as set forth on page 47 of the National Handbook, please notify the State office at once.

Last year there were three "superior" and five "standard" associations in the District of Columbia—how many will qualify this year?

Honor Roll.

Last call for the State honor roll see the December "Parent-Teacher," or the "Parent-Teacher activities" column of The Post for Sunday, January 22, for the necessary points, and report what your association has accomplished to the State office, 800 Eighteenth street northwest, or to Mrs. W. E. Kalmbach, 3007 Twenty-sixth street northeast, right away. Reports are coming in almost daily, and it is hoped that many more associations may be added to the roll before the State convention.

John Eaton.

The children of the eighth grade of John Eaton School, Miss Offutt teacher, will give a performance of Scott's "Lady of the Lake" in Wardman Park Theater on Thursday afternoon, April 19 at 3 o'clock and Friday night, April 20, at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Mary Sherrier Bowie and Mr. J. L. M. Bowie, assisted by Mr. Anton Kaspar, with Mr. George Wilson at the piano, will furnish the music.

GERMAN PRINCESSES SHOW MUSICAL GIFT

4 Hohenzollerns Participate in Concert in Honor of War Veterans.

Gotha, Germany, April 14 (A.P.).—Four Hohenzollern princesses participated here in a memorial symphony concert given in honor of the fallen heroes of the World War. They were the widow of the late Prince Friedrich Wilhelm, cousin of the former kaiser and owner of the palace in Berlin in which King Amanullah of Afghanistan stopped, and three of her daughters.

The mother, Princess Agathe, played the viola; her oldest daughter, Maria Therese, who is 17 years old, the flute; her second daughter, Louise Henriette, 16, the cello, and Princess Marianna, the third daughter, aged 14, the violin.

All of them played in an orchestra made up of members of the Gotha Theater Orchestra and volunteers. Princess Maria Therese especially distinguished herself by playing the solo flute part in Bach's Cantata No. 161. Her mother is a sister-in-law of Prince Joachim Albrecht, who was recently in the United States.

MINISTER IN FRANCE ADOPTS MODERN ART

Cabinet Member Has Classic Furniture Moved From His Office.

Paris, April 14 (A.P.).—Modern French decorative art, exemplified on the seas by the steamship Ile de France, has conquered one of the citadels of Gallic conservatism—the office of a government minister.

Maurice Bokanowski, the minister of commerce, has had all the centuries-old pieces of classic furniture moved out of his office and slick and streamline 1928 creations put in. In place of the old imperial table is a new wood and marble one, oblong, heavy and shiny, that serves as a desk. The legs of one of the chairs are shaped like a capital X that decided to lie down. The carpet is bright and as gay as a Navajo blanket. The vases and pieces of statuary are all ultra-modern.

Only one decoration remains to carry on the tradition of a French government minister's office. On the walls still hang Gobelin tapestries. Whether M. Bokanowski really likes modern art he hasn't said. But in using it in his bureau he is encouraging new business, and that is part of the job of a minister of commerce.

All-Metal Diving Suit Is Made by Engineer

Whitestone, N. Y., April 14 (A.P.).—H. L. Bowdoin, 60, engineer, has made an all-metal suit which he thinks will enable a diver to remain 200 feet down for 45 minutes. It consists of overlapping units of alumnium. He hopes to salvage war wrecks, then present one of his 1,400-pound outfits to the Government for use in life saving when submarines are sunk.

RATING INSPECTION OF R.O.T.C. SCHOOLS FOREGONE BY ARMY

UNIVERSITY TO EXHIBIT AT FOREIGN TRADE MEET

Annual Law Price Debate to Be Held Thursday; Fenning to Lecture at Yale.

Announcement at the War Department that colleges throughout the country giving R. O. T. C. courses will not be inspected this spring to determine their rating as "distinguished colleges" comes as a keen disappointment to the military unit and officials of Georgetown University.

The Georgetown unit has been unusually successful in maintaining its battalion on a fit military footing and for the last two years it has been designated as one of the "distinguished" units of the Third Corps Area, embracing the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania. It has already had two preliminary inspections this year by Col. Clarence Deems, War Department officer in charge of Third Corps Area R. O. T. C. activities, to determine whether the unit was fit to be included in the final inspection expected later in the spring.

While this inspection has been canceled unexpectedly for all the R. O. T. C. units in the country, it was explained at the War Department that the commander of the Third Corps Area, Brig. Gen. John C. McArthur, may possibly inspect the college units for an unofficial rating to determine those especially proficient in their military courses. In those colleges where preliminary inspections have been made this year, as in the cases of Georgetown and the University of Maryland, it was explained that a further inspection may not be included, as the reports of Col. Deems may be taken in lieu thereof.

Rating Lost Only Once.

Since the establishment of a military department at Georgetown during the World War, the university authorities have given it every possible cooperation. It has lost its "distinguished" rating only once since acquiring it, and this year additional space was provided the department in the new north building.

Failure to hold the annual spring inspection, it was said at the War Department, will not affect the policy maintained heretofore of giving commissions in the Regular Army to 5 per cent of the honor graduates of the military departments without examinations, when vacancies exist.

Georgetown University will be represented as usual at the annual convention of the National Foreign Trade Council which opens April 25 for a four-day period in Houston, Tex. James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, and a trustee of Georgetown, will preside at the convention.

The Georgetown delegates will be Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, regent of the School of Foreign Service, and Dr. Thomas H. Healy, assistant dean of the school, which has been represented at the sessions of the council since its organization. With the foreign trade of the United States rapidly approaching $10,000,000,000 in annual volume, the forthcoming sessions are held of vital importance to the foreign trade industries of the country.

Will Have Booth at Houston.

At the last sessions of the council in Detroit, the Georgetown department maintained a booth which showed the distribution of its graduates in virtually every civilized country, and a similar booth will be arranged for the Houston convention.

Word has been received at the School of Law of the organization of the Georgetown Alumni Club of the Philippines, which elected officers at a banquet in Manila on February 19. Many of the highest officials of the Philippine government are Georgetown graduates of twenty years ago, and some of more recent date. For example, the membership of the newly-formed club includes Attorney General Delfin Jaranilla, '07, who was unanimously elected president; Judge Pedro Tuason, '08; Maximo Kalaw, dean of the University of the Philippines, and Hon. Roman Lacson, one of the officers of the National Bank of the Philippines.

Other officers of the club were elected as follows: Dean Kalaw, first vice president; Judge Anastacio Teodoro, of the court of first instance of Bulacam, second vice president; Representative Jose P. Melencio, secretary-treasurer; Alfonso P. Donesa, of the Bureau of Justice, assistant secretary-treasurer. An executive committee was chosen as follows: Fiscal Felix Bautista Angelo, chairman; Fiscal Salvador Abad Santos, Dr. Marcelo Nubia, Attorney Angel Sumtay and Attorney Juan Ventanilla.

Mr. Donesa, one of the youngest members of the club, graduated from Georgetown Law School in 1924 and while in Washington was active in the affairs of the Filipino Club, having won its oratorical contest during his school days.

Law Debates on Thursday.

The fourth annual prize debate at the law school was postponed from last Thursday to Thursday evening of this week. Judges selected for the contest were announced as Edward J. Hoy, '18; Raymond Thomas Yingling, '21; and Harold Frank Noneman, '26, all alumni of the law school. The debaters will be the same as previously announced and the topic is to be on the question of a Baumes law for the District of Columbia.

Prof. Karl Fenning, of the law school, has been invited to lecture at Yale University next month on patent law, a subject which he has been teaching successfully at Georgetown for the last three years.

From all indications the "G" Club dinner the evening of April 25 will bring out one of the largest attendances at one of these Georgetown functions since they were started several years ago. It is Georgetown's principal opportunity to honor its athletes and past and present wearers of the coveted "G" will be conspicuous. Louis Little, director of athletics, is in charge of the arrangements and has received acceptances from a number of prominent athletic coaches from the principal universities.

Senior Promenade Friday.

Plans for the annual senior prom of the School of Foreign Service to be held at the Carlton Hotel Friday night are rapidly nearing completion. Among the patrons and patronesses who already have accepted invitations are the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik; the Minister of China and Mme. Sze; the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter; the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Smiddy; the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Kiep; the First Secretary of the Bolivian Legation and Mme. de la Barra, and Gen. A. C. Dalton, vice president and general manager of the United States Merchant Marine Fleet Corporation, and Mrs. Dalton.

The student committee in charge of arrangements comprises William R. Mooza, chairman, and M. L. Leap, president of the senior class, assisted by Emmett T. Sweeney, John V. Jennings, Eugene M. Ribiero and Robert J. Bradley.

Second Lieut. Kenneth W. Boyd, Army Air Corps, who was killed Wednesday when his airplane plunged into the Mississippi River at Baton Rouge, La., was a student at the Georgetown Law School for three years until he left in 1922. He was active in scholastic affairs and after leaving Georgetown was a patent examiner here for about two years before entering the Army Air Service. Lieut Boyd was a son of William I. Boyd, assistant District surveyor, and was a native of Washington.

Dr. William F. Notz, dean of the Foreign Service School, and professor of the class in marketing, was able to present to his class Thursday evening an interesting motion picture illustrating the handling of fruits and vegetables at the Baltimore & Ohio perishable products terminal at Philadelphia. His class is making a detailed study of marketing facilities in the principal cities of the United States.

G.W.U. TO CONDUCT CLASSES IN MUSIC FOR SUMMER TERM

Pan-Hellenic Promenade Will Be Held on Friday at the City Club.

George Washington University will offer regular instructions in music during the coming summer in summer sessions. The theory, teaching and history of music will be developed at the institution as a regular course of study for the first time. According to officials of the institution this will probably mark the first step in the inclusion of the study of music in the regular curriculum.

Several times in the past, special music subjects have been offered. Beginning this summer regular courses of instruction will be presented. It is expected that the subject will be developed regularly for the future.

The courses offered during summer sessions will be given by Bernice Randall Angelico, well-known teacher in the Washington public schools. The summer sessions catalogue will be ready for distribution during the week, according to Prof. Elmer Louis Kayser, director.

Promenade on Friday.

The annual Pan-Hellenic promenade will be given on Friday night at the City Club. A prominent feature of the affair will be the presentation of the newly won intersorority bridge tournament cup won by the Delta Zeta Sorority. Other cups won in the past five months will be awarded. The annual edition of the Petticoat will be a feature of the prom.

The initiation of Gamma Eta pledges will take place at the Grace Dodge Hotel on the evening of April 19. A dinner will be held in connection with the celebration. The annual Easter recess comes to a close today. Classes in all departments of the university will be resumed tomorrow.

More than 2,000 alumni have sent in votes on the preliminary ballot for nominations to the board of trustees. The candidates named on the ballot are Stephen E. Kramer, William Bruce King, Gen. A. D. V. Andrews, Judge Edward J. Henning, Charles Hart and Delos Smith. A second ballot will be sent out shortly containing the names of the four highest in the present nomination.

Women Hold Banquet.

The most successful banquet in the history of the Columbian Women was held on Thursday night at the Chevy Chase Club, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley presiding. About two hundred were served. Mme. Jeroslav Lipa, wife of the counselor of the Czechoslovak Legation; Mrs. David Allen Robertson, wife of the assistant director of the American Council on Education; Mrs. Frank Barrows Fryer, wife of Capt. Fryer, U. S. Navy, and Miss Ada Rainey, art editor of The Washington Post, took part in the program. These, with Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, wife of the president of George Washington University, and Mrs. John Bell Larner, wife of the president of the board of trustees, were the honor guests. Mrs. Joshua Evans, Jr., who had charge of the arrangements, gave the greeting to the organization.

A most successful concert and dance was held at the Washington Hotel in the Hall of Nations when the combined glee clubs of George Washington University and Columbia University of New York appeared. A total of eight men appeared in special numbers and in concerted songs during the evening.

A travel number of Ghost, the humorous publication, appeared on the campus recently. Rowland Lyons, art editor, recently received an award in the nation-wide college art contest held by College Humor.

LAW DEBATE SERIES BEGINS ON SATURDAY

Second of Eliminating Tests to Be Held by Washington College Freshmen.

The second of a series of elimination debates will be held by the freshman class debating society of the Washington College of Law Saturday night at the school. The final debates for awards will be held probably next month.

A heavy moot court calendar was disposed of during the week. Seniors trying cases were Miss May E. Payne, Miss Mary C. Carley, Miss Sara L. O'Brien, Miss Adelaide E. Schlaudecker, Miss Ruth M. Searles, Louis Sheldon, John R. Farrell,

Stage Presentations of Interest

Footlights and Shadows

By JOHN J. DALY

IN 1932, four years hence, will be celebrated the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington. This city, naturally, will be the center of festivities. As the Nation's Capital, the entire country may be expected to send representation here. If present plans of the commission for the celebration go through, the present population undoubtedly will be doubled, if only by transients. When the good folk of the far West, the middle West, the near East, the sunny South and New England States foregather within the confines of the Nation's Capital, they may be surprised that Washington, after all these years, theatrically speaking, is a one-week town.

As nations go, the United States of America is considered quite a big country. Certainly its financial resources are equal to those of any nation in the world. A young stripling among the elders, it nevertheless has made great strides in everything, including the arts; though its commercial activities have carried it farthest. In older countries, and even in some quite as young, the capital cities are quite important places; but, much as we might have it otherwise, Washington, the District of Columbia, outside of its political sphere, is not by many lengths the leader in the race. There is, for instance, New York. There are, too, other cities that are farther ahead in many ways. So far as the theater goes, Washington is a stepchild along the Amusement Way. Up until this time it has been looked upon in theatrical circles as "a dog town."

* * * *

NOW it happens that there are various reasons for Washington being a "dog town." Some of them are within the ken and control of the native populace. Others are not. Theatrical producers, for one thing, have not had such high respect for this community. By the same token, the community has not done so well by itself. It has, from time to time, voiced its disapproval of "dog shows" and the like, by remaining away from the theater.

On the other hand, when meritorious works loomed on the horizon, nothing short of theater space has kept all of Washington from planking down hard-earned dollars to see what there was to see. Unfortunately, over a period of years, good, substantial theatrical fare has been meager, while frowsy stuff came leaping over the boards.

This week an experiment is being tried in the National Theater. A musical comedy that has caused considerable comment on Broadway, where it enjoyed an unprecedented run, is going into its second week here. This is something that has been a long time coming, and from the results of this second week of "Rio Rita" may be heard an echo before the grand celebration in 1932 gets under way.

* * * *

WASHINGTON, in the four years to come, before its namesake's 200th birth anniversary is celebrated, may be a two-week town. It ought to be. Some day it will be a 3-4-5-6-7-8 and 9-week town.

Musical comedies and straight plays leave here and go to cities of the same proportionate population and there play two, three and four weeks to good business. Washington, now, so the census takers tell us, has overstepped the half-million mark in population. The figures are rather close to 600,000. With the suburbs taken in, a so-called "greater Washington" might readily comprise some 750,000 persons. Besides this, theatrical Washington draws upon such places as Frederick, Md.; Rockville, Winchester and Alexandria, Va., and even upon Baltimore, when a real show comes to town. Good roads, an increase of automobile traffic and high-class railroad service coming to this city—not to mention the boat service from Norfolk and Old Point—make it rather easy for persons to come here whenever attractions warrant.

Thus, when Morris Guest thought of bringing "The Miracle" to Washington, he had hopes of drawing from places as far away as Richmond, Roanoke and Winchester, on the south, and from Gettysburg, Harrisburg, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton in the other direction.

* * * *

WITHIN the past week, 50,000 or 60,000 visitors came to Washington to see the cherry blossoms along the Speedway. It happened at this particular time that there were only two legitimate theaters doing business. Two other theaters, open with stellar attractions, would have considerably eased the situation.

Of course, the cherry blossoms bloom only once a year—and remain in bloom only two weeks. They come, too, at the tail-end of the theatrical season. In the other 38 weeks of the full winter schedule, from September to June, Washington depends mostly on Congress instead of the cherry blossoms as a magnet for bringing out-of-town visitors. This, too, is an uncertainty, since the sessions of Congress are seasonal. Anyway, there are always the great points of interest, the wonderful public buildings, the historic spots, and enough added or side attractions to keep Washington in the eyes of the public. The public, after all is said and done, is the backbone of the theater. The public wants attractions. No matter where masses of men and women gather or for what purpose, work or play, amusement is a constantly sought boon. It is a luxury, of course, but it is virtually a necessity, especially in this day, when jaded nerves require relaxation. So long as this is so, the theater is a necessary adjunct of life and must be so respected.

* * * *

WASHINGTON has neglected its theater. This is said in face of the fact that Washington has been rather good to the theater, at times. With the growth of the city and the improvements along Pennsylvania avenue being formulated by the National Government, Washington stands a chance of losing one or more theaters in the process of progress. Citizens, like the man standing on the shore and watching his bark drift away, are coming to realize that something of value may be washed out to sea. Hence the awakening of the public conscience toward the theater and men who manage it. When well-known wares are being sold, the folk along the banks of the Potomac rush to buy. The old law of supply and demand, working overtime, causes a strengthening of the supply system.

So "Rio Rita" is being held over an extra week and if Washington, by keen manifestation of interest, flocks in great numbers, plays booked in the future might come in for half-a-month instead of one week.

There have been plays in Poli's Theater and in the Belasco that were worthy of being held over an extra week or so. They would have been held had booking offices in New York known at the time Washington would support plays one week more than the usual length of time. As it was, the box office demand came too late. Many managers have taken their plays out of Washington reluctantly. They went from here, with good business, to fields not so fertile. Had they realized that the old days have gone, that a city once looked upon as a hick town has now reached metropolitan growth, several outstanding theatrical successes would have played the Belasco and National and Poli's for two and, perhaps, three weeks instead of the customary one.

* * * *

BY 1932 anything may happen; but, by that time, Washington undoubtedly will have shaken off the lowly term oft heaped upon its shoulders—"a dog town."

There is no reason in the world why the Capital City of the United States of America should be so low in the theatrical scale, even when compared with the capital cities of other nations.

So far as that other and vastly important field of theatrics, the motion picture industry, is concerned, the magnates of Hollywood and New York realize that a city so situated as this can not always remain at the bottom of the heap. The idea now, I believe, is to make this the premier first run picture city of the land. By the same virtue, in the days to come, and especially about the time the grand national celebration of George Washington's natal day comes along, Washington will have taken on a new complexion, so far as its legitimate theater is concerned. This should be a two-week town along about that time, if not before.

SIX PLAYS THIS WEEK IN BELASCO

In connection with the engagement of Robert B. Mantell and Genevieve Hamper, which opens at the Belasco Theater tomorrow evening, the question arose as to which plays the stars would present, and it finally resolved itself into a selection of those which in the past had found greatest favor here.

With the five works of Shakespeare that will be presented most theatergoers are familiar, and as to "Richelieu," it was long ago agreed that in it Bulwer Lytton had given to the stage a drama that by sheer merit had a right to be included in a repertoire that is otherwise entirely Shakespearean.

In these times, when doubtful plays are attracting so much unfavorable attention to the stage it is gratifying to read of the success of the Mantell-Hamper organization, which has ever been identified with only the best of stage offerings, which would seem to conclusively answer the question as to whether present-day playgoers are interested in and will not attend plays that are lacking in salaciousness or from which the sex appeal is absent.

The schedule of plays and the order in which they will be presented follows: "Richelieu," Monday evening; "Hamlet" (traditional), Tuesday evening; "As You Like It," Wednesday matinee; "Julius Caesar," Wednesday evening; "Merchant of Venice," Thursday evening; "Macbeth," Friday evening; "Merchant of Venice," Saturday matinee, and "Julius Caesar" for the final performance of the engagement on Saturday evening.

Full scenic productions and correct period costumes are carried for each play, as is also the music that was specially composed for them.

Supporting the stars is a company of seasoned Shakespearean players, notable among whom are John Alexander, Philip Quin, Bruce Adams, Theresa Colburn, Le Roi Operti, Frederic W. Hile, Theresa Larkin, Rex Benware, Hilborn Lloyd, Besse Simone, James Neill, Edwin Foss and John Schellhaas, a resident of Washington.

FAMOUS OLD GRAND OPERA COMING HERE

The greatest operatic season Washington has witnessed, certainly in two decades, is set for the present week at Poli's Theater, where the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York, conceded to be the finest organization of its kind in the world, will appear, with all its vast resources, in four of the finest works in its repertory, beginning Wednesday evening with a magnificent production of "Norma," in which Rosa Ponselle has her greatest role.

The Metropolitan, by reason of its exceptional opportunities to draw to its productions the greatest stars of the musical world, is now admitted to surpass even the famous La Scala Opera of Milan. It had not been heard in Washington for 18 years until, last season, it was brought here for three performances, which proved a revelation to local opera goers.

The performances this year will be even finer than those last year, for the stage at Poli's is larger than the one available at that time, and the most spectacular and sumptuous operas in the company's repertory will be possible. "Boris Godounoff" will be given Thursday matinee, an opera which is probably one of the most elaborately presented that the Metropolitan has ever attempted. Feodor Challapin, who finds in Boris his greatest operatic opportunities, will be the star.

On Saturday afternoon, Lucrezia Bori and Beniamino Gigli will have the principal roles in "Romeo et Juliette," and on Saturday evening "Tannhaeuser" will be given, with a fine cast headed by Florence Easton.

The local management of the Metropolitan is intrusted to Mrs. Wilson-Greene, from whose concert bureau in Droop's, Thirteenth and G streets, remaining tickets may be obtained.

GIRLY SHOW AT GAYETY

"The Tempters," a United Burlesque production, is this week's attraction at the Gayety Theater. Williams & Jordan, the producers, have the reputation of knowing precisely what is essential to a real "show girl" and it seems but natural that their selection of female pulchritude would be to sustain that reputation. Hence the excellent bevy of beauty to be seen with this attraction, and which has received favorable comment wherever shown.

Ed Jordan, known from Maine to California, heads the company with brand new comedy material. He is ably aided in his funmaking by Elsie Raynor, the "Gilda Gray of Burlesque," a young lady who can, it is asserted, "get more shakes" out of her anatomy than any other woman on the stage. Lottie Lee is a singer and dancer of deftness and distinction, and Mary Lee Tucker, the California sunbeam, possesses a charming voice as well as being an accomplished dancer.

The Musical Morrows can play anything that looks like a musical instrument, and Griff Williams can make a banjo seem like an entire orchestra and brass band combined. The chorus of sixteen is heralded as pretty, clever and tuneful.

Admixture of Music.

Into the programs of super-dance music at Le Paradis are introduced a dozen-odd specialties. There is no such thing as an interlude between dances. Each of these intermissions is occupied by some solo number, with fine concert music represented, as well as the gayeties of jazz.

Concert violin and piano numbers are presented, respectively, by Director Harry Albert and Pianist Robert Stickney. These expert musicians are equally at home in fine classic numbers and the cleverer type of syncopation.

Sharp comedy stunts in music are also represented in these interludes by "Fish" Walker, banjoist, and Bob Bunch, saxophonist.

The Le Paradis dance music at dinner and supper represents two entirely different genres. Perhaps this explains why so many folks like to stay for both sessions. The Club Chantecler Orchestra presents typically European dance music at the dinner hour, while the supper session sees the advent of the noted Le Paradis Band and Broadway syncopation.

OLD-TIMERS STILL PAY BIG PROFITS

Robert B. Mantell who, with Genevieve Hamper, comes to the Belasco in a repertoire of Shakespeare's plays, asks "Why will some people so persistently associate ruin with the production of Shakespeare's plays."

"The history of the English-speaking stage does not warrant it as one will become quickly convinced if they will interest themselves in the subject.

"The data is at hand in the public library of every important city and while it will be found that many failures were registered in connection with the production of the master dramatist's works it will in almost every instance be shown that those who failed were not properly equipped for the enterprise.

"There have been misguided and ill-conceived attempts and failure was certain to attend them—in some instances because of a total lack of a sense of the undertaking and in other cases on account of the absence of that requisite for all enterprises—money—which is very essential in the case of Shakespeare in that it not only involves a large company but the presentation of a repertoire necessitates considerable scenery and a number of sets of costumes for each of the plays which, with many other necessary items, combine to make the production of Shakespeare a rather costly operation.

"However, that Shakespeare producing and loss are not always synonymous is shown in the case of Forrest, the leading Shakespearean actor of his day, whose artistic success is a matter of record as is also the fact that he left a considerable fortune, all of which was acquired as an actor.

"Then there was Edwin Booth, whom I knew quite well. He and Lawrence Barrett were famously successful both separately and together. In fact the tour that Booth and Barrett made as costars was one of the most successful, both artistically and financially, ever made by actors.

"The most famous in American theatrical history, with but few exceptions, have been associated with Shakespeare and without a single lasting failure that I recall. During Forrest's time the classics had a comparatively small public but with the entrance into the field he quickly became an idol and Shakespeare a success. It was during this period that plays such as comprised his repertoire commanded a considerable following for the first time in this country.

"Thinking of these things is to realize the advance of the stage in the esteem of discriminating people and to feel grateful that we do not live in 'the palmy days'—those hard times that were referred to by John Brougham as the 'days of light houses and heavy gas bills.' Contemporaneous with and following Booth were such famous players as Macready, Mary Anderson, Charlotte Cushman, McCullough and many others, all of whom were highly successful exponents of Shakespeare's works.

"In view of the foregoing, and aside from the experience of Miss Hamper and myself, it would seem that Shakespeare and misfortune are frequently not associated."

G. W. PLAYERS AT WARDMAN

The Dramatic Association of George Washington University will present their production of "2x2-5" all next week, beginning Monday evening, April 23, at the Wardman Park Theater.

The play has been the most ambitious one ever attempted by the G. W. Players, and in a way has been experimental. "2x2-5" has only been performed in this country once before, during the current season by the Civic Repertory Co., of New York City.

The interpretation given the satire will be original and modernized, but withal in keeping with the spirit of Gustav Wied, the author, whose personality prevails through the work.

Comedy Expressions.

Ed Jordan, who heads the cast of "The Tempters" this week at the Gayety Theater, is said to be one of the most versatile actors upon the burlesque stage. But, as he says, we live in an age of specialization in every thing—law, surgery, medicine, art, mechanics and what not. Therefore, he asserts, he can not afford to be different from the other prominent men in their professions. So he has selected "dope" and "cork" comedy expressions as an addition to his already established methods of compelling laughter.

FIRST MAN TO BREAK THE BARRIER

When the romance of the golden successes won by Americans in grand opera is put into the form of written history the name of Paul Althouse, outstanding American operatic tenor, will loom large as the American tenor who broke down the anti-American prejudice and won his way to the heights.

It was the sheer beauty of the young American tenor's voice which swept aside precedent and won him a place in the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York, an organization which had until then kept its doors barred tightly against American artists. He was the first American tenor to win a place among the foreign artists whose names comprised the roster of the New York Opera Company.

For ten years the American tenor sang with that company until the increasing demand of other cities to hear American artists in grand opera and concert brought the demands for his appearances elsewhere to the point that he refused reengagement at the Metropolitan. Subsequently Mr. Althouse has sung with extraordinary success throughout the length and breadth of the Nation, having crossed and recrossed the Continent several times and twice journeyed around the world on concert tours, carrying the message of the beauty of American voices to the rest of the world.

His appearance in concert here in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom at 4:30 o'clock on Monday afternoon, April 23, will be his first appearance in concert in the National Capital, although he is one of the greatest box-office attractions in grand opera here. Unusual interest is given the concert, because of the appearance on the same program of Rosa Low, American soprano, who has sung in joint recital throughout the country with many of the most famous singers of the world. She last appeared here as Musetta in "La Boheme" last season. The concert is open to the public and is in charge of a committee of prominent women, tickets being obtainable from the Mayflower Social Bureau in the hotel.

"Escape" Coming Here.

John Galsworthy's latest play "Escape," following its season in London and its five months' engagement in New York City, will be presented by Winthrop Ames, with Leslie Howard in the chief role, in the Belasco Theater for one week, beginning on Monday night, May 7, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Leslie Howard has been chiefly associated with light comedy roles. In "Escape" he has won distinction in a serious character. He is well remembered for his appearance with Katharine Cornell in "The Green Hat" and with Jeanne Eagles in "Her Cardboard Lover." Frieda Inescort, the leading woman in "Escape," was in the all-star cast of "Trelawney of 'The Wells.'"

Beauty and Talent.

The sixteen Albertina Rasch dancers appearing in "Rio Rita" at the National Theater were selected by Mr. Ziegfeld personally on a basis of their beauty as well as talent.

During the summer months "Rio Rita" will be running in Boston, London, Paris and Berlin.

ELABORATE SETS USED IN PICTURE

Many gorgeous sets were used in the Tiffany-Stahl production, "Streets of Shanghai," a stirring and dramatic picture depicting the colorful and mysterious life of the mystery city of the Orient.

The producers of this picture, which features Pauline Starke, erected for this production a typical street of the City of Shanghai at an enormous expense and after all the scenes were taken it was burned to the ground for the great scene in which several Americans are attacked by a band of bandits.

Another elaborate set called "the house of the cage," situated on the Yellow road of Shanghai, was erected at a great expense. Here a gambling den was installed and many hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of tapestries, furniture and jades were used to give the desired atmosphere. Two gorgeous rugs, worth more than $25,000 each, covered the floor of the gambling chamber. It is said that if all the objects of art and decorations were bought it would have amounted to more than $250,000.

Most of the Chinatown of Los Angeles was combed by the director, Louis J. Gasnier, for types and the Chinese quarters of that city were deserted the day the big scenes were taken at the Tiffany-Stahl studio. During the lunch hour the Orientals made the scene more realistic by eating their meals with chopsticks.

"Streets of Shanghai" will be the feature picture attraction coming to Keith's Theater commencing tomorrow. In the cast are Pauline Stark, the featured lead with Kenneth Harlan, Eddie Gribbon, Margaret Livingston, Jason Robards, Mathilde Comont, Sojin and Anna May Wong playing the leading characterizations.

Has Beautiful Home.

Beautifully situated on the lower New York Bay and directly across from Sandy Hook is the Atlantic Highlands, where is located Brucewood, the home of the Mantells—Robert B. and his wife, the latter best known to the public as Genevieve Hamper—who, as costars, will appear in Shakespearean repertoire at the Belasco Theater this week.

The main residence at Brucewood sets in the center of an immense tract of land covered with lawns and shade trees and flower beds, and there is also an orchard, all of which is surrounded by a high wall with massive gates at several points.

The house and grounds are planned on the lines of an estate as "I remembered having seen it in my native town of Ayrshire, Scotland," explains Mr. Mantell. "This is the ideal place where the several months of each year, during which we do not travel, are spent.

"We have traveled extensively in this country and Canada and we are of the belief that there are no spots more beautiful. However, the main thing is that we are happy in our surroundings where we have everything that contributes to making life worth living."

"RIO RITA" HELD OVER THIS WEEK

Ziegfeld's master production, "Rio Rita," begins its second and final week in the National Theater tonight. This engagement gives promise of smashing all local records in so far as box-office receipts are concerned. "Rio Rita" is a colorful and appealing romance of the Rio Grande border. It combines the rich adornments of two republics, Mexican and our own. The beauty of their women, the seductiveness of their dancers, the thrill of dramatic episodes, the buoyant humors of the present period. The splendors of ball and fiesta, and the memory-haunting appeal of love songs that know no country. The title role melody that pervades it has sounded around the world. Incidentally, but importantly, "Rio Rita" took across its New York box-office windows nearly $3,000,000 and had cost over $250,000 before its first curtain rose. Its operating expenses are tremendous. Its original cast stands intact and includes: Ethelind Terry, J. Harold Murray, Bert Wheeler, Walter Catlett, Helen Clive, Helen Brown, Noel Francis, also Ada-May and sixteen Albertina Rasch dancers, Al P. James, Pedro Rubin, Walter Petrie, Collette, Juan Villansana, Peggy Blake, Kate English, Harry Ratcliffe, Donald Douglas, Al Clair, Alberto Carrillo and 100 glorified American beauties.

ORCHESTRA HEADLINER AT KEITH'S

Coming direct from a world tour, Henry Santrey and his International Orchestra with Harry and Anna Seymour will top the stage attractions at B. F. Keith's Theater for the current week. The new bill opens tomorrow at 1 o'clock with an organ prelude by Miss Irene Juno.

"The Streets of Shanghai" is the screen feature for the week. It is a Tiffany-Stahl production filled with mystery, adventure and romance. The cast includes Pauline Starke, Kenneth Harlan and Margaret Livingston. Anna May Wong plays the part Su Quan. A company of United States Marines were utilized in the making of many of the scenes.

Besser and Belfour take some everyday incidents and fashion them in a somedy skit which they call "Cigars vs. Cigarettes." The act was written for them by Claud Bostock, and it is said to be the best of their numerous vehicles.

The versatile Australian artist, Estelle Fratus, will present "Cameos in Her Own Theater."

Breen, La Bard and Barry will open the show with the clever dance routine called "Watch Your Step."

Additional screen features will include Aesop's Fables, Topics of the Day and the Pathe News Pictorial. The stage attractions will be preceded by an orchestra overture under the direction of C. Frederick Clark, and the show will be closed with an organ postlude.

A Photoplay, "Simba," At Poli's April 22

The "king of beasts," the mighty lion, plays the title role in "Simba," Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson's pictoral record of their daring and thrilling safari into British East Africa, which opens at Poli's next Sunday evening April 22.

For four long years, Martin Johnson and his young wife, Osa, braved the African jungles, swarming with the wild beasts and equally wild cannibals, in order to bring back to the peaceful citizens of their own United States a true picture of this vast and unknown territory. Starting from Mombassa in British East Africa, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, with hundreds of natives, sturdy little mules, camels and motor cars, trekked over the African desert and veldt on their caravan of adventure, finally establishing their headquarters in a beautiful, tropical spot, Lake Paradise. From here they travelled 1,000 miles on the edge of Abyssinia in search of the lion.

With Martin behind the camera and Osa behind the gun, the thrills began. Every imaginable kind of wild animal is pictured at the desert water holes; zebras, ostriches, antelopes, the oryx, the leaping impalla and the ungainly giraffe.

The piece de resistance is reserved for the last half of the film. It is then that the spectator is shown the private life of "Simba," which is native for lion.

Orphanage Band.

The band which appears in the third and fourth scenes of "Porgy," which will begin its engagement at the National Theater for one week beginning April 23, has been brought to Washington for this production. It is the original band of the Jenkins Orphanage in Charleston, S. C., and is a part of the aggregation described in the large parade of the novel, "Porgy," from which the play was written by Dorothy and DuBose Heyward.

W. HAMPDEN REPERTORY HERE SOON

The most potentia offering of the season, dominated by "the greatest living American actor" and "embellished with a wealth of sumptuous pictorial perfection" will be the attraction at the Belasco Theater, for the week commencing Monday evening, the 30th, according to Wallace Munro, when Walter Hampden will appear in three of his acknowledged most conspicuous successes, "Caponsacchi," "An Enemy of the People" and "Hamlet."

To all lovers of Shakespeare, Ibsen and Browning, devotees to the master efforts of the world's greatest dramatic writers, as well as those who admire accurate portraiture of classic creation, these presentations will have an especial appeal, coming as they do direct from Mr. Hampden's own theater, New York City replete with the same casts, scenic embellishment accessories, auxiliaries, &c., that characterized their presentation during their record-breaking runs on Manhattan.

Pages have been written in eulogy of the masterful manner in which Mr. Hampden has visualized the indomitable Caponsacchi, the conscientious Dr. Stockmann in "An Enemy of the People," and his scholarly "Hamlet;" the sumptuous pictorial embroidery with which he has invested each production, and the excellent care and judgment he has exercised in selecting the various members of the casts intrusted to give life and vitality to each play; therefore, any formal comment upon the excellence of the presentations and the consummate artistry of Mr. Hampden, seems superfluous; suffice to add that nearly all of the admirable players who aided Mr. Hampden during his memorable engagement of "Cyrano de Bergerac" remain conspicuously prominent in his organization, including Mabel Moore, Edith Barrett, Marie Adels, William Sauter, Ernest Rowan, Cecil Yapp, Edwin Cushman, Stanley Howlett, W. H. Sams, Reynolds Evans, Murray Darcy.

STRUGGLED WITH NAME

There may be much or little in a name to answer the old question. One of the little surprises of life is that a girl called Jane usually turns out to be a slim, dazzling enchantress with Pola Negri eyes, while the baby who was christened Melisande by her doting parents grows into a woman who wears tortoise-shell glasses and long skirts. But what is a girl to do when she is yclept "Melba?"

Melba Alter, who is one of the group of lovely specialty singers in Ziegfeld's "Rio Rita," at the National Theater could no more help becoming a singer than she could help being born in Wichita, Kans., eighteen years ago. Persons who heard her name took it for granted that she would one day become a prima donna. In school, where other children were forced to struggle with geography and fractions, Melba was encouraged to try her voice, and at entertainments she was always called on to sing.

Oddly enough it was discovered that she really had a voice, a luscious velvety mezzo-soprano, with unexpected depth and richness for one so young. While still in high school, she competed in the Kansas State singing contest, the Mid-West contest and the Southwestern contest and was awarded first prize in all three. It was about this time, naturally, that she decided to make singing her career.

Of the Old School.

Vincent Serrano, who is appearing in "Rio Rita" at the National Theater, is a legitimate actor of the old school. It required several weeks of hard labor on the part of Mr. Ziegfeld to induce Mr. Serrano to pass up the drama for musical comedy.

MRS. HIBBARD COMING BACK

Boston has been heard from in connection with the National Theater Players' summer campaign to push dull care across the plank into the Potomac.

Adelaide Hibbard, or Addie, as even the newspaper men call her, has wired confirmation of her rumored intention to return with the National group. After a season in New England stock Mrs. Hibbard is spending the present month in pleasant dalliances at the family manor in Boston, where are gathered her son and two daughters. She will reach Washington the 20th for rehearsals prior to the season's opening April 30.

It probably is not necessary to remind Washington that Mrs. Hibbard is one of those patrician folk who has, however, the stigmata of the true democrat. Entitled by birth and heritage to patronize the Dowager Club of Bridge Players and Tea Drinkers, Mrs. Hibbard elects to forget that her husband was one of Boston's most memorable mayors and goes about the business each year of doing the thing she has wanted to do since a girl. That is acting.

Before joining the National Players three years ago Mrs. Hibbard was known to Washington as the suffering mother in the New York hit "The Potters."

Front and Back Stage News and Views

Echoes of the New York Stage

By ROBERT BELL

SOME time in May, 1920, a musical comedy was revived in London which created a sensation; the news of which even reached these distant shores. It was none other than "The Beggar's Opera," by John Gay, which has the distinction of being the first musical comedy in the English language. This winter it is making a bicentennial anniversary tour of America and at present resides in the Forty-eighth Street Theater where it may be seen by all those interested in the novelty of witnessing the efforts of a bygone age.

The play with its naive and simple plot and its pleasant eighteenth century tunes which appear at unexpected and frequent intervals is refreshing; and it is interesting to note how the "asides," expressions of thought conveyed through words to the audience have, changed though they be, are still used in one form or another by practically every music-hall comedian today. One smiles at these "asides" because one is not used to them but we accept the "asides" of a comedian like Ed Wynn without surprise.

A program note tells us that the present cast of "The Beggar's Opera" is mainly the original one that appeared when this opera was revived eight years ago in England; but even if this is true the case seemed to me, with the exception of a single player, to be pretty weak. The player who deserves praise is Lena Maitland, who as the comic, Mrs. Peachum, created to the life a veritable Hogarth portrait. Her comedy was broad but fundamentally true with a hundred and one little touches of "business" which gave new life to every scene she was in and which proved how much more delightful the play would have been had the other players possessed her inventive genius.

We are apt to overpraise a venture which consciously declares itself to have been done for the sake of art and to restrict our enomiums on productions which admit themselves commercial. So being in a somewhat cranky mood this morning it rather pleases me to say that I found more real art in George White's elaborate and bespangled production of "Manhattan Mary" than I did in the rather cheaply costumed production of "The Beggar's Opera!" Of course, "Manhattan Mary" has the advantage of Ed Wynn, artist of the first water, but besides that George White has staged his show with a good deal of taste and has succeeded in giving so much variety that it moves along with hardly a moment's lag. The producer did not leave it to Ed Wynn to put his show over as I felt the producer of "The Beggar's Opera" had depended largely on the charm of the naivety of the book and the delight of the tunes for the success of his show, but has supported his star by a bevy of pretty girls, by Lou Holtz, who could rank as first comedian in almost any show that didn't boast "The Perfect Fool," and by the lovely Ona Munson who, a sort of combination Marilyn Miller and Queenie Smith, delights the very cockles of one's heart.

But naturally, though "Manhattan Mary" is a grand show, it is the frolics of Ed Wynn which are its chief attraction. Wynn's humor is particularly hard to describe, for he has a way with him of making things excruciatingly funny which in cold print might hardly bring a smile. For instance, a grapefruit being eaten by a customer in Mother Brennan's lunchroom misbehaves, and Wynn, dressed as waiter, rushes in with a glass windshield attached with an automatic wiper which is deposited over said customer's head. When another customer explains that he is hungry enough to eat a horse, in the wink of an eye Wynn is there leading in one of the hugest white horses you ever saw. He is made leader of a gang of roughnecks whose job is to kidnap a lovely actress from her dressing room in the theater. Wynn tells the gang of roughnecks whose job is to goes alone to perform the hazardous feat. Then he gets a better idea, which is none other than that they go and risk their lives and he remain. Another time he enters with a hatchet, a gun and a piece of rope. He explains what the hatchet is for and what the gun is for. When he is asked about the rope he says that he doesn't know—he either picked it up somewhere or lost the horse.

Wynn's character, which he has kept since the days when he used to appear at Keith's with the big hat, is that of a surprised dandy thrown in an environment too rough for him. He makes himself at home wherever he is and never seems to understand why he is not accepted with open arms. Along with the humor is always an underlying touch of pathos in these struggles of this comic character possessed with inner refinement. So it is not necessary to howl with laughter at every antic that he makes to enjoy the thoroughness of his characterization. His fooling is absolutely tireless but expressed with such ease that it is never tiring. Like every great comedian he knows when to build his laughs, when a smile from the audience is of more value than a loud guffaw. His humor is of the emotions rather than of the intellect, so it is universal, is for the kids as well as adults, could almost be appreciated, I would say, by one unfamiliar with the English language.

Carefully analyzed, humor has not changed very much since the days of "The Beggar's Opera"—wit changes, wit usually needs to satirize contemporary conditions, is of the mind; but humor, such as the humor of Lena Maitland and Ed Wynn, needs only the sympathetic response of the human heart.

Coming Attractions

"Simba," the amazing film record of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson's adventures in the African veldt, will come to Poli's, beginning Sunday evening, April 22. The picture was made in British East Africa under the sponsorship of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, and will be presented here with the indorsement of the Field Museum of Natural History.

After four years among the savages of the dark African veldt, the Martin Johnsons have brought home a thrilling film report of their adventures and observations. The picture is said to be a fascinating spectacle, especially to those who have a longing, however suppressed, for vivid adventuring. It gives one a chance to savour the thrills of big-game hunting while comfortably seated in a theater chair. The excitement and fun accompanies a great amount of interesting information about a faraway land.

Walter Hampden and his company of players come to the Belasco Theater for the week commencing the 30th. The plays to be presented are three of his most emphatic successes: "Caponsacchi," "An Enemy of the People" and "Hamlet". "Caponsacchi" will be presented for the first portion of the week with "An Enemy of the People" occupying the balance of the week with the single exception of Saturday matinee when "Hamlet" will be the offering.

Mr. Hampden is bringing to Washington his entire organization intact from his own theater, New York City; an assurance that indicates presentations that are nearly perfection in the art of reflected realism, as human energy can essay.

The New York Theater Guild's production "Porgy," the first Theater Guild's play under Theater Guild management, will come to the National Theater on Monday night, April 23, for an engagement limited to one week.

"Porgy" is an American photoplay by Dorothy and DuBose Heyward. It comes to Washington direct from a seven month's engagement at the Guild and Republic theaters in New York.

Mr. Al Shean and Miss Lynn Canter will headline the stage bill at B. F. Keith's Theater for the week of April 23. Mr. Shean is of the famous team of Gallagher and Shean and Miss Canter is prima donna of the Greenwich Village Follies. They will be seen in a new act entitled, "Business Is Business," by William K. Wells.

"Night Life in Paris" is the alluring title of next week's United Burlesque attraction at the Gayety Theater. The entire production is brand new in every particular and boasts an excellent cast of talented entertainers. The show is built along "French lines" with the Parisian atmosphere; featuring feminine pulchritude and loveliness.

CLAUDIA SUTTON, who will appear with the G. W. U. Players in "2 by 2 equals 5" at Wardman Park Theater, week of April 23.

Talent at Swanee.

At Swanee, the big Meyer Davis dance resort under the Earle Theater, every member of the Swanee Syncopators is a specialist in his own very individual way. Leading the parade of talent is the "Three Als Trio." Director Al Kamons heads the trio, with Al Sokol, saxophonist, and Al Norton, banjoist, as his collaborators.

Other striking members of the Swanee Syncopators include Charlie O'Donnell and King House. Still another Swanee star is Drummen Nat Abrams, the athlete of the tympani.

Behind the Swanee jazz picture, and quite the finest star of all, though, is Tex Brewster, nominally a marvelous trumpeter, but also the accomplished musician who works out the special Swanee dance music orchestrations.

All-Colored Cast.

"Meek Moses," by Frank Wilson, who plays the title role in "Porgy," coming to the National Theater for a week's engagement beginning April 23, is a play dealing with negro life, which has an all-colored cast. Wilson also is the author of "Sugar Cane," which never was produced, despite announcement to that effect.

Kurt Hetzel Recital.

The one and only concert appearance in Washington this season of Kurt Hetzel is announced for Friday afternoon, May 4, when the conductor-pianist will appear at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mr. Hetzel's program, details of which will be announced later, will include Liszt and Wagnerian compositions.

FILM MUSIC INSPIRES A MOVIE-STEP

Raymonde and Diane, well-known ballroom exhibition artists, who are currently dancing at the Lido Venice in Boston, have created the Schubert Movie-Step, a new popular type of dance routine that derives its inspiration from the music score of James A. Fitzpatrick's Schubert Centennial pictures.

Miss Diane, who created the Val-Step, the ballroom version of the Valencia, which was the rage last season, and Mr. Raymonde devised the Schubert Movie-Step to the exhilirating strains of Franz Schubert's Rosamunde ballet music. Plans to bring this number before the various organizations of dancing teachers have been completed, particularly the fiftieth annual convention of the American Society of Teachers of Dancing to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York in August.

Raymonde and Diane, in their special appearances in hotel ballrooms, night clubs and vaudeville, offer sensational waltz, tangoes and specialties. The Schubert Movie-Step is being featured as their encore number and several renditions are being demanded every evening.

Gentleman's part is described—counterpart for lady.

Started as Singer In Old Nickelodeons

J. Harold Murray, tenor and hero of Ziegfeld's "Rio Rita" at the National Theater, has had an interesting career. He tells about it in his own way.

"I began my musical career in singing illustrated songs in the motion picture houses of Boston. This was better than being office boy to shipping clerk, and salesman in a wholesale paper house. I also sang in church choirs, of almost every denomination. Then I found an opening with Leo Feist's music publishing house.

"In 1919 I was given my first musical comedy chance by that grand old producer, the late Oscar Hammerstein, and satisfied him well enough to secure a second engagement. Within the past eight years I have sung in the "Passing Show," "The Whirl of New York," "The China Rose," "Captain Jinks" and "Castles in the Air," recently retiring from the latter to create my present role.

"Nearly all my experience has been on Broadway and tours in a few large cities, never taking me west of the Missouri River or farther South than New Orleans. I long to visit California and the far Northwest."

In Own Play.

Ada-May, the dancing comedienne in "Rio Rita" at the National Theater, last appeared in Washington as the star of one of the late Henry W. Savage's musical plays.

MRS. MARTIN JOHNSON, in "Simba," the African hunt picture at Poli's Theater starting Sunday, April 22.

PEDRO RUBIN, Mexico's foremost dancer, to join forces with "Rio Rita," has been awarded by the Mexican government the title of Mexico's foremost dancer.

To Repeat Play.

The Wilson Players will repeat Henry Arthur Jones' three-act play, "Dolly Reforming Herself," at the parish hall, Epiphany, on April 20, at 8:20 p. m., under the auspices of the woman's auxiliary (night branch) and for the benefit of the convention fund.

It is a comedy of manners, and was first produced in England in 1912. The plot is woven around the penchant for making good resolutions at the first of the year and then failing to keep them.

The members of the cast are Aurora Poston, Edith Dresden, Elizabeth Dowden, H. R. Baukhage, V. E. Stack, George T. Odell, C. N. McCulloch, Harvey S. Cobb and Harry Westcott. The play is directed by Aurora M. Poston.

Came Near Record.

"Porgy," which will come to the National Theater for one week's engagement beginning April 23, direct from its long New York run at the Republic Theater, played daily matinees there one week and came within a few hundred dollars of breaking the record figure achieved by "Abie's Irish Rose," when that historic comedy played daily matinees in the same playhouse.

Writing His Own.

Walter Catlett, one of the comedians in "Rio Rita" at the National Theater, is writing a farce comedy, in which he may appear next season.

GLIMPSES IN THE CAMERA "FINDER"

WHY SCREEN COMICS TURN GRAY EARLY

You can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink—and you can respectfully request people to step out of the range of the camera, but you can not hope to compel them leave their own backyards.

That is a condition which confronted Harry Langdon and his company during the filming of a sequence for his current First National production, an untitled comedy.

Working in and around the framework of a two-story building in the residential section in Hollywood, the cameraman noticed that a man standing in his own backyard was also in the range of the camera.

While there were no visitors allowed, it was found necessary to invite the owner of the property adjoining the set right over alongside the cameras, to get him out of the picture.

During the filming of one scene on the roof of the building, Langdon tears his trousers. The scene was finished and one of the neighbors, a dressmaker, immediately volunteered to mend the rip—but the whimsical funster thanked her and made it known that the tear "had been established" and therefore must remain "torn" throughout the picture.

When the cameras were shooting from the interior of the framework to the street opposite, there were times when automobiles and pedestrians were necessary to the action—and just when several cars were needed, there was none going in either direction, but when no action was desired either for pedestrians or cars, they flocked around the camera lane in droves.

Alma Bennett is featured in the leading feminine role and Bud Jaimison and Florence Turner have important parts.

Dick's Disguise.

While he hasn't succeeded in deceiving the well known studio gateman as yet, Richard Barthelmess has fooled some of his friends with his make-up for one of two brothers he portrays in "Roulette." As the red-headed twin with a scarred face he is almost unrecognizable.

Green Writer.

Howard J. Green, First National contract writer, wrote the screen adaptation of Harry Leon Wilson's famous story, "The Boss of Little Arcady," in which Charlie Murray is being featured.

Once an Actor.

Carmel for Lead.

Carmel Myers has been signed by Tiffany-Stahl to play the feminine lead opposite Ricardo Cortez in "Prowlers of the Sea," suggested by a Jack London story.

THE "TALKING MOVIE" NOW AMONG REGULAR RELEASES

WARNER BROS.' epoch-making use of spoken lines with motion pictures which, it is predicted by many experts, will entirely revolutionize the film making of the future, can now be heard by the picture-going public everywhere. This is the result of an announcement from Sam E. Morris, general manager of distribution, to the effect that three big productions with Vitaphoned dialogue are available for immediate release throughout the country. They are "Tenderloin," "The Lion and the Mouse" and "Glorious Betsy."

"Tenderloin," the first of this trio, had its world premiere recently at the Warner Theater in New York and has been unanimously declared by the metropolitan critics to be the year's most significant picture event, forecasting, as it does, an entirely new form of expression for screen drama. Dolores Costello is its star supported by Conrad Nagel, Mitchell Lewis, Dan Wolheim and Georgie Stone. It is based on Melville Crosman's story, adapted by E. T. Lowe, jr., and directed by Michael Curtiz.

Vitaphone is used with other new and untried effects in "The Lion and the Mouse," which Warners also have ready for screening. May McAvoy and Lionel Barrymore appear in its stellar roles, supported by Alec Francis, William Collier, jr., and Jack Ackroyd. The screen version of Charles Klein's world-famous stage hit has been sound-filmed under the direction of Lloyd Bacon, its scenario credit going to Robert Lord.

Dolores Costello in "Glorious Betsy" brings the Vitaphone into active play through sequences in which both conversation and songs figure. This production is an elaborate costume play of the days of Napoleon. It has been directed by Alan Crosland from Rida Johnson Young's play adapted by Anthony Coldeway. Important roles in support of Miss Costello are filled by Conrad Nagel, John Miljan, Andre Desegurola, Marc MeDermott, Clarissa Selwynne, Pasquel Amato and Michael Vavitch.

Flashbacks and Fadeouts

Robert Lee, assistant director of Paramount's film version of Anne Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose," has been assigned to assist Josef von Sternberg in the direction of "The Dragnet," George Bancroft's next picture.

Loretta Young, who plays the daughter of Florence Vidor in "The Magnificent Flirt," weighs only 97 pounds and is slightly more than 5 feet tall. She is called "Miss Mite" around the studios. In real life she is a sister of Sally Blane.

Chinese furnishings of lacquer and ebony, gorgeous Oriental hangings and other novel features, are being used in Milton Sills' starring picture, "The Hawk's Nest," a story of the underworld of a great city.

Some handsome and spirited race horses are in evidence at First National Studios for use in "The Whip," which is now in production for the second time in a decade, with Dorothy Mackaill featured.

Eleanor Boardman, who plays the underworld heroine in "Diamond Handcuffs," says her costumers in this role are more elaborate than in several preceding roles in which she has played. Proving that ladies in gangsters circles today know how to dress.

Arthur Lubin, Russell Simpson, Richard Neil and Rose Marie Cooper.

BIG PLANE ENDS LONG LEAP WEST

The largest airplane ever flown across the country has arrived in Hollywood to participate in the spectacular air war film, "Hell's Angels."

The plane, a German Gotha, was piloted from New York to the coast by Capt. Roscoe Turner, famous World War aviator of Richmond, Va., with his wife acting as navigator, charting the course and keeping the log.

A squadron of "Hell's Angels" war planes, including several German Fokkers, escorted the huge ship on the final lap of its cross-country flight. The aerial escort was headed by Howard Hughes, producer-director of the picture, who piloted his private plane, a Waco, with Wright whirlwind motor.

Thousands of spectators and scores of movie celebrities greeted the transcontinental flyers when they landed the big bomber at Caddo Field, near Hollywood.

Following the arrival of the Gotha, a number of nationally famous stunt-flyers performed breath-taking feats for the crowds, giving a sample of the stunts and thrills they will perform as "Angels."

The celebration which attended the arrival of the Gotha was the biggest of its kind in the history of the motion picture industry.

The big ship will be seen on the screen in the bombing episodes of the screen story. The plane is one of the largest in America. It is propelled by two 420-horsepower motors, and will carry in addition to the crew, 5 tons of bombs, or the equivalent of 50 passengers.

An Impending Sanhedrim And Shadow Entertainment

By NELSON B. BELL

WITHIN a fortnight Washington is to be privileged to avail itself of a close-up of at least one important aspect of the diversified business of purveying motion picture entertainment to the masses of this and other countries and, by the same token, a considerable group of executives high in the councils of those burdened with the responsibility of this vast undertaking will be afforded an excellent opportunity—some for the first time—to become at least a little acquainted with the manifold advantages of life, art and manners in the National Capital at a season of the year when the city is at its most beautiful.

The annual Eastern sales convention of the Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation is to be held at the Carlton Hotel on April 30, May 1, 2 and 3. It will be attended by the Paramount sales forces representing that portion of the United States east of the Allegheny Mountains and by delegates representing the entire foreign organization of the Paramount company—European, Central and South American, Far Eastern, &c.

Simultaneously with the Washington convention, similar conclaves will be held in Detroit, Mich., and San Francisco, Calif., covering the Middle West and far Western areas of the United States, respectively. It is confidently expected, however, that the Washington convention will prove the most important of the three. It is inevitable that it should be so. The mere fact of the foreign representation's participation in the business of the various daily sessions of the Carlton sanhedrim and the presence in the Capital of the accredited ambassadors of practically all of the countries concerned in the functioning of Paramount's enterprises outside the United States will lead to contacts that can not be achieved elsewhere.

These greetings are conveyed to me by Mr. Charles E. McCarthy, an emissary from the home office of Famous-Lasky in New York, who on the Wednesday afternoon of the evening this is written boarded the "Red Arrow" to hasten similar tidings personally to expectant ears in Detroit.

* * * *

ON various earlier occasions during a decade of close affiliation with the pursuits of a picture publicist I have attended film conventions of various sorts and have found them distinctly apart from those orderly and well-planned procedures associated in the lay mind with the conduct of affairs of magnitude. I am informed by Mr. McCarthy that the Paramount Famous-Lasky annual gatherings are not subject to these distressing deviations, but adhere rigidly to the accepted formulae for rapid and efficient dispatch of vital business.

Those hectic assemblages to which in the past I have lent my fragile presence have consisted for the most part of a concerted effort on the part of a majority of the delegates to seek a slightly different justification for the adoption of the imperishable French cry of la guerre, "They shall not pass!" For the purposes to which I refer the interested gentlemen resorted to strange invocations of such figures of real or imagined potency as "Phoebe," "Little Joe," "Big Dick" and other nebulous, though much addressed, guardians of their exchequer and well being and employed as the symbols of their supplication small cubes of ivory strangely marked with ebony dots of varying denominations.

As I have said, the Paramount Famous-Lasky assemblies are declared not to be at all like that. Contrary to all precedent and rules of practice in the prodigious game of making and marketing film plays, the sessions fostered by this gigantic organization as a means of apprising its representatives around the globe of the product they will be expected to barter at a profit to those retailing screen entertainment to the wary cash customer are called to order promptly at 9:30 every morning. The roll is called and all those expected to be present are present or are faced with the alternative of supplying an airtight and bulletproof reason for being absent when next encountered.

The sessions are closed to the public and to all others not ordered to attend by Messrs. Zukor and Lasky or their designated aides. At noon there is a recess of an hour and a half and sessions thereafter continue from 2 to 5 p. m., and are reconvened in the evening if necessary. Four days' work is planned to occupy the four days allotted the convention and four days work is done.

* * * *

THERE are, however, the planned diversions as well as the strict enforcement of the proved principles of successful merchandising. Usually, and it will be true in the present case, the convention is concluded by a banquet to which those in high social, professional and official places are invited. I am buoyed to a high pitch of expectancy by Mr. McCarthy's assurance that the press is to be included in the guest list of the festive evening planned for the Carlton. But there is probably a catch in it somewhere!

Certainly, for either the uses of close observance of the precepts of big business or the more pliant pleasures of restful relaxation, a more perfect convention city than Washington could not have been selected by the chiefs of the Paramount hosts. It is safe to say that many salutary effects will accrue to the salesmanship of these sizeable forces by reason of their having acquired comprehensive insight into the purposes and the product of their company amid the inspiriting environs of the city wherein daily dramas more fascinating than any ever recorded in celluloid are unceasingly being enacted.

The thundering distractions of Times square will not roar through the open windows of springtime on Sixteenth street. A robin may possibly perch inquisitively upon the window ledge for a brief instant, but that should not prove an annoying interruption even if so vibrant a topic as Clara Bow happens to be the subject of the lecture on values being delivered at the moment!

If the sooty grime and low hanging clouds of bituminous smoke are lacking along the Avenue of the Presidents, possibly for the brief period of the convention, the fragrance of hyacinths and the blooms of flowering trees can be "sold" the salesmen as a not intolerable substitute.

Rather a nice little town we have here, come May.

* * * *

THERE is one point which I trust will remain clear in the minds of those attending this and all other concerts of ideas of a parallel nature. It is to be hoped that these able gentlemen will not lose sight of the fact that basically what it is they have to sell is entertainment. Not a group of names; not a particular quality of photography; not a specialized type of incandescent lighting; not "camera angles" and weird effects, but a happy coalition of these essential elements in a composite that may reasonably be looked to to afford stimulating mental refreshment. Not too stimulating, you understand, but at least up to the full legal limit of one-half of 1 per cent!

It has often seemed to me that the producers of our silent drama do not always utilize all of their resources in such a way as to realize their highest possible value. This is especially true in the matter of acting personnel.

The producers, of course, are aware of problems in their trade which are unknown to me, but I still feel that there are a very great many among the screen players whose work has seemed to justify a more generous measure of recognition than they have received from the casting directors. For instance, I can not recall ever having seen SaZu Pitts or Jean Hersholt contribute a faulty bit of characterization to any picture in which they have appeared, nor can I remember ever having seen Clara Bow perform any feat before the camera which I have deemed in any way noteworthy—unless disrobing falls among the arts. Yet Miss Bow is ballyhooed blatantly and far in a manner high, wide and handsome and Miss Pitts is, perforce, content with bits and Mr. Hersholt only now is attaining the point of featured—not stellar—prominence.

Jetta Goudal seems doomed to roles of unbelievable melodramatics, although it is conceivable that she can interpret other emotions than those of a tragic martyr. Betty Bronson, Lya Di Putti, Greta Nissen and scores more seem to be relegated to trifles of scant importance for no better reason than that they are possibly less easy to cast effectively than their associates in the studios who ride at least to temporary heights in rattle-trap vehicles of rickety workmanship which might be described by the paraphrase, "not an idea in a carload."

These references, it should be understood, relate no more to the company that plans to favor us with its convention than to all the others engaged in the same productional activities. The observations following the last short line of asterisks above are purely in the nature of an aside and need not occasion anyone concern for a very simple reason.

They end here.

A DECREPIT THEME WITH PEPPY CAST

St. Patrick's Day saw the starting of "Heart to Heart," Colleen Moore's forthcoming production for First National.

"Heart to Heart" is an adaptation by Benjamin Glazer of Edmund Goulding's original story, and is being directed by William A. Seiter, who comes to Miss Moore's picture after three years of directing Laura La Plante and Reginald Denny.

John McCormick, who is producing the picture, has gathered together a fine supporting cast. Edmund Lowe, hero of "What Price Glory" and other important productions, plays the chief supporting sole. Lilyan Tashman (Mrs. Lowe), whose latest pictures include "French Dressing," "The Stolen Bride" and "The Prince of Head-Waiters," will portray the role of a girl of Broadway's night life, while others chosen are Charles Sellon and Edythe Chapman, who play the parents of Miss Moore, and Dione Ellis, her schoolgirl chum in the production.

The role played by the star is that of a small-town girl, whose faith in the man she loves remains steadfast in spite of his headlong plunge on the down grade, and eventually brings about his regeneration.

BOYLAN NOW WRITES FOR HEAVY JACK

When Malcolm Stuart Boylan was signed to a new long term contract by Winfield Sheehan, vice president, to become supervising editor of Fox Films, he automatically became the highest salaried titler of films in the industry.

Boylan was in the midst of titling "The Red Dancer of Moscow," which is expected to be his greatest effort at titling, when the new contract was signed.

Despite the exacting duties of his new position this young man whose rise in the film world has been meteoric will continue to do the bulk of the titling of Fox pictures, notably the specials, for title writing is an obsession with him.

From a free lance title writer to his present enviable position might be called an herculean hurdle in the space of two years.

Boylan's titling of "What Price Glory?" was his most difficult task. Likewise it was his finest piece of work in this line.

SPRING HAS COME EARLY ON PACIFIC

First National now claims all-American honors for feminine pulchritude.

James Montgomery Flagg and Arthur William Brown, noted illustrators, whose drawings of pretty women are internationally famous, recently visited the big Burbank studios. Here they found such an array of beauty that they were almost stunned.

Such pulchritude has probably never before been equaled within a single organization.

Colleen Moore, Billie Dove, Corinne Griffith, Dorothy Mackaill, Lina Basquette, Doris Kenyon, Mollie O'Day, Thelma Todd, Alice White, Doris Dawson, Frances Hamilton, Kathryn Landy, Jane Winton, Anna Q. Nilsson, Margaret Livingston, Dione Ellis, Lilyan Tashman, Yola d'Avril and Loretta Young are among the stars, featured players and contract players now working in pictures at the Burbank studios, while scores of pretty girls are playing "bits" and extra parts there. It was Miss Landy who was recently given the appellation "the most beautiful blonde in Hollywood" by Flagg.

Such a generous supply of beauty proved a revelation even to such connoisseurs as Messrs. Flagg and Brown, to say nothing of the mere men who are paid to toil daily, entirely surrounded by such visions of loveliness.

HIGH HILLS OFFER SNOW FIELD SET

Ken Maynard, Tarzan, 50 horses, 75 riders and the principals of the cast of "Code of the Scarlet," Ken's current Western feature, are now in Crestline, Calif., high up in the hills, for location scenes.

Crestline is a few miles from Lake Arrowhead, and one of the most beautiful scenic spots in all California. It is here that the proper scenic values of the Canadian Northwest can be secured, for there is now plenty of snow at Crestline.

"Code of Scarlet" is a story of the Northwest Mounted Police. It contains fast action, daring riding and thrilling stunts that have been featured in all Ken's previous pictures.

The story is an original by Forrest Sheldon, who is also credited with the adaptation and continuity. Gladys McConnell has the leading feminine role, and Ed Brady, Sheldon Lewis, Dot Farley, J. P. McGowan and Robert Walker are in support of Maynard.

WHY IT IS SO DIFFICULT TO "CRASH" STUDIO GATES

APPROXIMATELY 2,000 sightseeing tourists are turned away from the gates of Hollywood motion-picture studios each weekday.

This figure is based upon the records kept by the gatemen at the various studios. The estimate checks with the figures for tourist traffic compiled by the Los Angeles Board of Trade.

Less than a quarter of 1 per cent who try to "crash the gate" manage to persuade the alert gatemen to let them pass.

Bribes, threats, cajolery, lodge grips and passwords are all tried—vainly. The gateman and the visitor from Iowa may be brother Elks or pally Rotarians in their off hours, but when the gateman is on the gate, he is deaf to entreaty.

Because a first-class motion-picture studio is the modern equivalent of Barnum's "Greatest Sow on Earth," every person in California, visitor or resident, not connected with studio work, would give his or her eye-teeth to get inside those mysterious high walls.

Experts have estimated that every visitor costs the studio in the neighborhood of $100. Visitors distract actors from their work, interrupt the intricate and highly complicated organization which has been built up for the making of motion pictures and occupy the attention of people who are receiving large salaries to produce pictures.

Two or three groups of visitors alone are able, quite innocently, to increase the costs of a picture by several thousand dollars. They visit a set where a director is endeavoring with patient skill to win from an actor or a cast expression of a certain feeling. Just as he has worked his people up to the right mood, strange faces are seen, peering past the lights, curious, questioning. The mood is broken, the players lose their emotional feeling for the scene. Much time has been lost. The schedule mapped for that day is not carried out.

Through bitter experience studios have learned that two or three visitors, admitted to the studio in a spirit of hospitality, can cost their hosts a good many thousand dollars before their apparently harmless tour is over.

Officials estimate that studios would be out of business in a year if they were to throw open their doors to every one desirous of invading the magic land behind the high walls.

Visitors do get into studios, of course; but the vast majority of those who try, fail. Occasionally some one comes with introductions which can not be ignored. Important persons from the East, visiting in California, are invited by studio officials to be the studio's guests. Once the gate is passed and the visitor accepted, the iron reserve melts into charming and gracious hospitality. Every effort is made to make the visitor feel at home and obtain a thorough grasp of the complicated mechanism of motion picture making. But a guide is always in charge of the party and distractions are minimized.

Californians themselves, particularly the people of Los Angeles, have never lost their curiosity concerning studios. Owing to the difficulty of obtaining admission, very few have ever been inside the walls of a studio. Once in a while they catch a glimps of a company working on location. Sometimes, above the walls of the studio "lot," they see the tops of imposing sets which further pique their curiosity. Frequently at night, when some director is making night shots, they see the sky stabbed with milky rays as the giant sun arcs illuminate a set.

Many a visitor from the East, with friends in Los Angeles, has been keenly disappointed to find that these friends have as little chance of getting inside the jealously guarded portals as the man from Iowa.

THE CRITICS WILL ALL BE REVENGEFUL

Staking his reputation as a showman and a film producer, Jesse L. Lasky, vice president of Paramount, has gone on record that Anne Nichols' personally supervised film version of her famous play, "Abie's Irish Rose," is the greatest motion picture ever made.

"The inspiration that made Miss Nichols turn her play into the greatest theatrical property the world has ever known has carried on manyfold into the screen version," Lasky states. "I make my claim for the picture after carefully weighing all the pertinent facts. I know that the public expects me to say that the picture is good. But I go farther than that. I say that, in my judgment, which is based on fifteen years of motion picture production experience, 'Abie's Irish Rose' has the greatest entertainment value, and it, through its message of universal tolerance, will do the greatest good of any motion picture made to date."

Mr. Lasky paid unstinted tribute to Miss Nichols, and also praised wholeheartedly the direction of Victor Fleming and the acting of Jean Hersholt, Nancy Carroll and Charles Rogers, the principals.

A COSTUME THAT COST A FORTUNE

A single costume costing $2,200 has been designed and made for Corinne Griffith to wear in her starring role in First National's elaborate period drama, "The Divine Lady," a Frank Lloyd production on which preparatory arrangements are now being completed.

The story is taken from E. Barrington's popular novel of the same name dealing with the immortal love of Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson. Miss Griffith will enact the former role, supported by Victor Varconi as Lord Nelson. The period of the story is the latter part of the eighteenth century and the action takes place at various British seaport embassies in Europe.

Miss Griffith's expensive gown was made of the rarest Chantilly lace and silk and is elaborately studded with jewels. It is to be worn at a diplomatic social function.

Marie Dressler and Dorothy Cummings are the most recent additions to the cast of "The Divine Lady," which will go into production soon.

SCREEN STAR LECTURES ON PAST OF POLO

Jack Holt, who is appearing in one of the principal male roles in William Haines' latest starring vehicle, "The Smart Set," for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, furnished his own string of seven ponies, all of which participated in Pacific Coast championship games.

Holt, a great polo player and athlete, when interviewed on the set, issued some interesting facts about the sport.

"Had the modern polo player lived in Persia," said Holt, "some two thousand years ago he could have had anything he wanted, from a marble palace to an overstocked harem.

"Kings of Persia, devotees of the sport of polo, were wont to select their highest nobles, princes and army officers from the fastest and most skillful polo players.

"Being a good polo player was the equivalent of proving a high degree of courage and intelligence, making one worthy to sit with kings and princes.

"One Persian queen is said to have captained her own team of 70 women polo players and to have participated in tournaments with the royal teams of nearby kingdoms.

"The game of polo played by the Persians, as compared to the modern game was very slow. Their ponies were only fourteen hands in height and were too small and poorly bred to attain the skill and speed of the modern polo pony."

This Week's Screen Plays

RIALTO—George Sidney, in "We Americans."

"We Americans," said to be one of the most notable pictures recently produced, is having its first Washington showing at the Rialto this week. It is a picturization of the famous stage success of the same name by Herbert Gropper and Mark Seigel. It deals with tragedy, drama and humor surrounding the great American melting pot of humanity.

A Russian, a German and an Italian family, who have come to America to settle in New York's lower East Side, do not understand the rapid assimilation of new customs on the part of their children. Levine drives his daughter, Beth, from home, and the three families, acting on the advice of a school teacher, go to night school to become Americanized.

War is declared on Germany. Pete Albertini and Phil Levine enlist. So does Hugh Bradleigh, Beth's aristocratic sweetheart. Phil is killed, saving Hugh, and Pete loses a leg. After the war Pete returns to Sarah Schmidt and Hugh goes to Beth's East Side home. His parents follow, not approving of the match. But to go on would spoil the enjoyment of the spectator. The denuement is of rare beauty and happiness, raising the picture to the heights of art.

The cast of "We Americans" includes George Sidney, Patsy Ruth Miller, George Lewis, Eddie Phillips, Beryl Mercer, John Bales, Albert Gran, Michael Visaroff, Daisy Belmore, Rosita Marstini, Andy de vine, Flora Bramley, Kathlyn Williams, Edward Martindel, Josephine Dunn, Jacob Bleifer and a host of others.

Rox Rommell, conducting the Rialto Concert Orchestra, plays for the overture "Ach, Du Lieber Augustin," which he has clothed with his own arrangement.

A scenic, "So This Is America," and International Newsreel are added auxiliary films.

EARLE—Rod La Rocque in "Stand and Deliver."

A colorful screen play and an even more colorful stage presentation are the companion attractions at the Earle this week. The screen feature is "Stand and Deliver," which features Rod La Rocque in the role of Roger Norman, a wealthy young Englishman, who joins the Grecian cavalry in quest of adventure. The stage presentation is the first of the productions from the new Stanley Co. of America Studios, under the direction of Joe Plunkett, managing director of the Mark Strand Theater, New York. The title of the new offering is "Around the Clock," and features several Broadway stars, led by Jack Pepper, master of ceremonies; the Three Co-Eds, Lady Tsen Mei, the Kaufman Girls, Marty White, Morosco and Daniels and Maxina Hamilton.

"Stand and Deliver," which Fonald Crisp directed, is a story of modern Greece, played against a background of the banditry which seriously threatened that country shortly after the World War.

While Rod La Rocque captures the stellar honors, Lupe Velez, his leading woman, who achieved a triumph in, "The Gaucho," also gives a noteworthy performance. Miss Velez, a comparative newcomer to the screen, has become one of the most talked of personalities in filmdom. Warner Oland, as Ghika, the bandit chief, has an excellent role, as have Louis Natheaux and Clarence Burton.

The program will be augmented by several short reel subjects, orchestral overture and musical interpretation of the pictured subjects by the Earle Orchestra, Daniel Breeksin, conducting.

FOX—May McAvoy in "A Reno Divorce."

The screen feature of the Fox for the new week has its locale in Reno; S. J. Stebbins' stage presentation in Russia. The first named is titled "A Reno Divorce," with May McAvoy and Ralph Graves as the featured players. The second, the Stebbins contribution for the week, is a visit to the Russian theater, with Fred Berrens as a very modern, but still very Russianized, master of ceremonies.

The May McAvoy feature presents a new angle on the many couples seeking freedom from marriage bonds in Reno, telling the tale of an ultramodern and daring deb and a down and out young artist and two newly ex-weds. The supporting cast includes Robert Ober.

Mr. Stebbins, in holding over Fred Berrens, announces that this youthful artist who scored so successfully last week with his Ampico recording piano novelty, will appear in an entirely different line of artistry. As a master of ceremonies, Mr. Berrens presents what is said to be a new twist in this field.

The concert orchestra will render a medley of popular music which Leon Brusiloff, the director, has titled "The Living Masters." The ballet corps and vocal ensemble will also be presented in an entirely different creation in keeping with the motif of the week's feature stage offering.

PALACE—Lon Chaney in "The Big City."

Lon Chaney in "The Big City," his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, is the current screen attraction at Loew's Palace. Chaney plays the part of a New York gang leader. The story is essentially one of love, teems with thrills and abounds in mystery.

Chaney and his gang in conflict with a rival gang; a sensational holdup of a popular night club, battles with the police and duels of wits with detectives; these are all breathlessly exciting backgrounds for a charming love idyll of a boy and a girl—parts played by pretty Marceline Day and James Murray.

The stage attraction is John Murray Anderson's latest production, "Knick Knacks" in which Wesley Eddy, master of ceremonies and his Palace Syncopators are featured, aided by the Foster girls in new dance ideas; Mildred and Muriel Lee as exponents of syncopated steps; Llora Hoffman, prima donna soprano; Pasquali Brothers in an acrobatic novelty, "The Silver Gondola;" and a comedy riot with Winfield and Mills, "The Chinaman and the Coon."

Harry Borjes and his Palace Orchestra, short subjects and the M-G-M

METROPOLITAN—Harold Lloyd "Speedy."

Harold Lloyd will again be the attraction at the Metropolitan Th this week in his latest and gre comedy, "Speedy," which has been over in response to the many re from satisfied patrons who have that it be shown again this we that their friends may see it and they themselves may see it agai

In "Speedy" Harold Lloyd has succeeded in surpassing his pre successes. As typical of all Lloyd productions, entirely new highly humorous situations and have been injected.

"Speeedy" is everything the nam plies. It is a fast moving story keeps the audience on edge every ute. The dyed in the wool fan ma sume there is nothing now left movie craft that would serve to of novelty, but in "Speedy" that due for a most welcome surprise. has fairly outdone himself. The ject around which he has built hi is an old antiquated horse car. T age that in itself is novel enough the horse car is only the beginni things.

Lloyd introduces a new leading an in this comedy. She is Ann C whose work promises soon to put the star list. Added short reels a chestra.

POMP MARKS GREAT TALE

It is sometimes hard for American students of history to understand how the domination and tyranny of the rulers of ancient and medieval times could have been borne by the subjects of the various lands of the earth. Here in our comfortable and comparatively free country, there are few suggestions of the crushing power wielded over the common people in past ages, when no man's life was his own, and the ruling classes were the only ones that enjoyed safety and luxury.

Ancient Egypt has long stood as the classic example of autocracy. The rulers of the realm, called the pharoahs, had absolute and unassailable power over the laws, subjects and policies of the country. In "The Loves of Pharoah," the motion picture based on that period of Egyptian history that tells of the domination of the Israelites, this unbelievable autocracy is said to be excellently depicted. A faithful portrayal of the pomp and majesty of this celebrated era was carefully developed by long research, and students of history and archaeology should find it interesting.

"The Loves of Pharoah" was made in Germany by the great UFA organization, was directed by Ernst Lubitsch, and stars the famous Emil Jannings in the title role. It begins a week's engagement at the Little Theater of the Motion Picture Guild today.

In Revival.

Ralph Forbes is playing the male lead with Dorothy Mackaill in the old racing melodrama, "The Whip." This story of England is being directed by Charles Brabin, an Englishman.

LAWRENCE DOWNEY, popular Washington baritone, whose splendid voice and personality have become familiar assets to the Fox stage presentations.

F. BERRENS REMAINS AN ADDED WEEK

Freddie Berrens came, was seen, and is to stay for another week.

All of which took place at the Fox Theater last week when, looking for a distinct novelty for a comedy interlude in his program, Managing Director S. J. Stebbins said "send for Freddie." "Freddie who?" said his staff in unison and Mr. Stebbins couldn't answer. He went through his file, which in itself could tell many a story, and under 'ampico" he found it—Freddie Berrens.

From that indexed card Mr. Stebbins informed his fellow workers that Mr. Berrens had a band; that he had a "trick ampico," to use the parlance of the treater, and that there was no need of the aforementioned band—that Freddie could stand alone if backed up by the ampico.

So Freddie Berrens came to Washington with his piano and it almost talked to him, so perfectly timed is the special music roll he personally recorded. He brought much laughter and it brought Freddie to the key position in this week's new bill at the Fox, for this youthful artist is to be a Russianized master of ceremonies in a Russian theater as seen through the creative eyes of Mr. Stebbins.

Not only does Freddie gain this distinction, but he forced the invisible master of ceremonies, which has caused wonderment at the Fox for the past several weeks, "out of the picture" for the current week.

Quick Action.

Mary Doran, who made Hollywood in two jumps from Columbia University, via the Ziegfeld Follies and the Los Angeles stage, has been engaged for her first screen role.

Miss Doran, who is 19, small, with auburn hair, big brown eyes and an eager manner, will make her film debut in Esther Ralston's next picture.

The newcomer is a strictly New York product. Coming from the Follies to Los Angeles several weeks ago, she walked into the leading role in "Saturday's Children." A Paramount official saw her, invited her to have a screen test, and she got a part.

This untitled film play discussing companionate marriage is from Arthur Stringer's original story. Gary Cooper is the leading man, and Gregory La Cava is directing.

High Comedy.

"Tiny" Ward, a wisp of a 300-pounder, has been added to the cast of the Wallace Beery-Raymond Hatton comedy now in production. "Tiny" stands 6 feet 7 inches in height, and from that towering eminence takes the part of a carnival ballyhooer.

KING VIDOR OFFERS ONE SIMPLE OUT

Treaties on the "in-law" problem, which have already been written would fill many volumes, but King Vidor, in his direction of "The Crowd," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, playing its second week at Loew's Columbia, disposes of it with neatness and dispatch in a few well-chosen scenes.

"The 'in-law' problem," says Vidor, "is about as elastic as rubber. The more you pull on it the longer and greater it becomes. In fact, it is just what young people make of it and just as important as they permit it to become. It is no problem at all when diplomatically handled and is about as much of a myth as the age-old cruel stepmother gag, which started centuries ago in the fairy tales of the Old World."

Vidor, who not only directed "The Crowd," but wrote the original story for the screen, treats the "in-law" matter in a comical, as well as dramatic, manner. Eleanor Boardman, who has the featured feminine role Mary, defends her husband's actions in such a way that it feeds the flame of her brothers' hatred for the husband, as played by James Murray.

A final stand taken by the young husband, in conjunction with the stand taken by his young wife, dispatches the problem to the point of complete elimination. The same sort of stand at the beginning would have prevented the problem from ever interposing itself between the household and peace.

Stars Aid Victims.

All of Paramount's stars and featured players, with the exception of Bebe Daniels and Pola Negri, who were away on location, recently participated in the monster midnight benefit held for the victims of the St. Francis Dam catastrophe at the Metropolitan Theater in Los Angeles.

The players included Clara Bow, Esther Ralston, Florence Vidor, George Bancroft, Wallace Beery, Richard Dix, Raymond Hatton, Emil Jannings, Sally Blane, Evelyn Brent, Mary Brian, Nancy Carroll, Doris Hill, Ivy Harris, Marietta Milner, Iris Stuart, Ruth Taylor, Fay Wray, Richard Arlen, William Austin, Clive Brook, Lane Chandler, Chester Conklin, Gary Cooper, W. C. Fields, James Hall, Arnold Kent, Fred Kohler, Jack Luden, Paul Lukas, William Powell and Charles Rogers.

Hooked a Rug!

The hobby of making hooked rugs is all right, as Thelma Todd, First National player, admits, but she also remarks that it is inconvenient, since one can not bring a rug of 12 by 16 feet in size to the studio to work on between shots. She has made several such rugs in the last year, however.

LEE SISTERS. not precisely our notion of "Knick Knacks," although they adorn the revue of that name at the Palace.

BEAUTY WILL BE SHOWN IN TECHNICOLOR

Color photography is gaining ground each day in filmdom.

"Why don't you go in the movies—you are far prettier than most of the stars," is said to many a girl throughout the world.

But the speaker fails to realize that her beauty is that of color—the pink in the cheek, the red lips, blue eyes and golden hair blind one to the possibly imperfect features. The camera strips a girl of all coloring and registers her face in black and white. Did you ever see a film star with a pug nose? No, they have good features.

Dorothy Dwan, conceded to be one of the prettiest girls in Hollywood, is signed to play the leading role in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's colored film, "The Virgin Queen." An ordinary camera changes Dorothy's soulful blue eyes to brown, and takes the golden red from her hair, but it cannot take away her aristocratic features. Now that the beautiful Dorothy is to be photographed with her own natural coloring, a treat is in store for her fans.

The love story of Queen Elizabeth and Sir Walter Raleigh will be made entirely in color by Technicolor, for M.-G.-M. release. Eileen Manning will portray the Virgin Queen, Forrest Stanley is cast as Sir Walter, and Dorothy Dwan, in the leading role, plays the part of Raleigh's wife, who saves him from guillotine.

Beery's Next.

Wallace Beery, for more than a year continuously in comedies, will return to a dramatic characterization in "Beggars of Life," the hobo story from Jim Tully's personal narrative of the same name. The cast will include Richard Arlen and Louise Brooks. Beery at present is busy on another comedy with Raymond Hatton.

Jim Tully has been working with Benjamin Glazer on the adaptation and the script is reported to be virtually complete. Maxwell Anderson, coauthor of "What Price Glory," used the book as the basis for a stage play a few years ago, calling it "Outside Looking In."

COMEDY THE HARDEST TO MAKE CLICK

Some picturegoers entertain the idea that comedies are the easiest type of screen entertainment to make. Quite the reverse is the case. The task of producing laughs is a slow and laborious one. It requires infinite pains, patience, great skill, talent and a comprehensive knowledge of psychology.

Particularly is this true of the top-notch film comedians, o. whom Harold Lloyd is a notable and conspicuous example. The bespectacled funmaker and his capable staff spend many long weary months building, modeling, cutting, discarding and recutting in a painstaking effort to achieve perfect results. Their problem is doubly difficult because Lloyd always strives for a middle course, that is, the comedy must never descend to slapstick, nor rise to the peaks of the highbrow.

Every Lloyd production is firmly built on a solid foundation of a real story. To be sure, a gag here and a stunt there is often inserted to add to the fun or to speed up the action, but it is never allowed unless it fits in exactly with the continuity of the plot. Furthermore, there is always an idea underlying the foolery and comedy complications.

In "Speedy," his latest Paramount release, now playing at the Metropolitan, Harold emphasizes the wholesome thought that the real joy of living is to be found in helping some one else. He depicts the young lad, who is so wrapped up in baseball that it causes him to lose every job he gets, yet when the crisis appears, it is Harold who jumps in the breach and saves the day for the ones he loves. His experiences, in thwarting the crisis, give cause for many hilarious laughs, without which, after all, no Lloyd comedy would be complete, as the comedian specializes in producing comedies of the kind in which the situations are highly amusing to the audience, yet are anything but funny to the hero.

He is ably supported in "Speedy" by a notable cast. He introduces to the film-going public a new star, Ann Christy. His choosing Miss Christy to play opposite him resulted in the signal opportunity for her also being chosen as a Baby Wampas star for the current year.

Dancer a Hit.

Lina Basquette, former Follies dancing star, is playing opposite Richard Barthelmess for the second time in four months. Miss Basquette, who plays in "The Noose," has been signed as the feminine lead in "Roulette."

LON CHANEY LEARNS THE GANG ARGOT

Lon Chaney, "man of a thousand faces," had also to become a man of a thousand strange new words, when he mastered one of the oddest languages in existence—the argot of the New York underworld. In "The Big City," in which he plays a New York gang leader, he delved deeply into the lore of the underworld, learning the language of crooks and thieves.

The new picture, which is now playing at Loew's Palace, is a vivid mystery tale of New York's night life, with Marceline Day, James Murray and others of note.

"The language of the underworld," says Chaney, "is really a language within a language, as there has grown up a sort of slang language that to the layman is incomprehensible."

For instance, he explains, a safe is a "keister," and opening one to "cracking a keister;" a "rod" is a revolver; to carry one is to "pack a rod;" nitroglycerin is known as "soup;" a safe-cracker as a "peter man;" a gangster's sweetheart is his "moll;" if she helps him in crimes she is a "gun moll;" a uniformed policeman is a "flatty" or "harness bull," and a detetcive is a "dick;" a diamond is known as "ice" or a "rock;" a pickpocket as a "dip;" a lawyer is a crook's "mouthpiece," and to be in jail is to be "in stir."

Nine Lives.

The cat's proverbial nine lives have nothing on Clarence Burton! For this DeMille actor has been killed on the screen in every known way.

According to Burton, who has a strong role in "Stand and Deliver," Rod La Rocque's latest starring vehicle for Pathe-DeMille, now to be seen at the Earle Theater, he has been eaten by wolves, run over many times by automobiles, hanged a dozen times, shot, drowned, stabbed and even hit by a boomerang.

But in "Stand and Deliver," Burton manages to live in the role of an officer in the Greek Cavalry, even though he was declared to be dead.

A PICTURE THAT COMBINES VALUE AND ENTERTAINMENT

EDWARD SLOMAN, actor, writer and director, is responsible for the direction of the new Universal special screen production, "We Americans," which is being shown at the Rialto this week.

Sloman made a location trip to New York, where he collected considerable data concerning the lives and customs of America's adopted sons and daughters, for use in this heart-stirring drama of a foreign family coming to this country to take out naturalization papers.

"All of the educators agree," says Sloman, "that the solution of the problem of making good American citizens out of immigrants lies with the children of these people who are being educated in the public schools."

Nevertheless, Sloman points out, there is often stark tragedy under this Americanization process. "The children so easily absorb the atmosphere and language of their adopted land, but the old folks live, think and act just as they did in the old country."

The situation of misunderstanding which is created between the older and younger generation of foreign-born people forms the theme of "We Americans."

Sloman used every means available to bring out the poignancy of this situation from the time a family arrives at Ellis Island, on through the settling into a home in the foreign district, the educating of the children and the night classes where the grown-ups of the family are taught the language and customs of their adopted country.

"During my stay in New York," Sloman continues, "I attended a dinner given by the most prominent of those people interested in the Americanization problem. They see in my picture an opportunity to aid in the better understanding between the foreign and native-born American. I was amazed at the immensity of the Americanization work, and I trust that the photoplay, 'We Americans,' will lend its aid to the greatest work being done in our country today."

Activities of the Women's Clubs

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

MOST local clubs and organizations have put aside their usual tasks to entertain the thousands of delegates coming to the city to attend the various national conventions of organizations which will convene here during the 30 days to come.

Many Washington clubwomen are leaders in the national and local D. A. R.; therefore a number of clubs and societies will give teas and receptions in honor of these delegates.

The Women's City Club will keep open house for visiting women and hostess committees on duty each day will make them feel entirely at home.

The next great out-of-town meeting of a woman's organization will be that at San Antonio, Tex., when the hosts of delegates to the biennial convention of the General Convention of Women's Clubs will gather there. Many Washington clubwomen will go to Texas for this big rally of American womanhood.

Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the General Federation, who has just returned to Washington from a visit to San Antonio for a conference with the chairman of the San Antonio Biennial Board, Mrs. Henry Draught, has sent out a message to the clubwomen of approval of all the provisions which are being made for the meeting.

The opening of the baseball season in Washington is the signal for more suppers at the District of Columbia Chapter House of the American Red Cross where suppers are served frequently when the Washington Team is playing here, by the Canteen Corps of the local Red Cross, headed by Miss Lydia Loring, for veterans from the service hospitals in town to attend the big games.

The games usually last too long for the veterans to return to their respective hospitals in time for supper, so the District Red Cross evolved the idea of furnishing suppers for baseball fans among the veterans.

The District of Columbia Society of Daughters of the American Colonists was entertained by Mrs. Walter W. Hicks Monday evening at her home, 5004 Thirteenth street. Assisting Mrs. Hicks were Mrs. Berryman, Mrs. Fernald, Mrs. Nagle, Misses Yeatman and Sudler. Mrs. Berryman introduced the guest of the evening, Mrs. Ludwig, of Philadelphia, a charter member.

The regent, Mrs. Harry C. Grove, announced that Mrs. George Thacher Guernsey, national president, will arrive this week.

Mrs. William L. Saul, corresponding secretary, read letters of acknowledgment and thanks for contributions from the Monticello Association and Friendship House. A contribution of $40 was voted to the latter and Mrs. Grace F. Meeks reported a generous response to invitations to a benefit card party and luncheon at Friendship House. On motion of Mrs. Berryman, $10 was voted to the George Washington University fund. A motion by Miss Maud Burr Morris was carried to place $16.25 in the colonial memorial sinking fund.

The following new members were unanimously elected: Mrs. William H. Wagner, Mrs. William H. Snyder, Miss Helen Brown, Mrs. W. E. Hoffheins, Mrs. J. Caldwell Jenkins. The regent read letters from State societies asking support for Mrs. Rand, of Massachusetts, for the office of honorary vice president, and Mrs. James Branch Cabell for national vice president, and by unanimous vote the chapter indorsed their candidacy.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year, regent, Mrs. Catherine R. Nagle; first vice regent, Miss Mary C. Oursler; second vice regent, Miss Annie M. Alexander; recording secretary, Miss Caroline V. Sudler; corresponding secretary, Mrs. William L. Saul; treasurer, Mrs. Sol Lansburgh; registar, Mrs. Grace F. Meeks; historian, Mrs. Constance Goodman; chaplain, Mrs. M. B. Kistler.

The National Society Daughters of the American Colonists was incorporated in the District of Columbia April 25, 1921, by Mrs. George Thacher Guernsey, of Kansas; Mrs. Schaaf, of Missouri; Mrs. High, of Georgia; Mrs. Talbott, of Maryland; Mrs. Berryman, Mrs. St. Clair, Mrs. Casenova, Misses Norton and Morris of the District. Eligibility to membership is based upon lineal descent from men and women who were actual residents of America when it was under foreign government as colonies. The object is to make research and publish results, to erect memorials to commemorate colonial deeds and places of interest, to inculcate and foster the love of America and its institutions by all its residents, to obey its laws and venerate its flag, and for mutual improvement and educational purposes.

The annual meeting of the society, which is termed the General Assembly, will be held at the Washington Hotel April 23, at which time a national president will be chosen to succeed Mrs. Guernsey, four national vice presidents, honorary vice presidents and a list of national officials.

The District society has indorsed Mrs. Harry C. Grove and Mrs. John F. Little for the offices of national recording secretary and national registrar respectively, as it is believed that these offices should be filled by women living at headquarters. Over 300 officers, delegates and alternates are listed for attendance at the assembly on April 23. The credential committee, Miss Mary W. Durham, chairman, will register delegates at 2 o'clock, April 21, at the Washington Hotel and again Monday, April 23. There will be a luncheon in the sun parlor of the hotel with Miss Annie M. Alexander in charge of arrangements.

The Daughters of the American Revolution who are members of the Women's City Club will be hostesses at the tea given at the clubhouse, 22 Jackson place, this afternoon from 4:30 until 6 o'clock. Miss Helen Brown is chairman.

Among the invited guests are Mrs. Alfred Brosseau, Mrs. John M. Beavers, Mrs. William Sherman Walker, Mrs. Matthew Brewster, Mrs. Samuel William Earle, Mrs. Herbert Lord, Mrs. Lowell Hobart, Mrs. Adam M. Wyant, Mrs. Eli Helmick, Miss Alice Louise McDuffee, Mrs. Horace M. Farnham, Mrs. Joseph Frelinghuysen, Mrs. Gerald L. Schuyler, Mrs. James M. Willey, Mrs. David Caldwell, Miss Helen Hormon, Miss Virginia Price, Miss Harriett M. Chase, Mrs. J. Edgar Smith, Mrs. Roscoe L. Oatley, Mrs. George Hillyer, Mrs. Harry C. Grove, Mrs. H. H. Barber and Mrs. Albion Tuck.

Miss Mary G. Brown and Mrs. F. E. Webner, delegates, alternates, visiting and residence Daughters are also invited. Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, Miss Catherine Watkins and Mrs. Grattan Kerans will be among those who will receive.

Mrs. John Allen Munson and Mrs. I. B. Dodson will be hostesses at the "all-States" card party given under the auspices of the Thimble section of the Women's City Club, Saturday afternoon and evening, at the clubhouse, 22 Jackson place. Among the patronesses are Mrs. Charles S. Deeden, Mrs. Richard Yates, Mrs. J. Garfield Riley, Judge Mary O'Toole, Dr. A. Frances Foye, Mrs. Frederic R. Whippler, Miss Elizabeth Raymond, Mrs. Merritt O. Chance, Mrs. Goodwin Graham, Dr. Edith Coale, Mrs. Laura A. Bradley, Mrs. William E. Cole, Mrs. J. S. Tassin, Mrs. G. M. Emmerich, Miss M. E. Shanahan, Miss Abby Johnson, Mrs. A. B. Stewart, Mrs. Grattan Kerans, Mrs. George Hay Brown, Mrs. J. F. Calibreath, Mrs. De Kraft, Mrs. N. E. Ives, Mrs. Catherine M. P. Vosbury, Miss Carleton, Mrs. M. L. Gilman, Mrs. Lawrence Becker, Mrs. C. C. Cable, Mrs. James Ward, Mrs. J. R. Briggs, Mrs. Hortense Keables and Mme. M. R. Lemercier-Strocker.

"Lupita de Multiflores," a drama of Latin America, will have its premier performance at the club, Thursday evening at 8:20 o'clock, given under the auspices of the drama unit, Mrs. Patrick Gallagher, chairman. Miss Alice M. Heaven, a club member, is the author of the play, writing the play of romance and revolution with a keen appreciation of the setting, since Miss Heaven has lived in Spain and South America.

The laces and mantillas used in the play are authentic, the mantillo most prized by the senorita of old Madrid, the Venetian point, is worn by Dona Enriquetta, Mrs. Gertrude Lyons; Carlos, the young hothead, will be depicted by Frederick Haskin, jr.; the dictator, by Robert Praetorius; Miss Edith Oriani will depict Lupinta and Miss V. S. Benjamin, the confidential maid, Anita. The scene is a city in South America, in the throes of a revolution. Incidentally, the costumes of the beautiful spring festival, the feast of St. Anthony of Padua, is featured. Mrs. Charles B. Hanford is director. Miss Nell Price will direct the other one-act play to be given the same evening, "Let Us Go at That," by Essex Dane. Taking the parts will be Fay Bentley, as Mrs. Theo Masserine; Gertrude E. Walter, Duchess of Mex; Agnes A. Winn, Elizabeth Claud; Jessye Branscomb, Alicia Romney; Sylvia Wentworth, Mrs. Hexway; Delores Flood, Mrs. Beverly-Jones; Phyllis E. Stewart, Jarman. Members of the club are invited to attend and bring their friends to this final performance of the year.

The club chorus will give their only concert of the season Monday evening, April 23, at 8:30 o'clock. Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, director of the chorus, announces the club chorus members with Mr. Frederick Schaefer, assisting, will take part in the two cantatas, "The Rose of Avontown" and Sir Oluf." Musical numbers by Jean Westbrook, violin; Frank Westbrook, violoncello, and Mrs. Frank S. Westbrook, at the piano. Mrs. Grace Ross Chamberlin, reader. Mrs. Emma Smith will sing the part of the Erlking's daughter. Mrs. Charles Brooks Smith is accompanist and assistant director. The members of the club chorus invite club members and their friends to attend.

The junior section is sponsoring a series of four lectures to be given at the clubhouse by Mr. Robert Byrne, who designed the interiors of a number of notable buildings in Washington. Mr. Byrne has studied abroad and has an extensive reputation as an artist. "Interior Decoration," the proper arrangement of furniture, draperies, rugs, &c., color schemes and the effect of light, will all be demonstrated by the speaker. The club office or members of the club will supply the cards for the course Members can make reservations for interested friends. Miss Helen Wilbar, chairman, assisted by Mrs. Edward Fristo and committee.

Mme. Frank Barrows Freyer will keep "open house" to members of the Women's City Club and their friends, Sunday afternoon, April 22, from 4 until 6 o'clock at her residence, 1771 Massachusetts avenue, when her collection of Peruvian paintings and works of art and other treasures from Pan-American countries can be viewed. Mme. Freyer spoke before the Spanish section dinner guests recently and her recital of experiences in Peru was most interesting. Mme. Freyer has been decorated by the Peruvian government for work she did while a resident there in welfare work among women, children and animals.

Mrs. William E. Chamberlin, chairman of the current events section, will present Mr. William Knowles Cooper as honor guest and speaker, Tuesday afternoon, at the meeting of this section, at 4:45 o'clock, in the ballroom. Mr. Cooper, who spoke before the section earlier in the year will tell more about "European Happenings." All club members are invited. This section will sponsor a dinner April 27. Reservations are now being made.

Mrs. John Allen Munson, chairman of the Thimble section, will meet with this group Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock for two hours of sewing on the new summer frocks for the little folks of the Washington Home for Children. Club members are invited to join this group either as working or contributing members. The card party held yesterday afternoon and evening was well attended and additional funds were added to the section's treasury for working materials.

Mrs. J. Edwin Reid, secretary of the Monday Bridge section, reports the regular meeting of the section was held at 2 o'clock last week, Miss May Eleanor Smith presiding. Awards were presented for the highest scores for the month of March as follows: Mrs. Corbin Thompson, first; Mrs. L. S. Fristoe, second; Mrs. A. B. Wilson, third. During the social hour Mrs. W. H. Whitney presided at the tea table, assisted by Mrs. C. L. Butler. Tomorrow afternoon a business meeting will precede the regular meeting time at 1:15 o'clock, when the nominating committee for the section will report. A May party luncheon is being planned.

The memorial tree planting committee will hold a meeting at the club on Arbor Day, April 20. A luncheon will precede the entertainment, which will be given at 2 o'clock, consisting of slides showing historic and other trees in and around Washington, with a five minute talk and a short musical program. Due to the limited dining room space only two reservations can be made by club representatives for the luncheon, but members of the club are invited to the entertainment.

Mrs. William Howard Taft will plant a red maple tree, May 1, at 3:30 p. m. on the Parkview Playgrounds. This is the first planting of the series of tree planting planned for the playgrounds of the District.

A club dance, sponsored by the junior section, will be given Wednesday evening at 9:30 o'clock. All club members are invited to bring their friends. Cards at the desk. Miss Helen Wilbar, chairman.

Miss Helen N. Johnson, group chairman of the sports section, reports the gymnasium group, under the leadership of Miss Margaret Carmody, chairman, as having one class of ten formed and another listed. Miss Hoard is chairman of golf, and Mrs. Lucile Slocovich, vice chairman. This group will soon be "on the green" in full swing. The bowling group meet each week on Monday and Friday evenings at the Y. W. C. A. Building for play. Mrs. Edward Fristoe, chairman; Miss Thelma Schmitt and Mrs. Ruth Martin are in charge of the swimming section; Miss Helen O'Neill and Mrs. M. E. Irwin head the riding section; Miss Florence Bell is chairman and Miss Jessie B. Edmonston, vice chairman of tennis. Club members are being listed for membership in all of the sections. Miss Julia Bannigan is group vice chairman.

The Tuesday evening free and easy section meets at 7:30 o'clock. Miss Meda Ann Martin is hostess for the month, with Miss Elva McNamara assisting. Recent guests of this section were Mrs. Horace Johnson, Mrs. George Snyder, Geraldine Schuh, Miss G. Robertson, Miss Lena Whitmarsh, Mrs. E. C. Jones, Denver, Colo.; Mrs. F. P. Carter, Binghamton, N. Y., and Mrs. Charlotte Jones.

Mrs. Merrit O. Chance, chairman of the membership committee, reports Mrs. F. C. Billar, Mrs. H. E. Geary, Miss Regina M. Schmidt and Miss Gertrude Temple as new members. Dr. O. Josephine Baird, Miss Marie Kearney, Miss Lucy Powell, Mrs. M. O. Chance, Miss Marion Clark, Mrs. Margaret Eacho and Miss Flora L. P. Johnson as becoming life members. Members moving from the city and taking a nonresident membership were Mrs. Clara Sears Taylor, Miss Bonnie Custinborder and Mrs. A. Z. Tyssowski.

The Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., civics section, Mrs. R. Harvey Sargent, leader, entertained two guests at the April meeting, Mrs. Jo. C. Probert, president of the auxiliary of the Montgomery County General Hospital, and Miss Estelle Moore, president of the Montgomery County Federation of Woman's Clubs. Mrs. Probert told of the new hospital annex, with its dispensary, operating room and nursery. The equipment and furnishing of the nursery is being financed by voluntary subscriptions from members of the club, under the leadership of Mrs. Earl H. Clapp.

Miss Moore told of the pageant, depicting the history of Montgomery County, which is to be held at Rockville, June 2, the proceeds of which will be for the benefit of the Montgomery County Special Service League.

The public welfare committee, Mrs. Robert J. Service, chairman, reported the gift of a large crocheted rug to the section by Mrs. John R. Taliaferro, to be sold for social service. Mrs. Service also reported that the section had raised the full amount pledged for the Christmas opportunity.

The executive board met on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Walter Miles, in Jocelyn street, with Mrs. William Y. Brady and Mrs. Truman Abbe assisting the hostess in entertaining at luncheon. The following members were present, Mrs. Alexander Ashley, Mrs. William B. Greeley, Mrs. Campbell E. Waters, Mrs. Burton McCollum, Mrs. Russell S. McBride, Mrs. Karl C. Corley, Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, Mrs. Stanley L. Wolfe, Mrs. R. Harvey Sargent, Mrs. Charles D. Curtiss, Mrs. Robert J. Service, Mrs. William S. Garland, Mrs. Lyles Offutt, Mrs. George B. Wagner and Mrs. Hoover Hanger. Mrs. Greeley acted as secretary in the absence of Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle.

Reports were made by the officers, leaders and chairman, including that of Mrs. Wagner, who stated that 200 tickets had been sold for the card party to be held on the afternoon of April 27 for the benefit of the Social Service League of Montgomery County and other charitable interests of the club. This party will be held not only in the Chevy Chase, Md., Library, but also in the homes of Mrs. Joseph T. Maguire and Mrs. Karl Fenning, and if necessary in the homes of several other members. Members of the junior section will sell candy at this party also. Mrs. Wagner also announced a social section progressive dinner party on the evening of May 5, and a garden tea in honor of the retiring president and officers on May 23.

The executive board granted permission to the art section, Mrs. Walter Miles leader, to hold an art exhibit May 16, the day of the last club meeting of the year. This exhibit will include the work of members of the arts section, during the year and will be in charge of Mrs. Hewitt Grigg Robertson.

On Tuesday the art section will hold its annual business meeting at 2:30, at the home of Mrs. Emanual Zies, on Hesketh street, and on the same afternoon the nature section, Mrs. Truman Abbe, leader, will hold a plant sale at her home, 3737 Huntington street. This sale will continue from 10 to 12, the next morning, in case of rain. The section members have made a specialty columbine, snapdragons and delphinium, but will have many other plants for sale also. Subscriptions will be taken for one of the garden magazines. This sale is for the benefit of the nursery at the Montgomery County General Hospital.

On Wednesday next will be the regular monthly club meeting and luncheon, the speaker of the day to be Willmott Lewis, the Washington correspondent of the London Times, whose subject will be "International Relations."

The junior department, Mrs. Hoover Hanger, leader, will meet on Thursday, the 19th, at the home of Miss Frances Cammack, 3820 Ingomar street.

Friday, the literature section, Mrs. William S. Garland, leader, will meet in the Chevy Chase, Md., library, at 2 p. m., the speaker to be Dean William Allen Wilbur, of George Washington University.

The nature section, Mrs. Truman Abbe, leader, made a trip to Haines' Point, where many spring bulbs were in bloom and where the members saw quite a few water birds. Section members have been working in their gardens raising plants, which will be offered for sale at the home of the leader, 3737 Huntington street, on April 17, from 2 to 4:30 o'clock. The proceeds of this sale will be given to the fund being raised for furnishing the nursery of the Montgomery County General Hospital.

Members of this section will meet on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, for an all-day trip to see the wild flowers along the old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal.

The executive board of the social section, Mrs. George B. Wagner, leader, met on Tuesday morning at the home of the assistant leader, Mrs. Joseph T. Maguire. This section is arranging for the annual club benefit for the Social Service League, of Montgomery County, which this year takes the form of two parties, the first a dance at the Chevy Chase, Md., library, on the evening of April 20, and the second, a card party, the afternoon of April 27, at the same place. Mrs. Marvin Farrington is in charge of the tickets for both affairs, assisted by Mrs. Maguire, Mrs. Wagner, Mrs. Marc G. Phillips, Mrs. Thomas W Perry, Mrs. George F. Mikkelson, Mrs. Robert E. Kline, sr., Mrs. George W. Lewis, Mrs. George P. Hoover, Mrs. Karl Fenning, and Mrs. Harry Filmore Lowe.

The hostesses for the dance will be Mrs. Wagner, Mrs. Fenning, Mrs. Farrington, Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Lowe. The hostesses for the card party will be Mrs. Wagner, Mrs. Perry, Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Mikkelson, Mrs. Maguire and Mrs Joseph H. Deveau.

Tuesday the hospitality committee for the April meeting will meet at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Carolen P. Warner, 8 W. Melrose street. Members unable to attend this meeting are requested to phone Mrs. Warner. At 11 a. m. the membership committee will meet at the home of its chairman, Mrs. Karl C. Corley, on Western avenue.

Wednesday, at 1 o'clock, the executive board of the club will meet at the home of Mrs. Walter Miles, on Jocelyn street, for luncheon and the regular monthly business. Mrs. Miles will be assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Truman Abbe and Mrs. William Y. Brady.

The Chevy Chase Florence Crittenton Circle will meet Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Thomas E. Robertson, on West Melrose street, at 2:30 p. m., when plans will be completed for the card party to be given on the evening of April 30, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Corby, Chevy Chase Circle. The following committees have been appointed: Arrangements, Mrs. Marvin Farrington, Mrs. George W. Lewis and Mrs. Elmont B. Hazard; tickets, Mrs. H. S. Jones, Mrs. George Numsen and Mrs. M. K. Effinger; prizes, Mrs. Ben Temple Webster, Mrs. J. B. Morrey and Mrs. Jesse B. Hedges; candy, Mrs. Jesse C. Bowen, Mrs. Frederick W. Brake, Mrs. Clarence E. Dawson and Miss Lucy Mackrille.

MEMBER OF BOARD WOULD GO SLOWLY ON RADIO CHANGES

Believes Commission Will Move Deliberately Without Rushing Action.

SUMMER EXPERIMENTS HELD OF LITTLE VALUE

Meeting of Industry Representatives to Recommend Methods of Guidance.

"It is my opinion that the commission will move deliberately in the matter of reallocating the wave lengths and power in conformity with the equal-distribution clause in the new radio law," a member of the Federal Radio Commission observed when asked how long he thought it would be before the realignment might be undertaken. 'If I have anything to say about it we will consider any proposed set-up very carefully, and this time do it right.

"There is no need of rushing the thing through, because the summer listening season is almost at hand, and it wouldn't do any particular good to make the changes now, for what would prove satisfactory under summer atmospheric conditions might bring a heterodyne with it in winter."

Industry to Be Heard From.

This may not be taken to mean that the commission will wait until next fall, for they will undoubtedly work as rapidly as possible, but it does suggest, as the commissioner plainly intimated, that "this time" they are going to "watch their step." Which is pretty good procedure, for they will have Congress on their neck again if they don't. And maybe they will, anyway.

The next step in the procedure will be a meeting of five representatives each of the National Broadcasters' Association, the Radio Manufacturers' Association, and the Federated Radio Trades' Association at Chicago Tuesday, April 17, to formulate a set of recommendations for the guidance of the Radio Commission. This group will be presided over by H. A. Bellows, former radio commissioner, and former Representative Frank D. Scott, their council.

It is also anticipated that recommendations may be made to the commission by the radio division of the National Electrical Manufacturers' Association, of which Louis B. F. Raycroft, of Philadelphia, is chairman.

No Need of Demolishing Set-Up.

Although it can not be foretold what the recommendations of these groups of the industry will be, it is understood rather than advocating the entire rebuilding of the broadcasting structure as required in the engineers' plan now under consideration by the Federal Radio Commission, the industry rather favors trying to fit in existing conditions with the requirements of the law.

"Why tear down the present structure entirely," a representative of the N. B. C.-R. M. A. group declared, "this is exactly what would happen if the engineers' plan, however good theoretically it might be, were adopted.

"This would be absolutely ruinous to the industry, listeners would be searching all over the dial trying to find their favorite stations, there would have to be a complete readjustment of everything, transmitters would have to be rebuilt, antennas would have to be changed, high powered stations, which had been obliged to move from the city to the country, now having their power reduced, would have to move back to the city—there would be all sorts of changes which would prove utterly ruinous to the industry.

Conference Planned April 23.

"And that is not saying that the broadcasters don't believe there should be fewer stations in the congested centers like New York or Chicago, and many reallocations there, both as to wave lengths and time, nor that there are not many good points in the engineers' plan; but we simply don't feel that it is necessary to demolish the old structure to carry out the provisions of the law that there be a more equal distribution of the wave lengths and power.

"My guess is that the broadcasters' recommendations at Chicago will be rather an enlargement of the engineers' plans—advocating simultaneous broadcasting by considerably more stations; but I believe in a general way they will avail themselves of the present set-up."

Once the industry has outlined its recommendations as to how the Federal Radio Commission should proceed, these recommendations will be laid before the commission at a special conference to be held in Washington, Monday, April 23

CONGRESSIONAL CROSS TALK

The farmers in this country in every market center should have provision for radio broadcasting by which every day intimately and particularly the conditions of the market and the demands may be broadcast to them. I believe that is one facility we ought to insist should be available for the agricultural interests of this country, under their own control.—Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina.

Radio will continue to play an ever more important part in the life of our people during campaigns and when there are no campaigns. However, it is not the influence which it will exert—but in which direction the influence is exerted—that is important—Representative Victor L. Berger (Socialist), of Wisconsin.

The new radio law was rushed through Congress without any one of the radio industry or radio public having a word before either House or Senate committee.—Bond P. Geddes, executive vice president of the Radio Manufacturers Association.

Almost unheard of is the all-important and ever-increasing efficiency of the radio-compass stations of the Navy, which are proving so effective in increasing the safety of navigation of ships in coastal waters during fogs and heavy weather. A recent analysis showed that during one month these shore stations had furnished the needed bearings to over 9,000 naval and merchant ships, the bearings being furnished at an average time of less than 3 minutes and with an average area computed by the vessels receiving the bearing at less than 1 degree.—Representative William B. Oliver (Democrat), of Alabama

Do you make the same amount of money that the Saturday Evening Post does?—Senator James Couzens (Republican) of Michigan.

No, sir, and I doubt if we will ever make any money. Of course, we have some hopes along this line, but I doubt if we will.—M. H. Aylesworth, president National Broadcasting Co.

OFF THE ANTENNA

By ROBERT D. HEINL.

DURING a hearing at the Federal Radio Commission last week the question came up as to how successfully those living close to a broadcasting station were able to tune the station out. Whereupon one of the commissioners turned to F. P. Guthrie, manager of the Radio Corporation in the District, and asked: "You live near WRC do you not?

"Yes," Mr. Guthrie replied, "the transmitter is located at Fourteenth street and Park road and I live in Holmead place about 100 yards away."

"Do you have any trouble tuning out the station?" the R. C. A. official was asked further.

"No, indeed," he answered, "I am most always able to hear WJZ in New York."

Which the experts present seemed to agree was pretty good tuning, inasmuch as there is only a 20 kilocycle separation between WRC and WJZ, the former operating on 640 kilocycles with 500 watts power and the latter on 660 kilocycles with 30,000 watts power.

Considerable hilarity was aroused by a news service inadvertantly sending out the information that Judge Ira E. Robinson, of West Virginia, the new chairman of the Federal Radio Commission, was born in 1829, which would have made him 99 years old. As a matter of fact the judge was born in 1869. A correction quickly followed, but not before the jokesters had been heard from.

"I think it is highly desirable that we have gentlemen on the commission of mature thought and judgment, but isn't it going a little too far when the appointee is just one year this side of the century," a well-known radio manufacturer commented. "If the principal qualification for membership of the commission is to be old age, may I suggest to President Coolidge that I read the other day of an Indian down in Arizona who claims to be 143 years of age.

"I believe this Indian is wrong, but then he ought to make a good member of the commission. In fact, such liberality with figures should make him a valued and respected member of the commission, even if he did not know what it is all about, in which respect I feel sure he would not be without precedent."

"I have always felt that the Radio Commission suffered from extreme youth and I am glad they have got a man with the real spirit of old age to bring up the average," a broadcaster said.

"I suggest that when there is another vacancy on the commission the President should negotiate with Methuselah."

Those lucky enough to have picked up Station WBBM at Chicago a week ago Friday night doubtless realized that the large Eastern stations do not have a corner in putting on star performances.

It was the unannounced (in this part of the country at least) broadcasting of a testimonial to our fellow Washingtonian, Al Jolson, and also to Ted Healy and George Jessel from the Chicago Comedy Club. Among the others who took part were Gus Edwards, Paul Ash, Harry Rose, Donald Brian, Jack Osterman, Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians, Coon Sanders' Original Nighthawks, and many others.

At one stage of the performance, Ted Healy, who was master of ceremonies, when there was a lull in the receipt of telephone calls, which were pouring it, remarked that this was probably due to the fact that a great number of listeners were too weak from laughter to even lift their receivers off the hook. The broadcasting began at midnight our time and did not conclude until 3:30 o'clock in the morning.

A stiff denial has followed the intimation by Variety, the theatrical magazine, that several of the big movie stars were themselves not heard over the air recently, but that substitutes appeared instead. Radio officials declare there was no basis for the assertions and that the voices of the stars themselves were those broadcast. The Variety article which created the furore follows:

"Reports in New York that the broadcasting chamber in Hollywood was locked during the Dodge Radio Hour were followed by others to the effect that doubles acted for Dolores Del Rio and Norma Talmadge.

"Del Rio's Ramona song is said to have been sung by a professional. Another pro assumed the clothes talk accredited to Talmadge, it is said. Miss Talmadge is notoriously speechless at public events and the report of a double for her is accepted by the picture people.

"With United Artists stars on the air, the secrecy of the chamber was maintained even to the exclusion from it of U. A. executives, according to the story wafted East. A loud speaker in the gym of the studios was working with the listeners-in there, including the newspapermen and others barred from the chamber.

"Following the broadcast Charlie Chaplin remarked he nearly died while doing it, through mike fright, and was much worried as to how he had done.

"John Barrymore, from the account, did not take the radio thing seriously and appeared indifferent to it."

When broadcasting an all-American program from Washington recently, Capt. William J. Stannard, of the United States Army Band, expressed himself on the subject of American artists. Capt. Stannard declared:

"We have been slow to realize that the two great continents of the Western World are producing artists and craftsmen who are the equals and often the superiors of their European rivals; and we are yet far from overcoming the habit of considering a foreign label as a stamp of superexcellence.

"That is why there is such a ready market in this country for a Paris gown made in New York, a Swiss watch made in Cincinnati, or a Russian pianist born in Texas.

"Until very recently, about the only way an American musician could get a satisfactory recognition in this country was to go to Europe and come back with a name that could not be pronounced in English."

Despite the poor quality of program broadcasting by the Navy station NAA, the recent Latin-American music fiesta put on by Frank Adams again brought to mind the fact that the acoustics of the patio of the Pan-American Union are about as fine for broadcasting purposes as any we know about.

Oddly enough the acoustics are apparently as good with or without the roof—for at the Pan-American they have a trick roof by which the patio can be covered or uncovered at will.

QSO Local Radio Club and Amateur News

Conducted in Cooperation With the Washington Radio Club.

By J. R. CLOUGH.

At a recent meeting of the Washington Radio Club H. H Lyons, 3RP, former president of the club, acted as chairman, owing to the absence of the club president.

A free-for-all discussion took place concerning the shielded grid tube, and it was learned that European stations had been picked up with an audibility too loud to be comfortable when using head phones on this tube. The reception took place a short time ago by L. M. Edwards, 5PJ, of Enid, Okla., who attended the club meeting and spoke concerning his own experiments in using the shielded grid tube.

L. M. Edwards, who is licensed also in this radio district as 3VR, explained the use of the voltage doubling system in use at his station. Edwards also stated that he had worked French 8TF on the same evening of the club meeting and that prior to this he had worked German 4AGB, 2NIC, of Nicaragua, and 2JT, of Cuba. He handled some traffic from 2NIC to Arlington Station NAA, who did not hear 2NIC at the time.

Elizabeth Zandonini, 3CDQ, worked U. S. 1FMH, located in El Salvador, Central America, on March 19, 21 and 23, handling messages between 1FMH the operator at that end, and his brother, located here in Washington. Considerable traffic was handled, owing to the fact that prearranged contact had been established by mail.

It was learned that J. J. Lamb, 3CEI, has been asked to go to Hartford, Conn., by K. B. Warner, for the purpose of conducting the information service of the American Radio Relay League. 3CEI has accepted the offer and will leave shortly to take up his new duties.

3CDQ has been reported as being heard by the S. S. Wilhelmina, WMO, on March 11, when that ship was bound from San Francisco, Calif., to Honolulu, Hawaii. The ship operator is Ex-6EM.

Some of the visitors at the club meeting were J. G. Jester, 3APP; F. Grimes, 3AKO; L. Wood, 3ABE; D. Goldberg, and L. M. Edwards 5PJ.

BAND LEADER

WILLIAM J. STANNARD,
leader United States Army Band, will direct a series of spring concerts from the Army Band Barracks each Thursday evening during April and May from 7:15 to 8:15 o'clock through Station WMAL.

Saturday—9 p. m., "The Spring Maid," in Philco Hour, WRC.

THE RADIO EDITOR'S MAIL

Complains of WRHF.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: For several days it has been my intention to write you concerning station WRHF.

Every evening between the hours of 5:30 and 7 o'clock, this station monopolizes such a large portion of the dial that it is absolutely impossible to get other stations, principally KDKA, where very frequently excellent programs are broadcast during those hours. I do not see why they couldn't be given a lower wave length so they wouldn't interfere with other stations.

For instance, this morning I was listening to some excellent church music from KDKA and also Richmond, Va., when all of a suden WRHF came in like a clap of thunder, so there was nothing else to do but give up. I then looked in the paper for their schedule, but was unable to find any notice of a Sunday morning program. The same thing happened again this evening, and to tell the truth, really prompted this letter.

In closing, again let me say that I would like to see this station lower on the dial or else at least some variety in its programs. H. C. T.

Another WRHF Complaint.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: Too much jazz altogether. Allow a little of the best for those who like it. Squelch WRHF or place him where he does not interfere and drown all other sounds with his roar. Many crystal sets are unable to shut him out. For weeks he has stilled the beautiful dinner music from Waldorf-Astoria.

RADIO.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir:

When I think of the shimmering fabric of prayer and of song
That fills all spaces of God's everywhere
Between Fi skies in the stars and the air,
The glittering, tremulous fabric of love and of tears—
And of prayer—
The thoughts of a soul spun into light,
Heart's vesture lovely bright—
Ah, I wonder if the angels roll up the scroll?
I wonder if God's archives harvest the whole:
The tear-jeweled prayer,
The laughter-sweet song—
The splendor insistent that throbs in the air everywhere?

Strong for Havrilla.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: Alois Havrilla is the clearest, straight-forward speaker and best pronouncer of foreign names who speaks over the radio, and I think the best announcer. N. F. N.

An Appreciation.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: It is due you to express the deep enjoyment I gain each week from your unusual and excellent review of radio from the point of view of the listener-in.

I am a critical and rather captious reader of newspapers, and for a long time have been bored by most of the newspaper attempts to meet the needs of the radio tyro.

In your page you seem to have made a real discovery. I am tempted to call it the democratizing of criticism. For, instead of giving merely one man opinions on a program, you are, as it were, recording the general pulse and each week give us a very satisfactory consensus of the reaction of the public to radio's rapid evolution.

Your page, too, realizes, as do not others with which I am familiar, the fact that there is a marked community of interest among all radio users—a common tie which bridges wide disparities in tastes and interests and yet creates certain mutual interests, whether the listener be technically minded or merely in search of information or amusement via the ether.

We hear much about the "unseen audience." We well might also talk personally about the listener's individual "unseen friends or playmates of the air." Your page seems to bring me into closer and very pleasant contact with the many nameless good people whose password is the call letter of some favorite station.

It is good to know, via The Washington Post, more about these dialing associates living from coast to coast. I feel that by opening your forum to them you are not merely adding to your enjoyment, but are developing popular critical data that can not but prove highly useful to those who provide programs or equipment. G. W. W.

Fed Up on Celebrities.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: For a time it seemed as though radio program making might furnish us with a new art, but, apparently, it is not to be, for instead of originality in its own virgin field radio is aping the conventions, the devices and the dodges, all the standardized ideas of the periodical publisher and the theatrical producer.

For instance, hiring some past or present stage celebrity to act as master of ceremonies of a radio hour is merely borrowing from the book of the magazine editor who is more concerned with "names" than contributions. Pick up almost any magazine and you'll be bored to extraction trying to read a dull article signed by some so-called celebrity.

The same is true of the efforts of many of these much press-agented masters of ceremonies. Their microphonic outpourings are so painful as to make the listener blush with embarrassment. They are out of their milieu in the studio. Their wise cracks fall flat when the listener can not see their pantomime, slapstick or whatever else they need to put over their stuff. They are a total loss without footlights and full rows of perspiring citizens at $4.40 a head. It is pure cruelty to animals to put them on the air. Such sad exhibitions not only impair the reputations of these so-called stars but subject millions of innocent listeners to ordeals that are undeserved.

If there must be a master of ceremonies let it be some tried-and-true announcer who understands the limitations as well as the possibilities of the radio.. CHEVY CHASE.

A DX Amateur Speaks.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: There are four other amateurs in New Bedford, Mass., outside of H. H. Sargent, who have received upward of 500 stations. They are:

Irving Vermilya—1XE; WBBG; WNBH
J. T. Moriarty—OA; 4FUC; 1BZU; WIBH (ex-I. R. E.)
Shirley Davis—1X'L; WMAF
Lester I. Jenkins

These are some of the leading amateurs of the country. Vermilya was the first radio amateur in the U. S. A. and is an I. P. E. Shirley Davis has a wonderful experimental station, doing wonderful work in television-radio motion pictures. Jenkins was going strong as early as 1905.

The writer picked up NAA, East Pittsburgh, and Medford Hillside in their initial broadcasts, experimented with automatic relays—radio control—such as radio torpedoes, and of the 1,200 or so stations that have been broadcasting since the early days of KDKA and WGI the writer has approximately 500 to his credit. In addition, about 200 amateur phone stations. Practically all of the Canadian stations have been logged, and stations from Seattle to San Francisco on the West Coast, Texas stations, stations in Porto Rico, Cuba and Mexico are regularly logged.

The following stations have been picked up in Europe: Cardiff, Wales; Aberdeen, Scotland; London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Paris and Prague.

Station 2LO has been picked up about ten times. Buenos Aires has been picked up about the same number of times.

The best reception of all, though, was Prague, Czechoslovakia, and OAX, Lima, Peru, both about the same distance away. In fact, I have confirmations of having received Peru three times in one week and Aberdeen, Scotland, on one of those three nights.

With such a variety of features on the air it is hard to know which are the favorites, but if our readers will drop us a line as to their preferences we will be glad to keep an eye out for them.—Radio Editor.

One of the most important requisities in long distance reception is a proper ground system or counterpoise aerial. Personally, I am in favor of the counterpoise system affording as it does such sharpness in tuning, very necessary nowadays. In addition, the counterpoise does away with the use of the ground and the resulting ground noises—static. Aerials used are generally constructed of Springfield antenna or No 8. Tuning is quite an important factor A five tube neutrodyne set, not properly neutralized, will oscillate, and build up the weak signal in the radi frequency part of the set almost unbelievably This set is hard to control, but will sure bring in the distance, and is a favorite among the amateurs, with the six tube Radiola Super-hets or a Western Electric (home made) super next

The writer has seen Mr. Sargent's set, which is a home made neutrodyne. The parts used in his set he got from me

Wants to Hear Fosdick.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: It has become my habit to look at your notes each morning to find out what is really worth while in the day's programs.

Today you failed me, in that you did not mention that Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick was to speak at the noonday service brought from the Palace Theater, New York City. It was by the merest chance that I had turned my switch and got his address. Please do not fail again to give notice of any time Dr Fosdick is to speak. A. E. B.

Irving Berlin Noises!

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: Jazz is anathema. So are jazz "twins," singers who shriek or bellow, singers who can't sing, all women singers. We always tune out on the above. Also on "B-i-u-e-s" and the Irving Berlin noises. A. P.

March 13.

Sounded as If in Pain.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: Noting all the jazz-hounds' letters in your Sunday edition, I hereby enter my protest against jazz.

There is no melody to jazz. It all sounds alike. There is nothing but a thump, thump, thump on banjos or some other stringed instrument. I challenge any one to be able to tell one jazz tune from another by radio.

I agree with some of the jazz hounds that some of the radio selections are mournful. There was a strange-sounding soprano voice that broke in while Mary Garden was singing. This strange-sounding voice sounded as if she was in great pain. I believe she was singing a "blue" song. There is a man's voice that does the same colicky act while good music is coming over the radio. One night she sang nearly an hour, and the song was all on the same strain.

J. D. Durkee and E. K. Jett, signing themselves "Radio Control, Navy Department," in your Sunday edition, may be able to explain why that "tooting" is kept up all through the night, especially when grand opera is being sent out by radio. It is not possible that Navy messages take all day and all night to be delivered in. At times it sounds as if some one was practicing.

If my suggestion is worth anything, give programs of grand operas, bright, cheerful songs, as we have enough to contend with without having a soprano voice come floating in with "Long, Long Ago" or "The Vacant Chair."

As for WRC, some of its programs have been wonderfully good, and some of them fierce. "Smith Brothers," instead of using cough drops, should have taken a couple of gin fizzes or a whisky toddy, as that would take the plaintive sound out of their voices.

Give us melodious selections, bright, cheerful; cut out the weepy "blue" songs by untrained voices. Put in your jazz for three-quarters of an hour to satisfy the jazz hounds. Cut out all long talks. About all of the speakers are troubled with catarrh and are ignorant of elocution. J. P. S.

Protests Cutting Off Roxy.

To the Radio Editor of the Post—Sir: I do not know of any better reason for people buying radio sets than Roxy's programs, but the radio interests have a short memory when they cut us off on Monday night from Roxy's program to give us "Great Moments in History." Why is it necessary for WRC to tell us every three minutes who operates or owns WRC?

I wish some of the announcers would follow the example of George Ross or Wentworth. P. B. P.

Protests Weather Reports and Jazz.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice that of all the letters that are written to you, not one of them suggests to you anything regarding the interference by the Naval Radio at Arlington, Va., which broadcasts the weather report every night about 10 o'clock.

It seems a pity that there should be so many selfish people who write you, and all they think about is a whole lot of jazz, which, to my mind, I consider nothing but junk thrown to the winds.

What about the aged and the poor and the infirm who are shut in day after day, and are unable to go out? The radio is their only comfort and why can't they enjoy listening to good music without being interfered with by a lot of weather information and rotten jazz music?

Something should be done and done right away or as soon as possible. I wrote a letter to the Radio Commission, but received a card and nothing has been done about the matter. I am for a better radio program and not a lot of junk which the public are being fed up with.

I wish to see this in the radio editor's mail of The Sunday Washington Post.

Thanking you and wishing you the best of health.—J. C.

March 19.

ON THE AIR THIS WEEK

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE will accept a statue of Andrew Jackson, seventh President of the United States, to be placed in Statuary Hall in the Capitol Building, Washington, during ceremonies which will be broadcast through WRC at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The statue will be presented by Gov. Henry H. Horton of Tennessee during a brief address, and Andrew Jackson 4th will unveil it after Gov. Horton makes the speech of presentation. The exercises will be held in the Capitol.

Addresses will also be made by Claude G. Bowers, Jackson's foremost biographer; Mrs. James Caldwell, representing patriotic societies in Andrew Jackson's district; Mrs. A. S. Buchanan, State regent of the Tennessee Chapter of the D. A. R., and Mrs. Alfred J. Brousseau, president general of the D. A. R. A musical program will be provided by the United States Marine Band.

The service from WRC at 11 o'clock this morning will be broadcast from the First Church of Christ, Scientist. Because of the unveiling of the statue of Andrew Jackson, Dr. Daniel A. Poling's service will not be heard through WRC this afternoon. However, the service will be broadcast by Station WEAF, his subject being "The Right of Might."

The service from Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral will be broadcast at 4 o'clock.

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman will speak from WEAF at 4 o'clock, his subject for this afternoon being "Bunyan, the Great Dreamer." "Beyond Reason" will be the subject of an address by the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, D. D., during the national religious service from Station WJZ at 5:30 o'clock.

Lea Luboshutz, Russian violinist, will be heard through Station WRC at 9:15 o'clock tonight. Mme. Luboshutz is a native of Odessa, where she was given her first instruction on the violin by her father. This ground-work was followed by study at the Moscow Conservatory of Music, and instruction under the Belgian violinist, Eugene Ysaye.

Channing Pollock, playwright, is scheduled to speak on a subject concerning the stage during the program to be broadcast at 8:15 o'clock tonight over WJZ. An hour later Maj. Gen. William R. Smith, superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point, will deliver a talk on athletics and sports at the academy from the same station.

The Roxy Theater's mixed chorus, under the direction of Charles Previn, will be featured during the broadcast at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night.

Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican, of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Mary T. Norton, Democrat), of New Jersey, will be guest speakers in the "Voter's Service" program at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening.

William Wallace's "Maritana" will be broadcast for the first time by the National Grand Opera Ensemble at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday.

The National High School Orchestra, made up of 270 of the finest high school musicians in America, directed by Frederick Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, will present a program from the ballroom of the Stevens Hotel in Chicago at 9 o'clock Wednesday, through Station WJZ.

Mabel Garrison, American coloratura soprano, will be the guest artist during the Maxwell Hour at 9 o'clock Thursday evening through WJZ and the blue network.

Heinrich Reinhardt's "The Spring Maid" will be the offering of the Philco Hour at 9 o'clock next Saturday night. As usual, Miss Dragonette will sing the title role.

MUSIC CONDUCTOR

NATHANIEL SHILKRET,
well-known conductor, who is responsible for many of the fine orchestral numbers heard over the air during various radio hours.

AMATEURS IN RADIO ARE EXPERIMENTING WITH SHORT WAVES

Special Order Gives Them the Use of 30,000-28,000-Kilocycle Band.

NUMBER OF OPERATORS NOW IS SET AT 18,000

Youthful Dabblers Contribute Much Valuable Knowledge to Science.

Down in the nether regions of the radio spectrum, ofttimes referred to as radio's "purgatory," the amateurs are proceeding to experiment in their own happy-go-lucky noncommercial way. The 18,000 amateur radio operators, most of them mere youths, having been deprived of much of their "playground" in the ether by the recent international radiotelegraph treaty, have just plucked a "plum" from the sparsely supplied baskets of the Federal Radio Commission.

By special order they have had opened for their use the band between 30,000 and 28,000 kilocycles (9.99 and 10.71 meters). This complies with the provisions of the International Radiotelegraph Convention signed at Washington last autumn and recently ratified by the United States Senate. It adds another amateur radiotelephone band to the few left open for amateur operation under the treaty, namely: 64,000 to 56,000 kilocycles (4.69 to 5.35 meters), 3,550 to 3,500 (84.5 to 85.7 meters), 2 000 to 1,715 kilocycles (150 to 175 meters).

What do the amateurs want with channels so far down in the spectrum? They simply desire to experiment, to "tackle" the problem of ultra-short waves were others, presumably better versed in the radio science, disdain to tread.

Are Real Trail Blazers.

"A great deal of experimental activity in this band may now be expected," said K. B. Warner, secretary of the American Radio Relay League, enthusiastic over his successful mission to Washington recently to get the 10-meter band opened up. "Normal methods of operating don't seem to apply on waves that short. New and novel methods, possibly involving curious antennas and reflectors, may have to be devised before the problem is solved.

And Government radio officials were equally enthusiastic. Over and over again, they have said the amateurs have done a good work. The youthful dabblers in radio for-the-fun-of-it have contributed some valuable knowledge to the science of short wave transmission, now one of the most important commercial factors in radio. Their remarkable and sometimes freakish communications with amateurs in other lands have been more than mere oddities to radio scientists. Their pick-up of explorers' messages and relays to the newspapers and their emergency work during catastrophies such as the Mississippi and New England floods are too well known to bear detailed repetition.

Bands to Be Reduced.

"As a result of the recent international radio conference," Mr. Warner said in an interview, "the bands available for amateurs become materially reduced at the beginning next year. As a partial compensation for that, we are offered new band at 10 meters. Our bands will be so congested at that time that we simply must be able to make use of the 10-meter waves to cary a share of amateur activity.

"Yet new methods must be developed before this is possible. For that reason we requested the Federal Radio Commission not to wait until next year, but to turn the band over to us now, so that development work might start immediately with a reasonable hope of making the new band yield up its secrets before the year

Automobile Now Silent, Old Noises Eliminated

Refinements of Today, Especially in Engine, Have Removed Squeaks, Clicks and Groans With Which Cars Used to Talk Back to Owners.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

One of the effects of the refinement of the modern motor cars—a trend that extends from the bottom to the top—is that the 1928 automobile is one that will not talk back to its owner. It is an effect that, while definitely desirable, nevertheless places a new responsibility upon the owner, a responsibility he may recognize and meet with distinct benefit to his car upkeep budget.

The models of other years did talk back. When the owner forgot to have various units serviced in the right way and at the right time, in a language of squeaks, clicks, roars and groans, they upbraided him for his indifference or ignorance. Like a baby whose bottle is behind schedule, the older cars made no secret of their indignation.

Today's cars, however, are refined, silent. This characteristic, while it does not rank in importance with appearance or performance, nevertheless is universally satisfying. The buyer of such a car, in the opinion of qualified observers, would do well to realize that this virtue is not due to the simple fact that they are new and all the parts fit snugly. The silence of the modern car is built into its various features. Just how it has been done provides one of the most interesting chapters of the story of the motor car now finding its way into the hands of millions.

Noises in Engine.

The noisiest part of the car always has been the engine, and the most blatant part of the engine always has been the valve gear. No part of the valve mechanism really has been innocent in the matter of creating noise. Starting with the camshaft, the tappets, push rods, valve springs, the valves themselves and even the valve seats have contributed their bit to the large quota of unpleasant sound that issued from the upper part of the engine. Similarly, starting with the camshaft and working up to the valve itself, the engineer has brought silence where noise used to abound. The cam contour was sharp pointed before and when it struck the tappet if there was the slightest wear—the blow was turned into a resounding whack. Cam contours today, in many cars, are comparatively flat. This contributes to silent valve action and, of great importance, induces longer life for valve faces and valve seats. Thus, two birds were killed with one stone.

More than this, however, has been accomplished in connection with the latest type of valve gearing. In the best of cars, heretofore, speed has had the effect of loosening up the valves, throwing them out of adjustment. This, naturally, has been more noticeable in some engines than in others but, in varying degree, it has been true that speed and precise, noiseless valve operation were not congenial bedfellows.

New valve designs, new materials in valve construction, larger valves and larger valve seats, springs that no longer are guilty of wild distortion at high speeds—all these have come into the picture to make valve operation more efficient and less noisy after the accelerator has been depressed.

However, if valves do not get out of adjustment so quickly and if, when they do they are less vituperative in their announcement of that fact, the issue of keeping an occasional check upon them is put squarely up to the car owner. Where noise once told him of valve inefficiency, he now must look for other symptoms. Loss of compression, marked by the diminution of power, speed, and acceleration, are the new signs by which he must conquer off-color performance from his car's excellent power plant.

Until this time, one of the most annoying of car noises has been that produced by the matching of engine and driving gear apparatus. The use of rubber and small coiled spring members in the clutch—a general practice today—has routed discordant chorus. Fine! But, this noise formerly made the car owner suspicious and he had periodic inspections of this vital mechanism made in order to confirm or refute his suspicions. This practice led frequently to the discovery of wear, excessive play, and the like, that was checked before it could do any harm. The absence of this old warning sign, however, can be an unmitigated blessing if the owner of one of the new models will follow the simplest rules of car care which call for regular and adequate lubrication and periodic checking up. The demand is most clearly reasonable in the fact of the reward it confers upon the motorist who has one of the late models.

Former Bodies Were Loose.

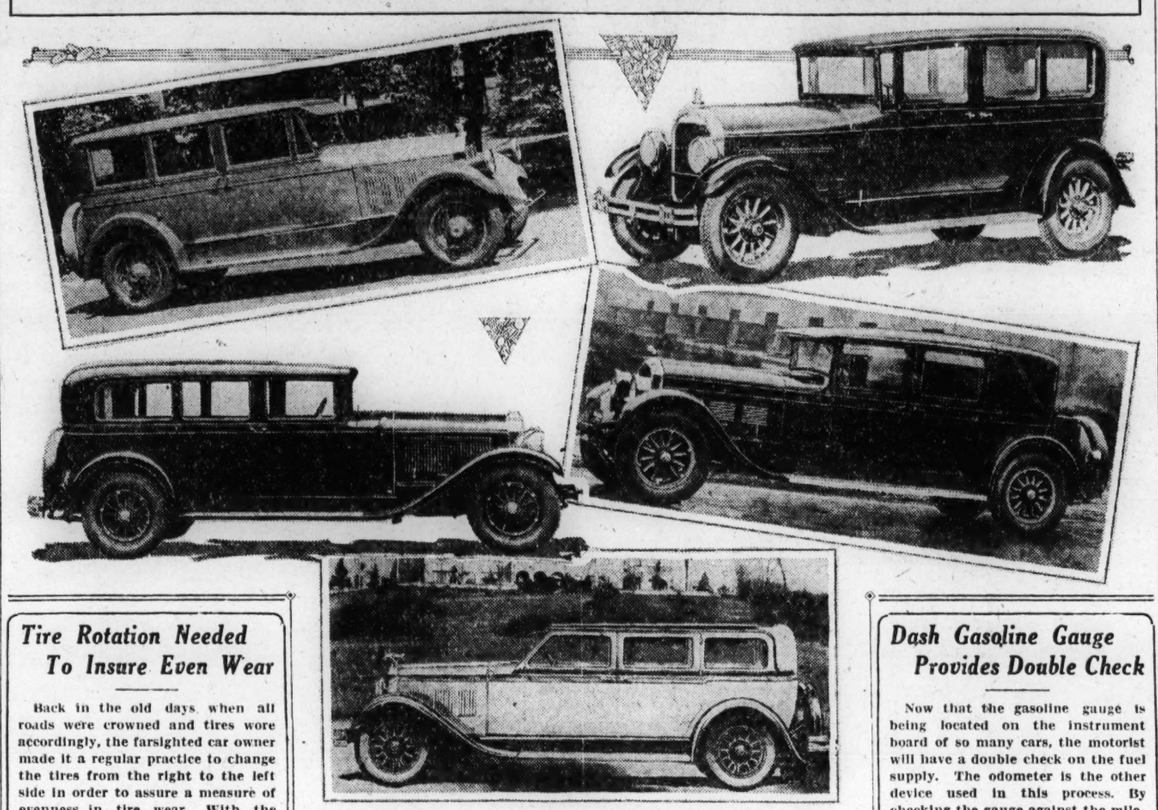

The body of today's car, of necessity, has been given a ruggedness that makes possible use of the higher powered engines now so popular. The old body would not have stood up under the heavy, twisting strains imparted by the average power plant of today. Even with a less vigorous engine, the bodies of yesterday's cars were susceptible to looseness, and the reult was weaving and noise. There has come into general practice in body building today a tendency to take care of looseness that may develop by insulating various units of the car's upper structure.

This, of course, was practiced to a limited degree before, but on nothing like the scale that it has been adopted today.

Because this insulation hides the noise that was symptomatic of body looseness and weaving the motorist

INDICATING THAT WHEEL BASE IS NOT TO BE MEASURED VISUALLY

A mere glance or even a searching look will not enable the average observer of motor cars today to say definitely that this one is longer than that. There is a difference of 20 inches between the smallest and largest of the five cars pictured above, but it is to be doubted whether this difference is visually determinable. The Pierce-Arrow, upper left, is 138 inches between hub caps; the Locomobile 8-80, upper right, is 130. In the center, the Stearns-Knight and the Stutz boast of 145-inch wheel base. Below is the Velie 8-88, the smallest car in the illustration, which has only 125 inches of wheel base, but it does not look to be so short by any means.

Tire Rotation Needed To Insure Even Wear

Back in the old days when all roads were crowned and tires wore accordingly, the farsighted car owner made it a regular practice to change the tires from the right to the left side in order to assure a measure of evenness in tire wear. With the coming of the uncrowned road the gesture no longer is made.

However, if the car owner will look at the tires he will find wear still to be uneven. There still are some uncrowned roads and other factors to account for the wear, and tire rotation, at times, helps.

Book Doesn't Say So.

Mother may tell Willie not to swing on the sedan door, but the specifications book does not. In connection with the wallopings Willie gets for this bad habit, it is interesting to note that the average closed car door is built to withstand the weight of a 200 pound man who suddenly might give way to an impulse to swing on it.

Dropping the center of the floor immediately under the place where the car will stand is one way to facilitate keeping the garage clean.

Many experienced motorists confess that they still do not feel at ease or familiar with their position when backing the car

Clean, Then Use Grease.

The cleaner the grease or oil, the better it lubricates. All motorists know this fact, which makes it more surprising that, when using the grease gun, they wait until after the operation before wiping off the fittings. The nipples should be cleaned thoroughly before the gun is applied if abrasive is not to be forced in with the oil or grease. It is no harder to clean them then and it means much.

Backfiring through the carburetor is the product of operating an engine on too lean a mixture.

Oils marketed under different trade names are of different viscosities, and the car owner who keeps this in mind will forestall the possibility of damage to vital engine parts by using too light or too heavy a lubricant.

Dash Gasoline Gauge Provides Double Check

Now that the gasoline gauge is being located on the instrument board of so many cars, the motorist will have a double check on the fuel supply. The odometer is the other device used in this process. By checking the gauge against the mileage, over a certain period, the motorist can get a fairly accurate idea of just what gasoline performance the car is yielding.

It will delay the dire experience of running out of gas which filling stations and motor clubs find still to be quite a common occurrence.

Time Ripe for Change.

Oil filter cartridges are good for 10,000 miles. Beyond this, the filter is likely to become so completely clogged that the oil is forced to utilize the bypass to reach the engine. Spring makes an ideal time to change the cartridge. Thousands of them are in serious need of replacement without the owner being aware of it.

French Bandits Called Chauffeurs During Terror

Word Denotes Person Who Burns or Roasts to Locate Hiding Place of Victims' Valuables—Argument With Fare Replaces Old Practice.

While special precautions are taken to prescribe the fitness of persons to drive automobiles, extra caution is exercised by public authorities everywhere to see to it that persons who are employed to drive cars are not only capable but fully responsible and of good character.

The popular term applied to persons who are employed to drive cars is "chauffeur," and in some cities a special chauffeur's license is issued. In the District of Columbia the one operator's permit is issued to all persons regardless of its use, but a distinction is made in licensing those who make the operation of a car a means of livelihood.

The distinction is not made because of the fact that one is employed, but instead is made between those who drive privately owned vehicles and those who are engaged to drive cars for hire. They are termed hackers, and a special hacker's license is issued. The traffic bureau of the Police Department maintains an inspection force to insure observance of regulations relating to hackers.

To obtain employment as a hacker, one must be 21 years old and make special application for a license. In doing so, he must present references and is required to be known by these references for at least a year. The license issued is required to be displayed in the vehicle along with the photograph of the licensee.

So far as the private chauffeur is concerned, District regulations leave his fitness beyond ability to drive to his employer on the ground that the public is not so directly affected as in the case of the hacker who solicits public patronage.

But be the regulations as they may, all who are employed to drive cars are chauffeurs to the public, and on the word turns an interesting story.

Although the word chauffeur is given its place in the language as a motoring term, its origin may be traced to days much beyond the age of automotive transportation. Where now the individual who answers to that description is a respected member of society, then he was no more nor less than a bandit. To those who have had unpleasant experiences with men who preside at the wheel of a public automobile, this may seem to be a fitting description, but that is quite beside the question, and to invoke an old adage, the exception merely proves the rule.

The fact remains that a chauffeur used to be a bandit, and practiced what was recognized as banditry. This immediately suggests the question as to how an outlaw could have evolved into a trusted servant.

Chauffeur, of course, comes from the French language, and denotes a person who burns or roasts and the roasting, so the story goes, actually was accomplished by the bandits who roamed northeastern France during the riotous days of the Reign of Terror. To combat the perilous conditions which prevailed for life and property, the nobility took every means to secrete their property and protect it against the depredations of the lawless element that had been given free rein.

Criminals knew of this hiding of property, and to force the location of the secret hiding place they took to roasting the feet of men and women to compel them to tell where they had hidden their valuables. To these bandits were given the name chauffeur, or in other words, burners. In the early part of the nineteenth century, forceful measures were taken by the government to suppress these horrible practices.

So when the word came to be associated with automobiles, it had a much more respectable meaning. It was then applied to the mechanic who was carried in the car to look after the machinery and the fuel. The word had been used to designate a fireman or stoker, and it was a natural step to apply it to the man who looked after the fuel of an automobile, and then to the driver. At first it was the designation of all who drove cars, but gradually it came to mean, as it does now, those who are employed for that purpose.

But one may rest assured that the burning idea has been quite effectively suppressed, and the nearest the chauffeur's occupation may approach it is likely to be the heated argument in which he occasionally engages with his fare.

May Mean New Drums.

There is only one safe course to pursue when brake linings have worn so thin that further adjustment is impossible. That is to have them replaced. There is another point which might well be considered. Bad linings are hard on the drums. If allowed to remain in service, such linings make it necessary for the motorist to replace the drums, too, when he finally gets around to putting the brakes into good condition. That's more expensive.

OUT on the great proving grounds of the nation's highways—where driver vies with driver and car meets car in all kinds of friendly contests—today's high-powered Chandler is the victor of victors!

It is absolutely spectacular the way today's Chandler outsprints its contenders in traffic—and outclimbs them on steep hills—and outruns them in straight going.

And the reason is anything but a secret: Chandler has further increased the power of its Pikes Peak engine principle—in its new Sixes as well as its new Royal Eights.

You'll find, too, that any new Chandler you drive is much the easiest car to control you ever knew. And the reason for this is Westinghouse Vacuum Brakes—three times safer than any kind of mechanical or hydraulic brakes that depend entirely upon muscular pressure.

Easy, too, to lubricate the chassis. Just push a plunger and Chandler's "One Shot" System automatically lubricates the car from end to end. No fuss. No time out. Money saved.

And just look around and compare other cars with Chandler for beauty. See how sumptuously Chandler endows its new Sixes and Royal Eights with all the trappings and trimmings of elegance. No skimping, no cutting corners anywhere.

Chandler is Chandler-built—through and through—in Chandler's great $10,000,000 plant. Built step by step with zealous care in strictest conformity to the hard and fast rules of quality and accuracy.

Don't buy a new car without seeing and driving today's Chandler. Thirty magnificent models—$995 to $2195, f. o. b. factory—and the finest cars $995 to $2195 can command.

WEEK-END TOURING SCHEDULE IS URGED FOR D.C. MOTORIST

Is Key to Pleasant Summer, in Opinion of Veteran Motor Car Dealer.

WIDE VARIETY IN SCENE OFFERED IN SMALL AREA

Three State Capitals, Historic and Recreational Points but Few Hours Away.

Many delightful experiences await the Washington motor car owner who, to a certain degree, at least, organizes his summer touring schedule with an idea of making at least one trip to the many points of interest near enough to the National Capital to be within the range of the week-end traveler. Radiating from the Capital City in every direction are excellent highways along which lie an amazing variety of places to capture the fancy of every one, yet there are a surprisingly large number of local motorists who never have tasted of the delights of week-end touring that this area holds.

This point is made by Rudolph Jose, local automobile dealer, and it is his suggestion that the motor car can be put to a greater measure of usefulness in many ways, if the Washington motorist will begin now to map a week-end touring program to be followed during the months just ahead.

Many Tastes Gratified.

"To the north, south, east and west, the Washington motorist will find good highways, running through areas that are exceptionally rich in scenic, historic, recreational, educational and other forms of interest," says Mr. Jose. "Whatever one's taste, or humor at the moment, it can be gratified quickly, effectively, and as inexpensively as one chooses. There is Gettysburg, for instance, the greatest American battlefield, which lies within three hours of Washington. Antietam is another historic site. Harper's Ferry and Frederick fall into the same classification.

"The beautiful Shenandoah Valley is a point of interest that offers a great deal to the motorist who places it upon his summer touring schedule. It is one of the most popular trips in the entire area, and thousands take it several times during every summer. It is the more strange, then, that there are in Washington tens of thousands who never have taken this delightful week-end drive.

"Annapolis, Maryland's beautiful capital, is within an hour and a half of Washington. Certainly it commends itself to every one, whatever his special interest may be. Its colonial architecture, its capitol building, its Naval Academy, located on the beautiful Severn River and the Chesapeake Bay and many other features of genuine appeal should be seen by every Washingtonian, especially those who own motor cars.

"To the south, but farther away, lies another wonderful State capital, Richmond. One could spend much longer than a day seeing the many places of interest in this historic city, but it offers irresistible inducements for the week-end drive.

"Five hours away, over a wonderful highway, to the north lies a third capital, Harrisburg, Pa. It, too, has many sights of interest. The drive on Front street, following the beautiful Susquehanna River for several miles, is one that every motorist should take.

"To the south there are innumerable places offering the best forms of summer recreation, fishing, swimming and boating. The Eastern Shore of Maryland is another area that the motor tourist should put upon his schedule."

The Washington car owner has only himself to blame for his failure to visit these places and others, and to make their delights his own, says Mr. Jose. Roads are the very best, and if one is found to be so popular that conquestion is great, there are alternate routes that may be classed as excellent.

The motor car, he says, offers the National Capital resident an opportunity to become acquainted with the great richness of the area for miles around. The way to make this possible is to organize a touring schedule and carry it out in the months just ahead, he declares in conclusion.

Looking Over the Cars

Some of the Points You May Have Missed

By FRANK J. CARMODY

Planetary type transmissions did not disappear with the Model T Ford, after all. The fact that one is used as an auxiliary system on the new Model A trucks means that there is kept alive a type of control that several million drivers can say they "learned on."

On the subject of light trucks and commercial vehicles, it is interesting to note that the automotive industry is seemingly determined to drive the horse out of his last field of metropolitan usefulness. Heretofore the horse has resisted all efforts to dislodge him from preeminence where door-to-door delivery of light products such as milk and bread were concerned. The low, step-in truck which is operated from a standing position probably will change the situation. Incidentally, Chevrolet, is the latest with such a vehicle.

Regardless of the designation, these nation-wide displays by dealers in certain lines of cars attract attention on a big scale. Yet, the terminology is interesting. In four such expositions held recently, three different terms have been used. Cadillac and Lincoln had "salons." Chrysler held "open house." Buick called its display a "style show." All of which emphasizes the fact that motor car merchandising is becoming more and more artistic. Why not? The cars of today certainly measure up to the adjective.

Looking over the used cars, the conclusion is inescapable that what is needed to give them the recognition they deserve is more adjectives. There are all kinds of used cars. They include many that might be labeled "barely used," "carefully used," "scarcely used," and yet they are all grouped under the one word "used." Of course, no dealer denies there are some that must be classified as "horribly used." Still, he is sending more and more of this kind to the junk heap. The man who can not afford a new car and yet is "afraid" of the used car market, really is several years behind in his knowledge. That's a bad way to be.

The ingenuity of the automotive industry is amazing. Give it a dilemma and it will give one a solution in about as short a time as it is humanly possible to do so. There have been many manifestations of this in the building of cars. More rarely, but just as emphatic, are some not definitely related to automotive engineering. Oakland provides an instance. Its new-finished building was heated, prior to the installation of the regular heating plant, by two huge freight locomotives rented for that purpose.

The speed of the passenger car manufacturer's production has somewhat swamped the parts maker, and, even the dealer with respect to a knowledge of who is making certain important engine accessories. On a car introduced not so long ago, a metropolitan dealer told a prospective buyer that the car was equipped with a certain make of carburetor. He was wrong. Some of them were and some were not. The company's production was so high that it had to buy from two carburetor makers to fill its needs. It is true of a host of car parts. It keeps the retailer on his toes to know just what is what.

Looking over the cars last week resulted in contact with a salesman whose attitude might well become general if viewed from the standpoint of those who buy automobiles. The conversation, naturally, was all about cars—about all cars, but specifically those in the competitive group to which the salesman's product belonged. Did he knock the others as they were mentioned? He did not. On the contrary, he declared that the chief competitor of his own car was one of the easiest driving machines on the market, not excluding many of higher price. The salesman proved himself to be a delightful companion and, all other things being equal, the kind the average car buyer would prefer to patronize.

Speaking of salesmen from the standpoint of the buyer who tries to keep up with everything in the automotive field, there appears to be no reason why the sales argument should include denunciatory references to competitive products. A close knowledge of any specific car will provide enough positive arguments in favor of its purchase. That, after all, is what the new car shopper wants. When he calls upon a salesman he is seeking information as to why he should buy that particular car, not why he should not buy a competitive product.

MODERN CAR SILENT; OLD NOISE ROUTED

should not assume that he no longer needs to worry about the periodic task of having the body bolts tightened. In spite of their remarkable contributions in this respect, car makers still caution the car buyer to let the service station make this adjustment, if needed, after the machine has been put through the conventional breaking-in process.

Other units might be cited to substantiate the point that the oldest and best known symptom of car ills—noise—has been left behind. The passing of this symptom marks the acquisition of something really valuable by the 1928 car buyer.

But, also, it marks the need for him to acquire new knowledge in diagnosing possible illnesses to which his new car may be subject. This done, the squeak and groan period's passing will be, like beauty, a joy forever.

MODERN AUTO LACQUER HIGHLY IMPROVED FINISH

Gives as Much Protection as Four Coats of Old Commodity Supplied.

NEW METHOD EMPLOYED

One coat of the lately developed lacquer finish for automobiles gives as much protection as three or four applications of the earlier lacquers. The improvement is due to the discovery of a method of producing this type of finish in a highly concentrated form of low viscosity, according to Dr. E. C. Given, research engineer of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., speaking before the annual meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

The modern lacquer, he says, is composed of a solution of pyroxylin, plasticizer and resin or gum, into which a suitable pigment or combination of pigments has been ground. The material used to dissolve these ingredients is a mixture of solvent and non-solvent, or diluent in proper proportion.

"When a lacquer dries," he says, "the solvents and nonsolvents evaporate, leaving a film consisting of the solid ingredients. In the older oil-type paint and varnish finishes the oil takes up oxygen slowly from the air and is thereby changed from a liquid to a solid. Therefore it is said that a lacquer dries by evaporation and a paint by oxidation.

"The qualities of durability are all influenced by the composition of the lacquer. Too low a ratio of pyroxylin to other clear ingredients will produce a finish that will either craze or check. Too high a ratio will impair the adhesion. The kind of pigment used and the proportion of pigment as compared with the nonpigment solids also have a marked effect on the durability. Actual long-time outdoor exposure of the finished lacquer seems to be the only sure method of testing for this quality.

"High-grade lacquer finishes are being applied at present with only three minutes' drying between coats at 125 degrees Fahrenheit. After the last coat is applied it is advisable to dry for about 15 minutes at the same temperature before the sanding operation. Adequate ventilation is necessary in the drying chamber, as lacquers dry by evaporation. This schedule is about all that could be desired."

Varnish Improves Old Steering Wheel

One part of the car which sooner or later loses its fine finish is the steering wheel made of wood. Of course, the new and now widely used rubber-rimmed wheel with metal spider is different, but so far only a small proportion of the cars in service are so equipped.

A little varnish will remove the traces of hard service from the wood wheel which has lost its first rosy flush. After all, the steering wheel is one of the most visible units of the car's interior.

The ammeter does not show the amount of current being taken from the battery during the starting process, although some motorists make the mistake of assuming that it does.

Development of looseness in the steering may be found due to wear in the king pin and its correlative units.

JOHN SMITH and HIS CAR

Being the Experiences of a Typical Motorist

By FREDERICK C. RUSSELL

Modern Tire Troubles.

"I don't believe I'm going to get as much mileage out of this new set of tires as I did from the old ones," Smith remarked while checking over his tires the other day. "One of these front tires is showing some noticeable signs of wear and you'll find that this left rear one also has some bad spots on it."

"There's nothing wrong with your tires; it's just your driving," I told him.

Like hundreds of thousands of other car owners who are driving the more modern machines, particularly those involving some of the newer features, Smith has learned that his tires are being subjected to new abuses, but only in a vague sort of way. Most of the wear and tear on tires too often is viewed as weaknesses in the tires themselves.

Taking a short drive with Smith easily explained this recently changed situation with regard to tires. Smith's car has a flexible, powerful engine, but instead of utilizing the surplus power carefully and wisely he steps on the gas when it isn't necessary and, in a way, that actually is detrimental to the rest of the car. Several times on the drive he spun the rear wheels in his haste to get away. In bringing the car to a halt there was the same evidence of disregard for the tires.

Conditions Are Different.

American car owners are beginning to pay the penalty for failing to realize that conditions are changing. They do no see the baleful effects of higher speed on tires. They miss the significant fact that efficient spring control devices have made it possible to ride with comfort over roads which are anything but conducive to good tire wear. They forget in considering tire performance that traffic complexity and other conditions have created a deluge of sudden starting and stopping that helps to reduce the life of the average tire.

A typical example of the attitude of the average motorist was given by Smith in the manner of parking the car at the end of our trip.

"Anyhow this car steers easily," he observed.

"And that's just one of the things that's helping to wear out your tires," I reminded him. "With your former car the difficulty of steering would have encouraged you to use a little more skill in backing into this space, but now that twisting the front wheels is such an easy job you prolong it unnecessarily. But you're paying for it in rubber."

One of the things now passing almost unnoticed is the fact that more and more highways are absolutely level from shoulder to shoulder. This is in direct contrast to the former type of road which was crowned and for which the front wheels of an automobile were specifically designed. It is worth noting that several of the most advanced types of cars coming through at present show only a slight degree of pitch to the front wheels. In an earlier period the front wheels leaned outward very noticeably, as everyone will recall.

Wheel Pitch Helpful.

This leaning was for the purpose of keeping the front wheels more truly at right angles to the plane of that particular portion of the road surface over which they ran. This is easily understood when one pictures the right front wheel of an automobile on a road which is higher in the center than at the sides. If the right front wheel were strictly perpendicular to an actual plane of the earth it would be running too much on a slant when going over a crowned road, but by pitching the wheel at its king pin it is made to run in such a way that it rolls more efficiently over the road.

As temperature is an important factor in tire life, it is obvious that as road speeds increase, as acceleration and deceleration become more and more pronounced, tires tend to become disintegrated through the increased heat. It is a fact already established that tires last longer, all other things being equal, in colder climates than in warmer ones. What we are doing with our automobile tires in all climates is to aggravate the deteriorating effects of heat by increasing the friction at the points of contact between the rubber and the road.

Smith concluded that his tires must be very wonderful things to give him the remarkable service they do, despite the fact that he never had given them any consideration which might have led to helping them be more helpful to him.

The car owner who doubts the accuracy of the hydrometer test of the battery may satisfy his doubt by putting a voltmeter on the device.

ABILITY TO STOP HELD DRIVING SPEED CHECK

Brake Efficiency Vital Factor in Control of Auto, Experts Declare.

TRUCK EXPERIENCE CITED

Urging the motorist to consider deceleration as well as acceleration, Dr. F. C. Stanley, an authority on automobile brakes points out that although very few cars can pick up speed at a rate of more than 10 feet per second, many can slow down at 25 feet per second if the tires do not slide. Speaking before the California section of the Society of Automotive Engineers, Dr. Stanley, who is associated with the Raybestos Co., declared that driving speed should be governed by a closer knowledge of stopping speed.

"Assuming a normal coefficient of friction between tires and road, a car with two wheel brakes can not be stopped from a speed of 20 miles an hour in less than 37 feet, while four wheel brakes reduce the theoretical distance to slightly more than 22 feet," he declared.

Adequate brakes are as necessary on commercial vehicles, said Dr. Stanley, as on passenger cars. On this phase of the subject, F. R. Maulsby, of the American Railway Express Co., said that brakes that have been good enough in the Middle West are not satisfactory on the Pacific Coast, where distances are great, speeds high and grades frequent. If a two-ton truck having a gross weight with load of 10,000 pounds is brought to a stop from a speed of 40 miles an hour in a distance of 150 feet, a kinetic energy of 537,000 pounds must be absorbed. This is equal to enough heat to raise the temperature of two quarts of water from the freezing to the boiling point in 5 1-10 seconds.

Road speeds of 60 miles an hour are common for the motorcoaches of the California Transit Co., said N. B. Burkness, of that company, and the brake requirements are very exacting for a vehicle weighing with load from 25,000 to 35,000 pounds. Air brakes are being used, with 150 pounds per square inch air pressure.

Loose, crushed stone is about as hard a driving surface as automobile tires are called upon to traverse.

RULES FOR MOTORCOACH INCLUDED IN NEW CODE

Regulations Based on Two Years of Study of Problem by Committee.

DIMENSIONS ARE FIXED

Including all the motorcoach specifications believed essential for safe and comfortable passenger transportation a code of regulations has been evolved following two years' work by a committee whose membership was comprised of representatives of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the Connecticut Public Utilities Commission, the Society of Automotive Engineers and the motor vehicle conference committee.

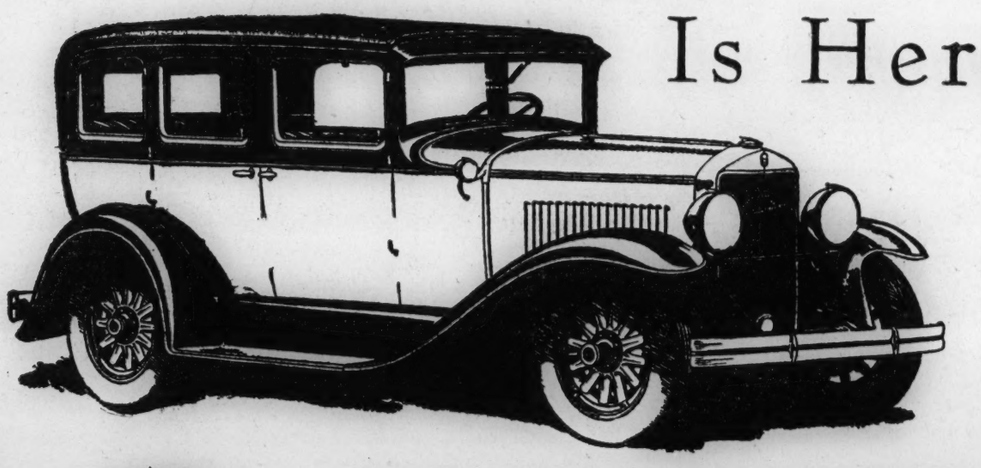

This code is intended as the basis of regulations in each of the several States and has been submitted to a number of national organizations and the public service commissions of the several States for study and indorsement. In preparing the code the recommendations of the uniform vehicle code of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, which was organized by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, have been followed where they related to the code of the motorcoach committee.

As drawn, the new code defines the several types of motorcoach and provides for the inspection and approval of motorcoaches for registration and operation. It limits the length to 33 feet, the width to 96 inches and the height to 14½ feet. The minimum height from floor to roof at the center is fixed at 58, 60 and 76 inches for the sedan, parlor car and city types, respectively.

Many other details of design, construction and equipment are also fixed. Among these are doors, aisle space, seat size, knee room, ventilation, interior illumination, head lamps and signal lamps of all kinds, guard rails, brakes, bumpers, fuel tanks, exhaust pipes and so on.

This code has been referred to the standards committee of the Society of Automotive Engineers for study and recommendation to the originating committee with a view to indorsement of the specifications as a single, uniform motorcoach code.

Model 614 Is Here

You are invited to inspect the entirely new Model 614, a six-cylinder motor car of reasonable price available in a five-passenger sedan or four-passenger coupe, and embodying, among others, these desirable features:

Four-Speed Transmission—Seven-Bearing Crankshaft
Pressure Fuel Pump—Four-Wheel Hydraulic Brakes
New-Type Manifold

We urge you to see this new Graham-Paige, to drive it, and to consider its substantial value.

.... faster than anyone wants to go .....

Tremendous speed, translated into everyday utility, represents the greatest advance in performance in fifteen years

THE new Jordan Air Line Eight goes faster than anyone but a racing pilot would dare to drive an automobile.

—faster, probably, than you'll ever want to go.

But the power that makes possible more than eighty miles an hour, gives you a performance thrill you have probably never experienced.

Hills never before negotiated in high gear can now be conquered with ease.

Get-away in traffic is actually startling—and exceedingly refreshing to people long accustomed to old-fashioned, sluggish cars.

Aeroplane carburetion has given this new motor 33% more power without adding a pound to its weight.

A specially constructed chassis, carefully balanced, and built of the finest materials, carries this greatly increased power and speed without vibration, without side sway or "shimmy."

Bohnalite pistons and Lanchester torsion neutralizer give an instant and velvet-smooth response to the slightest pressure on the accelerator.

Heaviest crankshaft Jordan has ever used. New and patented hour-glass worm type steering.

Spring length over 80% of wheelbase. Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers, front and rear.

Distinctive coachwork by Murray. Optional upholstery in mohair or broadcloth.

A wide choice of striking colors.

Hydraulic four wheel brakes. Tilt-Ray headlamps—Air-Maze air cleaner—Oil filter—Gas filter—combination ignition and wheel lock.

Three body types—Sedan—five passenger Victoria—two passenger collapsible Playboy Coupe.

All priced the same at $1995 f. o. b. Cleveland.

WHIPPET 6 RETURNS TO FOLD; CHANGED IN ENGINE FEATURES

Lower Prices Find Touring Car Listed at $615; 4-Door Sedan Set at $745.

7-BEARING CRANKSHAFT GETS CHIEF EMPHASIS

43-Horsepower Developed by New Motor; Pressure Oiling Is Used.

By FRANK J. CARMODY.

After an absence of several months the Whippet six returns to the market today featuring several mechanical changes and considerably lower in price. In appearance the car is not vitally changed. It retains, virtually in their original form, most of the characteristics of design that marked its first public appearance early in 1927.

Four body styles are represented in the line as reintroduced. The lowest-priced model, following general practice, is the touring car, which lists at $615. Others are roadster, $685; coach and coupe, $695, and the four-door sedan, $745.

Mechanical Features.

Mechanically chief emphasis is being laid upon the adoption of a seven-bearing crankshaft. Other mechanical specifications include full-pressure oiling system, invar-strut pistons, a single-piece pressed-steel, banjo-type rear axle, chain-driven camshaft and extra long connecting rods, which are declared to give smoothness of engine operation by diminishing side thrust at high speeds.

Forty-three horsepower is developed by the engine, which has a bore of 3⅛ inches and a stroke of 3¾ inches.

The single-plate, dry-disk clutch, almost universally used, is employed, its housing and the gear-set case being built as a unit. The drive shaft is a seamless steel tube, designed to eliminate whip.

Conventional practice is followed in the pressure-lubrication system in that direct leads are drilled in the crankshaft to main and connecting rod bearings. Camshaft bearings are similarly reached with lubricant. A spiral gear on the camshaft drives the oil pump, and pressure is regulated by a relief valve that opens at high speeds to forestall excessive oil flow.

The wheelbase of the new car is 110 inches. The tires are 28x4.75 balloons and are mounted on artillery wheels, of which both spokes and felloe-bands are of wood.

Service brakes are mechanical in their action and are located, of course, on all four wheels. The hand brake operates on the rear wheels only and is entirely independent of the service brake system, following general practice.

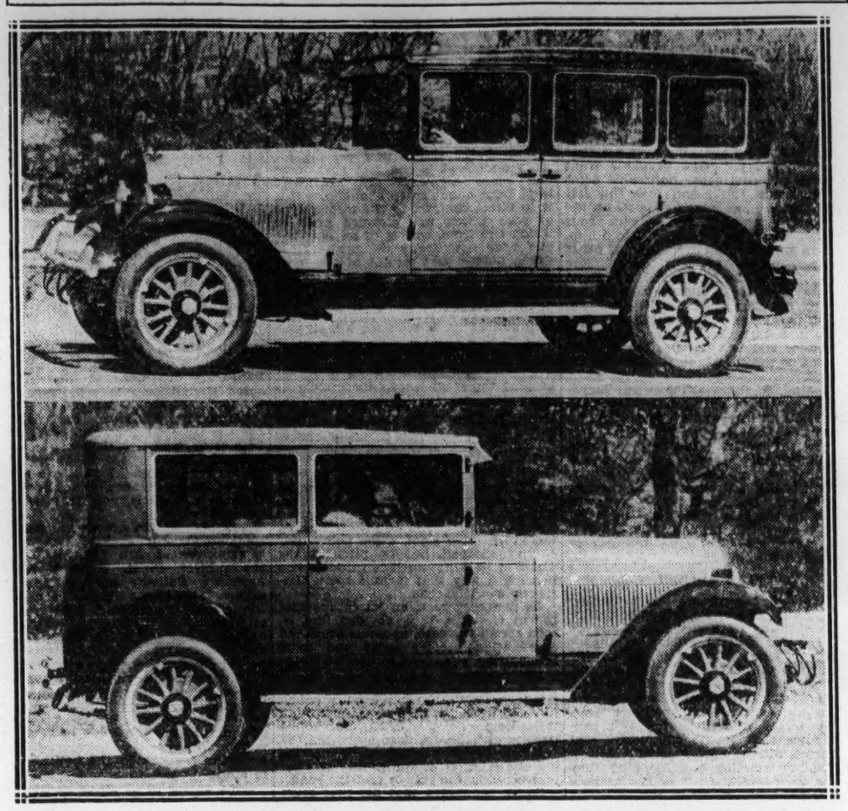

Steering Post Adjustable.

Worm and gear steering is employed and the steering column is adjustable to three positions. Spring shackles are of the self-lubricating and self-adjusting type. The springs are of chrome vanadium steel.

The spark is semi-automatic, with the manual control which is used only in starting located on the instrument board.

As to equipment, snubbers are employed in front, inclosed models offer an automatic windshield wiper, the sedan and coach are equipped with dome lights, the horn on all models is motor driven. A combination stop and tail-light is standard.

WHIPPET SIX, IN DIFFERENT FORM, BACK IN FOLD

Changes in this product of the Willys organization are chiefly under the hood and in the matter of price. During its absence from the market, the engineering department has been engaged in developing the power plant to new heights of efficiency and performance. The model pictured above is the four-door sedan. Below is the coach.

Speedometers Need Occasional Attention

Speedometers are accepted by virtually every motorist as good for the life of the car without any attention from the car owner. This assumption, in a large measure, is correct. Still, those who have tried it report excellent results from the practice of taking the speedometer to the service man for cleaning and relubrication every 10,000 or 15,000 miles. Incidentally, having the instrument recalibrated during this operation will serve to eliminate possible inaccuracies in both speedometer and odometer recording units.

Quick Stops Prove Wearing on Tires

Drivers who long ago learned that rushing up to the intersection and having to jam on the brakes to avoid a collision was excessively expensive in car wear are collecting double dividends on their knowledge now.

The universal use of four-wheel brakes has brought about a situation where the wear on the front tires is just as great as on the rear pair if the brakes are carelessly used. Along with this goes the fact of rapid acceleration and its wear. Tires are better and so are cars, but neither can be abused without cost.

Clean Up of Oil Pan Annual Necessity

Even in the case of cars equipped with oil filtering devices, the necessity for occasionally dropping the oil pan and removing the emulsified substance that collects at the bottom has not entirely passed. This item of car-care should be attended to at least once yearly.

The screen and pan should be washed out with kerosene and care should be taken to see that they are thoroughly dried before being replaced.

Autoist Needs Gloves For Roadside Work

Old-time motorists felt almost compelled to carry a pair of coveralls in tool compartment against the moment when stopping by the roadside meant almost an overhaul before the car would run again. That day has passed. However, there is one humble but handy item of repair attire that the modern motorist always should have around; namely, a pair of canvas gloves.

They spare the hands and clothing a great deal of dirt and grease, even if they are not particularly handsome.

Precautions Taken When Cleaning Top

Linseed oil soap, warm water, and a soft cloth offer the simplest means of washing the top of the car but, as in the case where any soap is used in the cleansing process, precautions are in order. To prevent any chance of damage to the finish on the body by virtue of the soap suds falling upon it, it is a good plan to have the lower part of the car structure thoroughly wet. Even when this precaution has been taken, the soap should be rinsed off before it has a chance to dry.

PARLEY TO DISCUSS FUEL AND RUBBER

American Chemical Society Will Meet in St. Louis April 16 to 19.

Progress being made in the solution of the problems confronting the motor industry, specially in the fields of fuel and rubber, will be outlined by scientific leaders at the seventy-fifth meeting of the American Chemical Society, to be held April 16 to 19, at St. Louis.

Among the subjects to be discussed in the group of reports that will be submitted are the testing of motor fuels for antiknock value; the extraction of oil from shales and from oil-bearing sands; the transfer of heat and the extraction of high sulphur oils from crude petroleum.

An outline of projects of the American Petroleum Institute looking toward the solution of problems that vitally affect the car owner will come up on April 18. J. B. Bill, chairman of the petroleum division of the society, will preside at this session. Members of the central petroleum committee of the National Research Council will lead the discussion.

Knocks May Be Gone But Carbon Remains

Knocking formerly was carbon's way of letting the car owner know of its presence in the engine. Now the anti-knock motor fuel has eliminated the knock. Many car owners, as a result, think that carbon has been eliminated, too. To a certain extent this is true, but there still is a lot of carbon in the automobiles running around the streets and highways.

Carbon interferes with engine efficiency, and it pays to check up on the engine once in a while instead of assuming that carbon is out of the picture.

Check Is Required On Connecting Rods

Modern connecting rod bearings are not above looseness. The assumption that they are may prove costly to the car owner. Although much improved, the bearings of today carry much heavier loads and under certain kinds of driving may develop too much play.

Having them checked up, at least, will prevent trouble. The checking process should occur every 12,000 or 15,000 miles. It is an adjustment that costs less than the average car owner thinks.

Motorist's Memory Source of Car Ills

If the motor car owner had a better memory, he would have a better car. A score of instances might be cited to substantiate this point, but one will do. Take the transmission, for instance. It does not need lubrication very often, but when it does it needs it badly.

Yet, there are thousands of motorists whose gears clatter and bang when being shifted because the transmission is under-lubricated. The odd part of it is that when this occurs many car owners put it down to growing careless in their driving practices.

Knowledge of Brake Ratios Is Helpful

Ratios between front and rear wheel brakes in many four-wheel brake layouts vary considerably. Some systems impose the greater part of the burden on the rear wheels. Others divide it equally between front and rear. It is well to know just what ratio is employed in the case of one's car. For instance if the ratio is 60-40, rear and front, the first adjustment should concern itself only with the rear brakes. Adjustment of the front pair probably will throw the whole braking system out of line.

Any experienced car owner should be able to select a good used car from the many available if he will but remember to test the machine thoroughly before making his purchase.

Oil Can Will Silence Whistles and Squeaks

When the car is replete with whistles and squeaks, the motorist who is annoyed by these extraneous noises should take it as his cue to get busy with the oil can. It really is amazing, the amount of silence contained in a few ounces of thin lubricating oil.

Applied to windshield anchor bolts, door locks, hood clamps, and other parts that move even when they are supposed not to do so, oil will work wonders. It will induce silence where tightening of bolts fails.

FRENCH SET TRAPS TO TAKE SPEEDERS

Consular Reports Tell of 200 Arrests Daily Being Made at Montelimar.

American motorists who have been laboring under the impression that "speed traps" are an invention wholly domestic in origin and use now can be disillusioned, for the Republic of France is doing its share in this particularly onerous connection.

According to a report made to the Department of Commerce by Assistant Automotive Trade Commissioner H. C. Scheutte, Paris, 7 miles an hour is the speed limit in the town of Montelimar, in southern France. Or, at least, so the local press maintains.

Average daily arrests in this splendid little haven for motor car owners reach 200, it is claimed, with speed law violators making up virtually the entire list. "Agents de circulation"—French traffic cops—are constantly on duty just outside the town limits to enforce the speed regulations. A Parisian daily, Commissioner Scheuette advises in his communique, cautions drivers of this enforcement and urges those motoring to the French Riviera to go by way of Grenoble and Sisteron, avoiding Montelimar.

If the carburetor float valve develops a leak that can not be remedied by grinding, replacement is the only possible answer.

OVERCROWDING CARS HELD TO BE DANGER

General Manager E. N. Smith, of A.A.A., Points How Owner Can Prevent Mishaps.

Street and highway safety is suffering from one practice that the individual car owner might well eliminate—that of overloading the car—according to Ernest N. Smith, general manager of the American Automobile Association. With spring weather giving rebirth to the desire to use the motor car to the fullest extent, numerous accidents will be traced to overloading unless the individual motorist sees its dangers and intelligently avoids them, Mr. Smith warns.

"When cars ran 12 miles an hour when they were 'wide open' it did not make so much difference that they were overloaded," he says. "In those days, construction took care of the problem where speed did not. To overload a car meant that the engine simply balked, an axle or spring broke, or something else taught the owner that caution was the better part of hospitality.

"Today's car is much different. Its engine has power enough and its chassis strength enough to permit overloading without mechanical danger. But there is the much greater danger of interference with the freedom of the driver to handle the car with safety.

"The car manufacturer has made the driving controls much more accessible. They all are at the finger tips of the operator. This advance grew out of the very definite need for relocating the controls in the interest of safety. Yet, when a motorist tries to carry three or four persons in a roadster or coupe built for two, he sacrifices every advantage that the car designer has given him in this respect.

"The intelligent car owner will not invite guests to accompany him on a trip that is marked by a reduction of the safety factor, not to mention that it is certain to be physically uncomfortable for every one."

Leave the Cap in Place.

In washing out the cooling system with sal soda, many car owners make the mistake of leaving the radiator cap off. The result is that when the cleansing solution has been heated by running the engine, it splashes out on the hood. It is hard on the finish, as many motorists have discovered. The safe way is to put the cap in place and leave it there until the solution has been drained.

ROADS ARE WANTED TO ACCOMMODATE FAST AUTOMOBILES

Elimination of Blind Intersections and Sharp Curves Will Prevent Accidents.

SPEED NOT DANGEROUS AS SUCH, VIEW TODAY

Highway Connecting Milan With Nearby Centers Declared Good Example.

Elimination of accidents and promotion of safety in motoring will take a material step forward once highway authorities have begun building roads designed to accommodate the speedy cars which are being built today. Limiting the speed of vehicles by means of legislation will not accomplish half as much as will the construction of highways on which the accident hazard has been reduced to a minimum.

This is the opinion of Paul G. Hoffman, vice president of the Studebaker Corporation of America. Sensible legislation and enforcement will help make roads safe for higher speeds, Mr. Hoffman states, but the ultimate will not be achieved until blind intersections, sharp curves and other accident hazards have been eliminated.

"Speed in itself is not dangerous," Mr. Hoffman says. "Only when in connection with the large number of accident hazards which today line our highways and when in conflict with other traffic, does speed assume any dangerous aspect. Take away these causes of danger, straighten the sharp curves, ease the grades, prevent cross traffic, keep out pedestrians and eliminate grade crossings and the result is a highway as safe as any specially constructed speedway.

"For the past several years there has been much discussion of super-highways and specially constructed toll roads, built perhaps by private capital, on which speeds of more than 60 miles an hour would be safe. The outstanding example of such a highway is the Autostrada, connecting Milan, Italy, with nearby centers. This is giving a demonstration of the safety of high speeds on properly constructed highways. There is no speed limit on this system of travel lanes, there are no grade crossings and pedestrians are kept off by strong fences. This highway is safe because the elements that make high speed dangerous have been eliminated."

Detroit and Wayne County, Mich., have led the way in the development of wide roads of the super-highway type, according to Mr. Hoffman. There also is a toll road on Long Island where motorists may travel with safety as fast as their cars will carry them.

"An autostrada between New York and Philadelphia would mean a safe and sane trip by motor in less than three hours," Mr. Hoffman continues. "Any motorist who has ever driven over the Boston Post Road between New York and Boston knows what an improvement such a route would be connecting those two cities. A similar roadway between San Francisco and Los Angeles would reduce the running time from 18 hours to less than 10—with perfect safety. Detroit, Toledo and Cleveland could be linked together the same way. Milwaukee and Chicago could be brought an hour closer to each other by this means.

"A recent editorial in the Chicago Tribune said: 'A 150 miles an hour over the Florida sands is no longer news. Two hundred miles is worth a paragraph or two. Flivvers on city boulevards are faster than express trains.'

"That is profoundly significant of the progress made by the motor car. Speed is an accepted fact. Every new car that rolls from the assembly lines makes the old concept'n of speed and highway legislation more and more obsolete.

"A few States have raised their speed limits from 25 or 30 to 35 and even 45 miles an hour. But legislation is still behind the times. You can not legislate safety—it must be built into the highways. America has made astounding progress in highway development. To maintain that progress it must and will undertake the construction of a new type of super-highways that has already proved both its necessity and its value."

Italy Plans to Construct Trieste-Venice Highway

Persons whose motor wanderings have not been confined to this country, but who have tasted the epicurean delights of European automobiling, may find something of interest in the report that a first-class automobile highway between Venice and Trieste is being proposed in Italy. Private individuals, touring societies and travel organizations, it is said, are endeavoring to strengthen the movement for this road, while the newspapers are also giving their support to the project.

The present route from Venice, the direct one, via San Dona di Piave, Portogruaro, Gervignano and Monfalcone at present is said to be in such bad condition for motoring that autoists in many cases have preferred to take the northern roundabout route from Venice to Trieste via Treviso, Udina, and Pordenone, as this route, especially the first part of it, is in excellent condition. The northern route adds approximately a hundred kilometers to the distance of the trip.

The proposed Trieste road is believed important, not only as a better means of motor transport, but also because at the present time there is said to be no first-class direct road from the old Italian province of the Veneto proper, to the new province of Venezia Giulia, of which Trieste is the chief city.

The new road is planned to be seven meters wide with meter wide foot paths on either side. The road base is to be of graduated stone with a concrete side structure and a tar surfacing. This type of road has been satisfactorily tested on the Milan-Bergamo road. The cost per kilometer based on the costs of roads at present being built in Italy would appear to be in accordance with the average cost which would be approximately 1,120,000 lire or about $60,000.

The Old Mechanic Says:

Do some car owners a big favor and they'll ask you to do a still bigger one. At least, that's what I gather from watchin' the way some of them treat one of the good features built into all cars within the last few years. The device I mean is the oil filter.

It's a shame the way some car owners impose upon the filter. They seem to think it is good for the life of the car without the slightest attention. This idea is costin' them much money.

It need not if they realized what the filter was, what it was supposed to do, and what it did. A filter is simply a strainer. Its job is to keep dirt and abrasives from goin' into the vital units of the engine along with the oil. It does a fine job of it for a while but, after all, it's only a strainer and subject to the limitations of its kind. Any strainer will strain only so much. After that it gets clogged up and quits work. Of course, the engine gets oil in spite of this, but it is oil that goes through the by pas around the filter, which means that it is takin' with it all the impurities that should be kept out.

The makers of all filterin' devices warn the car owner to see that the screen or other strainin' part is cleaned at regular periods or replaced with a new one. This ought to be done once a year, at least.

Yet, observin' things from the service angle, I'd say that not more than half of my customers ever have mentioned the filter to me when talkin' of their repair needs. The sooner they get acquainted with the filter, the quicker it will begin doin' those things it can do so well with a little consideration.

Clean Fenders Save Money for Repairs

Keeping the undersurface of the fenders free from mud, grease and the like not only improves the appearance of the car but also is a money saver. The car owner who prefers to ignore the condition of this part of the automobile sooner or later will have his attention called to it by the fact that rust has eaten through the fender.

The remedy in such a case is a new part. The only safeguard is an occasional washing, the removal of rust and repainting of spots from which the enamel has worn away.

It is strange that many motorists who would not think of failing to flush the crank case occasionally will let the transmission and differential gears go for their entire life without this salutary treatment.

TANGLING BUMPERS CHIEF TIE-UP CAUSE

A. A. A. Finds This Gravest Problem During Parade to See Cherry Blossoms.

Starter trouble, lack of gas or overheating are not the foremost causes of traffic tie-ups. The experience of a service car of the District division of the American Automobile Association shows that tangled bumpers most impede heavy traffic that moves slowly.

Working under the direction of the park police, a service car of the A. A. A. was stationed in Potomac Park last Sunday to aid motorists whose cars were temporarily put out of the running as the long line moved slowly around the Tidal Basin to view the cherry blossoms. While it was summoned repeatedly to start cars, supply them with gas or refill with water, the greatest number of calls were for the purpose of prying apart bumpers that became locked as they came together. Considerable overheating was reported because many motorists still were carrying anti-freeze mixture which caused the water supply to boil off.

Hydrometer Reading May Be Misleading

It is not uncommon for the motor-car owner to make the error of taking a hydrometer reading of the battery just after the electrolytic solution has been replenished with water. At such time the acid and water have not mixed and the gravity reading is bound to be incorrect.

The proper time to take note of the charge is after the car has been run for several hours and the solution has had time to integrate.

Lubrication Offers Aid to Easy Steering

The fact that several manufacturers are proclaiming the better lubrication features of the steering mechanisms of their cars should be significant to car owners who are prone to ignore the advantages in the form of easy steering that comes from the right kind of lubrication.

If the engineer has given attention to this feature it should indicate to the motorist who owns one of the older cars that wisdom dictates regular attention to the lubrication of the steering mechanism—every unit of it.

Safe Drivers Use Engine as Brake

Drivers who would rather be safe than flashy usually use the engine as a brake when descending a steep grade. They realize that the best braking system ever developed is subjected to a strain which may be positively dangerous on some hills.

Others, however, forget that the justly renowned law of gravity enters the picture and try to "get by" using merely the brakes for deceleration. On the level, the brakes pull only against the car's momentum. On the downgrade, they fight momentum plus gravity. It is a much harder battle.

MASONIC NOTES.

Charles Hildebrand, master of Myron M. Parker Lodge, has announced that the Master Mason's degree will be conferred at the stated communication of that lodge next Tuesday evening with Van W. Roberds, senior warden, in the East. He will be assisted by the regular line officers and the degree team, the latter under the direction of Capt. John C McDonnell. It is understood that several distinguished visitors will be present.

Hiram Lodge, No. 10, will confer the Entered Apprentice degree on a class of five candidates at its regular meeting next Thursday. John H. Eiseman, junior warden, will occupy the East during the rendition of the degree. Continuing the celebration of its 100 years of existence, Hiram Lodge will hold a centennial stag smoker for its membership at the Arcade Ballroom next Saturday, when a program of boxing, vaudeville, and a buffet supper will be presented.

The Cabletow Club, composed of Master Masons employed in the city postoffice, will confer the M. M. degree at the communication of National Lodge, No. 12, next Tuesday evening.

Senior Deacon Stevenson will head the official line during the conferring of the Fellowcraft degree in William R. Singleton Lodge, No. 30, Thursday evening. There will also be a short address by a prominent Masonic speaker.

What, it is said, will be one of the biggest attractions of the Masonic fraternity the current week is the annual "Coast Guard Nite" to be held by Congress Lodge, No. 37, next Thursday evening. For a number of years it has been customary for this lodge to hold a Coast Guard night as a mark of respect to a number of its members who are connected with that organization. This year, however, an extra interest is added, as the entire program of entertainment has been arranged by and will be in charge of Capt. Harvey "Heinie" Miller, editor of the Coast Guard, the official organ of the guard, and formerly lightweight champion of the U. S. Navy. William Homer Carroll, senior deacon of Congress Lodge, will act as master of ceremonies and many distinguished guests are expected. Sergt. Milton D. Smith, of the Police Department, who is master of Congress Lodge, invites all members of the fraternity to be present.

Marshal Howard M. Brock will preside during the conferring of the E. A. degree in Lebanon Lodge, No. 7, next Friday evening.

The Fellowcraft Club of Federal Lodge will hold a rehearsal in lodgeroom No. 1, Masonic Temple, Thirteenth and H streets northwest, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Matters of importance will be brought up at this time and a full attendance is desired. Arrangements have been completed for the dance to be held in the Oyster Auditorium next Wednesday evening, and it is promised that this will be the best dance held by the club this year.

Royal Arch.

The high priest of Lafayette Chapter reminds all members that the next convocation will be a family night, with Representative Kincheloe, Mrs. Kincheloe, Miss Gene Kincheloe and Miss Jeanne West as the special guests of the evening. The entertainment will consist of an informal talk, readings, songs and dancing. The program will start at 8:30 o'clock. The companions of the chapter are specially requested to bring the members of their families. Refreshments will be served.

In keeping with the reputation of Mount Horeb Chapter a beautiful ritualistic rendition was exemplified at the convocation of that chapter on Tuesday evening, when the royal arch degree was conferred upon John L. Clerc, Norman H. Colner and Milton K. Lockwood, High Priest Paul E. Boesch occupying the principal station. Among the visitors were J. H. Fisher, past grand high priest of the grand chapter of Virginia; J. W. Twilley, Jack Tulloch, Claude L. Haynes, W. A. Smith, E. O. Zabel, C. B. Cook, W. H. Wood, jr., W. L. Lyons and R. C. Palmer, all of Mount Vernon Chapter, No. 14, Alexandria, Va.; the grand visitor and lecturer and the grand sentinel of the grand chapter of the District of Columbia, Lucien G. Yung and Castleman P. Boss, respectively, and the following past high priests of Mount Horeb Chapter: Fielder I. Hunter, E. W. Libbey, Richard H. Towson, Everett G. Holt and Albert C. Shafer. On April 24 the Mark Master degree will be conferred.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Grand Commander Mark F. Finley and the other officers of the grand commandery of the District will make their annual visitation to Brightwood Commandery, No. 6, next Tuesday evening. The officers elect will be installed at this conclave and there will be a short program and refreshments. The following officers were elected last Tuesday evening by the drill team of Brightwood Commandery: President, Arthur C. Shaw, past commander; vice president, Samuel B. Reeder; secretary-treasurer, Fred C. Blood; executive committee, Omar J. Veley, Louis J. Stoll and A. L. Suter; captain, Joe Johnson; first lieutenant, J. E. Wade; second lieutenant, Knute Nilson; sergeant, J. E. Bladen. The regular meetings of the drill team are held on the fourth Friday of each month.

Election of officers in De Molay Commandery, No. 4, resulted as follows: Commander, George P. Smith; generalissimo, William M. Bennett, captain general, Ralph B. Morrow; senior warden, Ross H. Snyder; junior warden, George H. Gordon; prelate, the Rev. Simpson B. Daugherty; treasurer, David D. Bowen, seventh term; recorder, Edward Stelle, eighth term; standard bearer, Clarence J. West; sword bearer, Ernest F. Gude; warder, Arthur A. Wright; representative to the board of governors, Past Commander John Dolph; trustee, Past Commander William N. Beahm. These officers will be installed by the grand commander at the next conclave of the commandery which will be held on Tuesday evening, April 24.

The drill team of the De Molay Commandery will conduct its second annual minstrel show and dance next Saturday evening in the Hall of Nations of the Washington Hotel. The committee has arranged a strong cast for the show and there will be special features by well-known talent. Music for the dance will be furnished by a noted orchestra and the entire affair promises to be a gala occasion.

The delegation from Apollo Commandery, No. 1, of Chicago, to attend the triennial conclave of the grand encampment of the United States to be held in Detroit, Mich., on July 21, have planned to make the trip by airplane. This, it is believed, is a means of transportation that has not been used by any other similar delegation.

MASONIC CLUBS.

The Fellowship Club of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, at its meeting next Saturday, will fittingly celebrate the beginning of the Spanish-American War. The speaker of the evening will be Senator Arthur R. Robinson, of Indiana. Chairman Jones, of the entertainment committee, will furnish an elaborate program and refreshments will be served.

THE SHRINE.

On Sunday afternoon, April 29, at 2 o'clock, the Almas Temple contingent will leave Washington to attend the imperial council, which holds its annual session at Miami on May 1, 2, and 3. Between 200 and 250 members of the local Shrine will make this pilgrimage. Almas Temple will send as its official representatives Potentate McGinty, James C. Hoyle, F. Lawrence Walker and Charles D. Shackelford. Leonard P. Steuart, past potentate, is also a representative ex officio. He occupies the station at this time of imperial captain of the guard, and in the regular order of progression will advance at the coming imperial session to the station of imperial marshal. The potentate will be accompanied by the following members of the divan: Edwin C. Dutton, chief rabban; James C. Hoyle, assistant rabban; Robert S. Regar, high priest and prophet; James T. Prendergast, oriental guide; Frank E. Ghiselli, treasurer, and F. Lawrence Walker, recorder. The Rev. Dr. John C. Palmer, orator of the Shrine, will also accompany the party. Illustrious Potentate George B. McGinty announces the following units will be sent for the purpose of participating in the pageants that will feature the three-day sojourn: Oriental Band, Henry B. Schmidt, director; Almas Arab Patrol, William F. Holmes, captain; Almas Legion of Honor, Harry C. Weirich, captain; Almas Military Band and Drum Corps, William C. White, director; Almas Chanters, Lynn L. Gilchrest, director, and the Nut Band, Virgil M. Fooches, director. Those on this pilgrimage who desire to secure hotel accommodations must file their reservations with the recorder not later than April 17, it is announced. Arrangements have been made by the Miami Shrine for special excursion rates for those who desire to visit Cuba.

Edwin C. Dutton, president of the Caravan Club of Almas Temple, announces that the Friday luncheons held each Friday noon in the Oak room of the Raleigh Hotel are increasing in interest. An invitation is extended to all Shriners to avail themselves of this opportunity to attend these weekly gatherings.

KALLIPOLIS GROTTO.

Monarch Arthur M. Poynton announces that the next event of Kallipolis Grotto will be the monthly good-fellowship night at Grotto headquarters, Tuesday evening of this week. The program will be in charge of Capt. C. F. "Pete" Howell and his fellow members of the Grotto drill corps. An excellent program has been arranged and each prophet will be allowed to bring a Master Mason friend.

Past Monarch Charles A. Stevens, chairman of the convention committee, again admonishes prophets who contemplate attending the supreme council convention in Richmond next June to communicate with him regarding hotel reservations. Only a few more rooms are available and requests are being booked in the order of receipt.

TALL CEDARS OF LEBANON.

The executive committee of Capitol Forest, No. 104, met at the University Club last evening. Several new petitions were acted upon and the regular business of the forest transacted. The officers of the forest are preparing to attend the annual convention to be held at Atlantic City during May. Permission has been granted Capt. Harry Tryon, of the Royal Rangers, to double the size of the drill team. Applications are wanted for this important unit and those interested are asked to communicate with Capt. Tryon. It is the intention of the forest to purchase new and different uniforms for this unit in the near future.

The next annual ceremonial will be held at the Willard Hotel on April 30, when an exceptionally large class of candidates will be initiated into the mysteries of the order. The stunt committee is planning something new to keep this class interested. Several prizes have been offered to the members procuring the highest number of applicants during this month. These prizes will be distributed at the ceremonial.

The forest will pay a fraternal visit to the Masonic bodies at Laurel, Md., on the evening of April 24. The band, led by Charles R. Brill, will furnish music for the occasion and a very large attendance is expected. Several visits of this nature have been made in the past and they were all said to have been interesting, friendly and instructive.

ORDER OF THE EASTERN STAR.

NOW RUBBER SHOCK INSULATORS
ADDED TO GREAT NEW CHRYSLER "62"

at New Lower Prices-$1065 and upwards-
Same Luxury Features as Famous "72" and Imperial "80"

Smoothness and riding ease associated only with cars of higher price, available for first time at such low prices . . .

CHRYSLER now adds rubber shock insulators to the Great New Chrysler "62." And at sensational new lower prices! For the first time this great engineering feature is included in a car selling at $1065.

Thus Chrysler becomes the one manufacturer to offer a complete line of six-cylinder models, priced from $1065 to $3495, giving the entirely new and modern conception of riding ease and quiet that only this specially engineered device can provide.

In these three Chrysler models—"62," "72" and 112 h.p. Imperial "80"—Chrysler engineers have done away with the metal shackles, spring bolts, and bushings of the ordinary car.

Spring ends on the 112 h.p. Imperial "80," Illustrious New "72" and now the Great New "62"—with greater quality and lower prices—are ingeniously anchored in specially moulded, specially selected blocks of live rubber.

Floating in space—with not the slightest sense of mechanical effort—is the effect to which these rubber shock insulators contribute. Gone are all the road shocks and road sounds. Gone are all the squeaks and rattles. Gone is the need of the greater part of chassis lubrication.

This is but one of more than 40 features of the three Chrysler models which give leadership in the field of six-cylinder engineering to Chrysler.

By making possible this greatest riding luxury at its new low prices in the Great New "62," Chrysler again shows conclusively how its Standardized Quality of engineering and manufacturing gives extra value to Chrysler buyers.

Chrysler Prices

Great New Chrysler "62"—at sensational new lower prices—Seven body styles, $1065 to $1235. Illustrious New Chrysler "72"—Seven body styles, $1545 to $1795. New 112 h.p. Chrysler Imperial "80"—Fourteen custom built body styles by Chrysler, Dietrich, Locke and LeBaron, $2795 and upwards. New Chrysler "52"—at sensational new lower prices—Seven body styles, $670 to $790. All prices f.o.b. Detroit, subject to current Federal excise tax. Chrysler dealers are in position to extend the convenience of time payments. Ask about Chrysler's attractive plan.

meeting next Saturday at the home of Mrs. Edna Greenstreet, 1236 Hamline street northeast.

At the last meeting of Areme Chapter a program was presented under the chairmanship of Mrs. George Lohrer after which refreshments were served in the banquet hall. The degrees will be conferred at the meeting of the chapter next Wednesday evening. A program will follow. The chapter has been invited to visit Mount Pleasant Chapter next Friday evening.

The degrees were conferred on a class of three at the meeting of Bethlehem Chapter last Tuesday evening. Special guests of the chapter were Past Grand Matron Lena Stephenson, Past Grand Patron J. Ernest Dulin, Associate Grand Matron Pearl W. Gibb, Associate Grand Patron John Claggett Proctor and the Fellowship Club of La Fayette Lodge, F. A. A. M. The program was in charge of Mrs. Lillie E. Hall and consisted of vocal solos by Miss Elizabeth Jordan and selections played with English bells by Miss Catherine Thomas. The auxiliary home board will meet on Thursday, April 25, at the Northeast Temple, with Mrs. Stephenson, Mrs. Kimmel and Mrs. McIntyre as hostesses.

Grand Matron Sallye C. Bogley and Grand Patron William J. Dow visited Electa Chapter Tuesday evening. Other guests were Grand Conductress Katherine S. Merritt, Past Grand Matron Mary T. O'Brien, Past Grand Patron Reuben A. Bogley and a large number of the matrons and patrons of 1928. Initiation was a feature of the evening and duets were sung by Mrs. Elizabeth Koontz and Miss Edna Eno. The meeting of the endowment committee has been postponed from next Wednesday until Wednesday, April 25, and will be held at the home of Mrs. Marietta Thompson.

Following the business meeting of Washington Centennial Chapter next Friday there will be an entertainment in charge of Posey Hall. John Walker Fenton, jr., has been elected trustee to fill the unexpired term of Arthur E. Cook, resigned. The new committee will meet tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Ruth Ayler Morgan, 4815 Montgomery lane, Edgemoor, Md. The temple-joy committee will meet at the residence of the patron, 6204 Georgia avenue, next Tuesday evening and the ways and means committee will meet at the home of Mrs. Eleanor Thomas, 4604 Kansas avenue northwest. A card party will follow the business meeting. The home board will meet on the same evening at the residence of Mrs. Eva Jost, 429 Oglethorpe street northwest.

Mount Pleasant Chapter, No. 34, at its last meeting had as its guests the grand matron and grand patron. Following a short business meeting next Friday evening the men of the chapter will put on a minstrel show. Members of the order and friends are invited. The annual cabaret of the chapter, which this year will be a "Forty-niner's" party, will be held in the Masonic Temple, Fourteenth and Kenyon streets, next Saturday evening. Reservations for tables may be made by telephoning or writing Past Matron Mildred Sherman, chairman, Georgia 3402-W, 6309 Ninth street northwest. There will be excellent music for dancing, refreshments and numerous entertainment features. A prize will be given for the most appropriate costume, although fancy dress is not required. The auxiliary home board will meet at the residence of Mrs. Mae Nichols on Tuesday evening.

At the meeting of Chevy Chase Chapter on Tuesday evening the birthdays of members occurring in the month of January, February, March and April will be celebrated. The entertainment of the evening will be a drill by the De Molay drill team. Mrs. John Northrop and Mrs. Charles Cole have issued invitations for a silver tea for Tuesday afternoon from 3 to 5, at the home of Mrs. Northrop, 3937 Legation street. The next meeting of the card club will be held at the home of Miss Cora Corning, 407 Cummings lane, on Tuesday evening, April 24.

Mizpah Chapter, No. 8, will confer the degrees Tuesday evening with the grand matron, Mrs. Sallye C. Bogley, in the East. They will be assisted by other past officers of the chapter. Entertainment and refreshments will follow the meeting. An invitation is extended to all members of the order to attend. A luncheon and dinner will be given on May 3. Mrs. Amelia Lilly is chairman of the committee in charge.

Lebanon Chapter last Tuesday evening conducted a regular meeting, coupled with a reception to the charter members, and triple birthday greeting to its senior charter member, Mrs. Emilie Hellreigel, the matron, Mrs. Mary R. French, and Past Marton Ida Johnson, followed by an entertainment by the Glee Club of George Washington University, under the direction of Robert Low Harmon, accompanied by Mrs. Harmon at the piano. At the close of the evening refreshments were served in the banquet hall.

A meeting of the 1928 Matrons and Patrons Association was held at the Masonic Hall, 1210 Wisconsin avenue northwest. The association was favored with a visit by the president of the Masters Association. His visit was to request the fullest cooperation for a successful field day program this year. The president presented the grand patron with a waffle iron imbedded in a large red rose, and Mrs. Dow with a silver pitcher in honor of their recent wedding anniversary. The next meeting of the association will be held on Monday, April 30, at Joppa Lodge Hall, Ninth and Upshur streets northwest. The president announces a short business meeting to be followed by cards and dancing.

Wednesday—Oak and Hickory Camps.
Friday—Boosters' Club.

With full ritual ceremony Elm Camp last week conferred the Protection Degree of Woodcraft upon ten initiates. Two companies of the uniform rank supported the degree team. State Manager Luther C. Jones instructed the neophytes in the secret work and District Manager D. W. Thayer addressed the new Woodmen, each of whom expressed appreciation of the new affiliation. Elm Camp's culinary committee, under Sovereign William Wolfley, furnished supper after the ceremonies.

Maj. George M. Green, of the first battalion, has nominated Justin A. Shook to be adjutant, with the rank of first lieutenant. This completes the personnel of the first battalion staff. It is expected that three companies from this battalion will attend the uniform rank encampment in Connecticut the last week in July.

Clerks ... Dalkin, W. J. Kerns D. W. Thayer, and C. D. Holland introduced new applications for membership during the past week. Nearly all of these were solicited by members of the uniform rank and will be credited to the District of Columbia record which, it is said, leads Maryland thus far for the present year.

The Boosters' Club is to hold its April convention next Friday evening. Full delegations from all the local camps are expected at this council of the congress of woodcraft in Washington.

Grand Master J. Burton Kincer, accompanied by his official staff, will make his official visit to Covenant Lodge, No. 13, which meets in the Potomac Savings Bank Building at Wisconsin avenue and M street northwest next Wednesday evening. Covenant Lodge is the home lodge of Past Grand Master James E. Chamberlain and Past Grand E. Sterling Chamberlain. The lodge during the past year has gained in membership and had degree work regularly, it is stated.

The board of trustees held its regular quarterly meeting last Monday evening with Vice President James E. Griffith presiding.

Friendship Lodge conferred the first degree last Wednesday evening. The special committee is engaged in preparations for the reception which the lodge will tender to its member, Grand Master Kincer. The reception will be held in the ballroom of the New Willard Hotel and plans have been formulated to make this an outstanding event of the year. Dancing will follow the program, which will begin promptly at 8:15 o'clock.

Grand Master J. Burton Kincer and Past Grand Secretary Jos. T. Allison, accompanied by their wives, attended the annual session of the Maryland Rebekah assembly in Baltimore on April 4.

Golden Rule Lodge, No. 21, held its regular meeting last Tuesday evening. J. A. Gould, of Watertown, N. Y., gave an interesting address.

Washington Lodge, No. 6, held its regular meeting last Tuesday evening and under the good of the order interesting talks were made by Harry H. Rideout, Isadore Katz and Amos Barnett. Washington Lodge expects to have degree work in the near future.

Mount Pleasant Lodge, No. 29, will meet next Tuesday evening when the symbolic meaning of the three links of Odd Fellowship will be given and exemplified by a member of the order. An invitation is extended the entire jurisdiction to be present.

Metropolis Lodge, No. 16, will confer the second degree on William Meyers Friday evening. Members of the lodge are urged to be present and an invitation is extended to all other members of the order to attend.

Eastern Lodge No. 7, will meet next Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Noble Grand Embert A. LeLacheur urges all elective officers to be present, as it is the intention of the lodge to attend the visitation of Covenant Lodge in a body. Members of the lodge will assemble in the lodge room following the close of the business session.

Grand Warden Elmer Cummings announces that everything is in readiness for the anniversary and banquet celebration. Reports from the various lodges indicate that the banquet will be attended by over 400 members of the order.

An innovation in the line of entertainment was successfully introduced by Langdon Lodge on Friday evening, when it staged a "dubbate." With Warden Harry Kabat, originator of the new feature, acting as referee, a debate based on a facetious subject was held between Past Grand Charles E. Leisinger, representing Langdon Lodge, and Past Grand Master Wilfred E. Lawson, appearing for Eastern Lodge. Seven judges were chosen to decide the winner—Past Grands Charles E. Clark, W. I. Jenkins and Milton S. Fall, of Langdon Lodge; Past Grands I. O. Lund and the Turner brothers, of Eastern Lodge, and William D. Willis, of Meridian Lodge, Indianapolis, Ind., chief justice. The irony of the debaters and the antics of the judges caused great hilarity among the spectators, who enjoyed the proceedings from the beginning to the end, when the judges brought in a humorous verdict in favor of the affirmative. The freak debate followed after the initiatory degree had been conferred upon Henry Stanton Bladen, with Past Grand Milton S. Fall taking charge of the degree team, composed of Past Grands Harry B. Vincent, William F. Dowell, Charles E. Leisinger, W. I. Jenkins, W. B. Randall, J. E. Osborne, Charles E. Clark, Thomas C. Mettler, E. F. Rawl, Noble Grand Gilbert C. Vincent, Vice Grand R. E. Hutchinson, Warden Harry Kabat, E. C. Boswell, George E. Clifton, W. W. Cookson, J. Woodruff, Harold K. Inglee and Edwin F. Oliver. It was announced that the first annual entertainment and dance of the bowling team would be held on Friday evening, April 27. James H. Harper became a member of Langdon Lodge by transfer from a Western lodge. M. L. Fatzinger furnished violin music during a presentation. The calendar of Langdon Lodge includes a degree on all future meeting nights for the remainder of the term, it was announced by Noble Grand Gilbert C. Vincent.

THE REBEKAHS

LODGES.

Monday—Ruth, visitation; Naomi.
Tuesday—Fidelity, Friendship.
Thursday—Dorcas; Mount Pleasant, birthday.

The noble grand, Mrs. Anita Haight, has appointed the following committee: Mrs. Elsie Wilson, Mrs. Mary N. Alexander and Mrs. Johanna Isen, to select some new paraphernalia for the lodge. The lodge will receive the Rebekah Assembly and grand lodge officers on the annual visitation Tuesday, April 24. All members are urged to attend.

Members of Mount Pleasant Lodge will celebrate the lodge's birthday on Thursday evening. The members of Columbia I. O. O. F. Lodge and Dorcas Rebekah Lodge have been invited.

A number of past noble grands of the District visited the Maryland Rebekah Assembly held in Baltimore recently. Among those who attended were Mrs. M. Margaret Royston, president of the Rebekah Assembly; J. Burton Kincer, grand master; Mrs. Annie E. Grigsby, instructress; Mrs. Nettie R. Mettler, past president; Mrs. Belle Thomson, conductor of the assembly; Mrs. Ora Pfrimmer, chaplain of the assembly; Mrs. Bessie Baber, Mrs. Rena Norton, Mrs. Cora Kincer, Mr. and Mrs. Allison, Mrs. Maude Tippet and Mrs. Elsie Wilson.

All Rebekah lodges have received invitations to attend the reception given by Friendship I. O. O. F. Lodge in honor of the grand master, J. Burton Kincer, on May 5, at the Willard Hotel.

At the visitation of Dorcas Lodge on April 5, the grand representative of the Rebekah Assembly, Mrs. Annie E Grigsby, commended the officers on the manner in which the work was rendered. The members presented the president, Mrs. M. Margaret Royston, with a shawl, and the grand master, J Burton Kincer, with a bill-fold as an appreciation of their visit. Mrs. Ella V. Mallory, instructress, was presented an umbrella by the officers of the lodge. Mrs. Annie Blalock, pivot in the flag drill, presented the noble grand, Mrs. Rosa B. Homan, with a flag, the personal property of her late husband, James Blalock, who had been an active member of Dorcas Lodge. The noble grand promised salutation to the flag in honor of the deceased.

The Past Noble Grands Club will meet with Dorcas Lodge on May 3.

Plans were made at the last meeting of Schuyler Colfax Lodge to celebrate its sixth anniversary on May 8 All Rebekahs are invited. This lodge boasts of the membership of both the president and the grand master.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

At the last meeting of the ways and means committee the resignation of the treasurer, Jacob Nussbaum, was accepted. The election of officers for the ensuing term resulted as follows: Chairman, William Alexander Kimmel, thirteenth time; vice chairman, Cleveland Kennicutt; secretary, Frank B. Mrs. Gauss reported on Constitution Hall and the progress of the sale of chairs.

Katherine Montgomery Chapter held its April meeting at the home of Mrs. Julia H. Bulman, in Woodley place, who was assisted by Miss Edna Bulman. Mrs. William Bonar Bell, the regent, presided.

Mrs. Bell gave a report of the all-day conference held March 30 and of attending the banquet at the Willard that same night given for the president general, Mrs. Alfred Brosseau. Mrs. F. A. Evarts, corresponding secretary, also attended the banquet.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the recording secretary, Mrs. F. A. Fitts. As the treasurer, Mrs. Durham, was absent from the city, no report was forthcoming. The registrar, Miss Bulman, reported the papers of a new member, Miss Julia M. Giesy, were ready for the national board. Mrs. George H. Hill, the historian, gave an interesting paper, entitled "The Alarm Company of Salem." Mrs. Evarts reported to the Constitution Hall finance committee and also on the chapter house theater party to be held April 30, and every member present secured tickets.

The chapter decided to have the large picture of Mrs. Brosseau, the president general, which was published in the D. A. R. Magazine, cut out and be preserved in the files of the chapter historian.

The chapter has been honored by the president general in the appointment of Miss Edna Bulman as a page to the Continental Congress. Mrs. Dayton Ward, honorary president of the Arts Club, was a guest. Refreshments were served. The room was beautifully decorated with tulips and hyacinths. The next meeting will be held at the home of the regent, Mrs. Bell, 803 Rittenhouse street, at which time election of officers will be held.

"BRAKES"

This is Your Brake INSURANCE

This Tru-DruM Lathe is giving brake insurance to thousands of motorists who want perfect brakes. It takes the grooves and scores out of the drums, saving linings and tires. It trues the drum to stop uneven wear. No brakes should be relined without having the drums trued and perfectly smooth. And that's part of our service.

World's greatest Value and Outselling all sixes

THE world's largest sale of 6-cylinder cars became an Essex achievement solely because of merit.

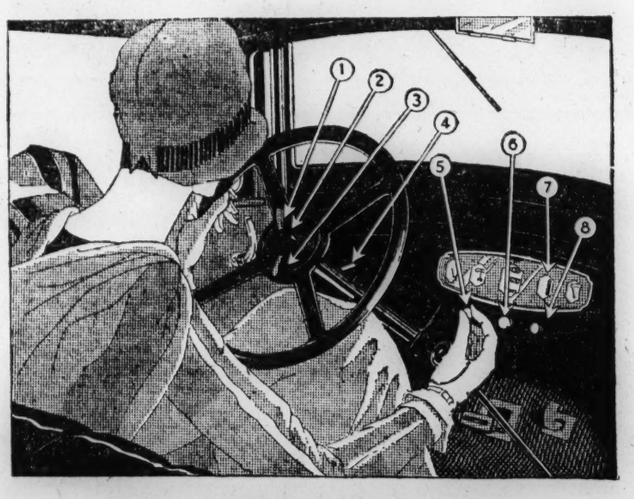

All 6-cylinder sales records are swept aside in the enthusiastic reception everywhere accorded the New Essex Super-Six. Many communities report 100%, 200%, even 300% greater sales than for the corresponding period of last year, which was the former all-time Essex record.

The ideal transportation achieved in the Greater Essex Super-Six was long foreshadowed in the series of individual superiorities by which Essex towered above the field. Its vivid brilliance of performance reveals in a single ride a smoothness and quiet, a road-skimming ease and soaring exhilaration that is actually like flying.

Greater in power, more versatile in all performance, large, roomier and more beautifully appointed, the New Essex Super-Six gloriously earns its richer reward in even greater popularity than its predecessor.

The exclusive, high-compression Super-Six motor that turns waste heat to power, develops the greatest power per cubic inch of piston displacement of any stock motor we know in the world.

In all ways the Essex Super-Six is engineered to the lowest operation and maintenance costs. And increasing thousands of owners rolling up thousands of miles of service prove that these qualities which delight you on your first ride are just as lasting as they are brilliant.

Simple, Compact and Convenient

1. Light control - 2. Horn button - 3. Throttle
4. Radiator shutter control - 5. Starter - 6. Electro-lock
7. Gasoline gauge - 8. Choke

The beautiful Essex instrument board is of ebony finish, grouping under indirect light, motometer, gasoline gauge, oil gauge, speedometer and ammeter. Restful seating position with convenience, and operation ease of all controls, insures easiest driving you ever knew.

REALTORS TO VISIT HISTORIC SPOTS AT KENTUCKY SESSIONS

Elaborate Program Arranged for 5,000 National Board Members.

POST CONVENTION TOURS PLANNED BY COMMITTEE

Birthplaces of Lincoln and Jefferson Davis Accessible to Visitors.

By MALCOLM G. DOUGLAS
(Real Estate Editor).

An elaborate entertainment program for the benefit of the 5,000 realtors who are expected to attend the twenty-first annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at Louisville, Ky., June 18 to 22, is being arranged, and the historical background of the Bluegrass State, her scenic beauties, and a spirit of Southern hospitality will play an important part in the program.

An announcement to this effect has been made by J. Edward Reising, chairman of publicity, and all of the State's historic and beauty spots now being rediscovered and made shrines by the world will be displayed to the visitors.

Some of these places are: Churchill Downs, Mammoth Cave, the famous Bluegrass section, Abraham Lincoln's birthplace, home of Henry Clay, tombs of George Rogers Clark and Zachary Taylor, Camp Knox and the birthplace of Jefferson Davis. These spots, according to the arrangements, will be made accessible to visiting realtors and their families by means of trips during the convention and post-convention tours.

In view of the fact that the State is completing a campaign for $2,500,000 to buy the Mammoth Cave area for a national park to be presented to the United States Government, this will perhaps be the biggest attraction for the visitors. Congress has already provided for the erection of hotels in the area and for the building of roads and maintaining a new mecca for thousands of tourists.

Mammoth Cave is located about 70 miles from Louisville and is reached by hard surfaced roads and railroads. In this territory no less than 90 caves have been explored, and Mammoth Cave is the largest, but Colossal Cavern is reputed to be more magnificent and beautiful. Nearby is Sand Cave where Floyd Collins was imprisoned and met his death two years ago.

Post-convention tours will take the visitors to the Bluegrass section where they will see Frankfort, the capital city; Lexington, Shakertown, Dix River Dam, Harrodsburg, Danville, Crab Orchard and Bardstown. At Frankfort they will see the State Capitol and the old State house in which is housed the Kentucky State Historical Association's collection of relics. The tomb of Daniel Boone is located there. The University of Kentucky is located at Lexington, as well as Transylvania, the first college West of the Alleghenies. The home of Henry Clay is at Ashland, nearby.

Shakertown on List.

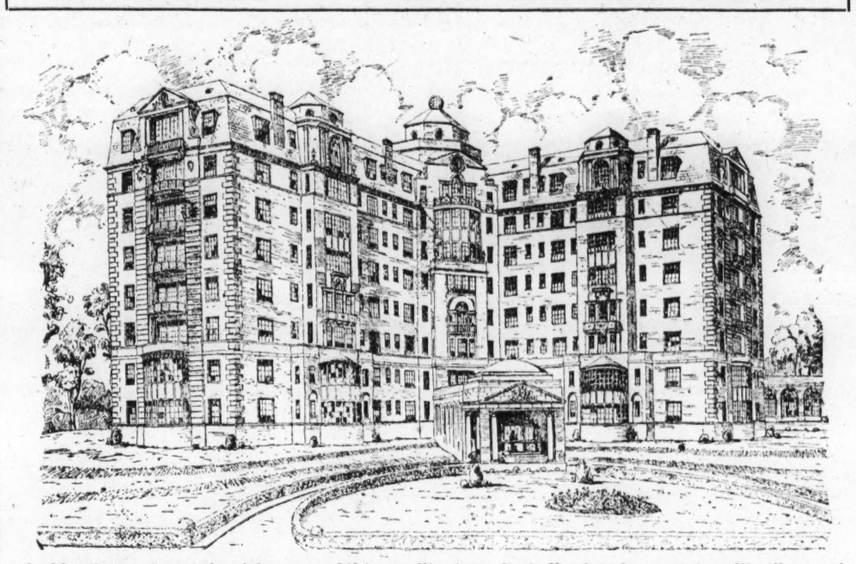

Shakertown is the home of the famous Shaker colony, where the quaint old buildings are still open to the public. The palisades of the Kentucky River, along which the road runs for miles, are among the scenic wonders of the country. High Bridge, so named because it is said to be the highest railroad bridge in the country, is situated near the junction of the Dix and Kentucky Rivers. Dix Dam is claimed to be the largest rock-faced dam in the United States, and the water impounded forms a lake 36 miles long. Harrodsburg is Kentucky's oldest town. Centre College, known for its football fame, is in Danville.

At Bardstown, the realtors will see Federal Hill, the home of Judge Rowan, wherein Stephen Collins Foster wrote "My Old Kentucky Home." It has now become the property of the State and is preserved as a shrine to the composer of Kentucky life, and is ranked next to Mount Vernon in the number of visitors registering there last year.

Only a short distance away from Bardstown, is Hodgensville. In the granite Lincoln Memorial there is the log cabin in which the Civil War President was born.

According to plans now going forward for the convention, it will afford an opportunity to find out how realtors in other cities are overcoming problems identical with those cropping up every day in the National Capital.

HOW ADDITION TO WARDMAN PARK WILL APPEAR

Architect's drawing of the eight-story addition to Wardman Park Hotel to be erected at Woodley road and Connecticut avenue on the site of the present home of Harry Wardman. The addition is to contain 300 rooms, and will be erected at an estimated cost of $2,000,000. M. Mesrobian is the architect.

GRADY AND SHANNON & LUCHS TEAMS TIED

Loss of Two Games to Wardman Bowlers Sets Back Former Rollers.

As a result of losing two games to the Wardman Construction Co. last Wednesday night, the team of J. Dallas Grady now finds itself tied with Shannon & Luchs for first place, in the Realtors Bowling League. Shannon & Luchs took two of the three games rolled with the Thomas E. Jarrell Co., Hedges & Middleton took two games from Boss & Phelps, the Cafritz Co. took three games from Shapiro, M. & R. B. Warren's team took two kames from Edward R. Carr and the Title Co. took two games from the J. E. Douglass Co.

The Joseph Shapiro team took three games from Edward R. Carr in the match postponed from last week and Shannon & Luchs took three games from the Title Co. Mr. Sugar, of Edward R. Carr's team, rolled high individual game and high individual set for the evening with scores of 131 and 371, respectively. High team game was rolled by Cafritz Co. with a score of 526 and high team set was rolled by the Wardman Construction Co. with a score of 1,534.

The standing of the teams is as follows:

	Won	Lost.

Realtor Leader To Study Taxation

C. C. Hieatt, of Louisville, Ky., immediate past president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, has been appointed by the United States Chamber of Commerce as a member of a special committee which will make a nation-wide study of State and local taxation.

Felix M. McWhirter, of Indianapolis, Ind., is chairman of the committee, which will include economists, tax experts and Government officials. The committee hopes to collect facts and information on State and municipal tax matters to be used by local communities in making judgments as to whether a given proposed bond issue or tax levy is of a kind to give it a dollar's worth of value for every dollar it would expend.

Planning Conference To Discuss Airports

The development of new subdivisions in relation to the whole city plan, airways and airports as part of city and regional planning, mass and density of buildings in relation to open space and traffic facilities—these are some of the subjects that will come before the twentieth national conference on city planning, to be held in Fort Worth and Dallas, Tex., May 7-10, 1928.

Fred E. Reed, of Oakland, Calif., chairman of the city plan committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and of the Oakland planning commission, will lead discussion of master planning under recent State legislation, the topic to be opened by Richmond D. Moot, of Schenectady, N. Y., chairman of the New York State Federation of Planning Boards. A State-wide city plan conference will be held for California, April 26, 27, 28. The conference will be held in Pasadena, under the joint auspices of the California Real Estate Board, the Pasadena Realty Board, the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce and the city planning commission and city of Pasadena.

State Names License Law Advisory Group

A State advisory board of realtors has been appointed by the secretary of state of New York State to cooperate with the real estate license bureau of the State in securing enforcement of the real estate license law.

J. Wilson Dayton, president of the New York State Association of Real Estate Boards, is chairman of the committee, which also includes G. William Magly, chairman of the State association's license law committee, and J. A. Hall, executive vice president of the State association. Following the first recommendation of the committee for a larger number of inspectors, a supplementary appropriation bill making it possible to put this recommendation into force was passed by the legislature of the State as an emergency measure.

Eugene Smith Buys Tract in Maryland

Containing more than a hundred acres, a tract of land in nearby Maryland adjacent to Battery Park and Edgemoor, has just been sold to Eugene Smith for a subdivision by the Cafritz organization, according to an announcement made yesterday. The purchase price was reported in excess of $300,000.

The property has a large frontage on old Georgetown road, and extends back to Wilson lane, and is profusely covered with evergreens, and from a standpoint of topography is ideally suited for the development of high-class homes.

REALTY REPORTER

Dr. William G. Woodford, formerly connected with Hedges & Middleton, is now associated with the business properties department of William S. Phillips & Co.

Selden D. Daniel, jr., and H. L. Farmer are two new additions to the sales department of the J. E. Douglass Co.

Business property at 1744 Columbia road northwest has been sold for C. A. Treadway to a local investor through the office of William S. Phillips Co. The property contains two stores on the first floor, with two apartments above. The price was reported at $45,000.

Two new offices have been added to the suite of the Air-Way organization in the Insurance Building, and the firm now occupies rooms 201-07 in the Fifteenth and Eye streets building.

Everette H. Croxton, formerly with Boss & Phelps, has become associated with the brokerage sales department of Shannon & Luchs, Inc.

Announcement has been made of the sale of the three-story limestone front building at 1522 K street northwest, formerly the office of the firm of Maury & McLean, to Joseph Goldenberg, who will hold the property for an investment. The building was sold for the Sidney West estate through the office of Harry C. Birge, in conjunction with the E. Stuart Poston Co. The building contains a large office on the first floor, with office rooms on the two upper floors. Price was reported at $150,000.

Milton N. Ruppert, formerly with N. L. Sansbury Co., has become affiliated with the Shannon & Luchs brokerage force.

The Albemarle Investment Co. has leased to the Federal Reserve Board the third, fourth and fifth floors in the Otis Building, 810 Eighteenth street northwest, for a term of two years. The lease begins May 1, 1928, and calls for a term rental of $32,000.

William S. Phillips & Co. yesterday moved to their new quarters at the corner of Fifteenth and K streets, in the Investment Building. The new offices are much larger than those at 1516 K street, which were included in the site purchased for the new Southern Railway Building. The firm will be open for business tomorrow at the new address.

Due to rapid growth of their business, the E. Shields Co. have taken larger quarters and are now located on the main floor at 101 New York avenue northwest, Barron B. Greenburg, local manager, yesterday announced. The firm was formerly located at 931 New York avenue.

The Willsonia, eight-story apartment building at 1830 K street northwest, has been sold for A. Joseph Howar to a local investor, through the office of Gantt & Kenyon. The building was erected about three years ago and contains 54 apartments of one to three rooms and bath. The price was reported at $250,000.

Offices of French Chancery to Move

A lease has been negotiated through Sandoz, Inc., between Frank E. Bell and the French Embassy for the four-story residence at 2034 Sixteenth street northwest, which will be used as the chancery for the embassy staff, Frederic Knobel, second secretary, yesterday announced.

The offices of the embassy will be moved tomorrow morning from the embassy at 2460 Sixteenth street. The new chancery is a handsome building and contains about fourteen rooms. The change was necessitated by the need of more space to carry on the work of the embassy staff.

GRAND COMPANY GETS PROPERTY IN CAPITAL

Operators of Stores in Fifty-four Cities Obtains Building at 7th and D Northwest.

With the leasing of the Jenifer Building at the northwest corner of Seventh and D streets northwest, Washington is to have another establishment in the mercantile field in the F. & W. Grand Co., which operates a chain of 5, 10 and 25 cent stores in 54 Eastern cities.

Negotiations for the property have just been completed through the office of Theodore M. Judd with Henry Wolfson, secretary of the Grand organization, and the lease is for a period of 25 years.

After extensive remodeling the Grand Co. will occupy the entire building, operating their store on the first three floors. It is believed this is the first store of this type in Washington to use three floors for store purposes.

The Jenifer Building was constructed about 50 years ago, and the present owner is Charles Carry. The R. Harris Co. occupies the first floor from the time the building was erected until they recently moved to Eleventh and F streets northwest.

PRAISE BESTOWED ON TILDEN GARDENS

Buildings and Landscaped Gardens Attractively Designed.

The value of attractively designed buildings and landscaped grounds to apartment owners is strikingly demonstrated by the enthusiastic reception that has been accorded Tilden Gardens, the new square of cooperatively owned apartment homes at Connecticut avenue and Tilden street.

The first of these structures was entirely sold before completion, a record in this type of residence for Washington. The second, which has just been finished, is more than 80 per cent purchased and several reservations have already been made in the third building which is just being commenced.

The grounds of Tilden Gardens merit special attention. Instead of utilizing as much as possible of the lots, as has been customary with most builders, a generous portion of the entire square has been reserved and exquisitely laid out in drives, walks, pergolas, flower beds, shrubbery and everything that would be provided in the most elaborate private estate. The result is to afford all the charm and beauty of an exclusive club, with the economies and comforts of modern cooperative apartment residence.

Many Rabies Cases Alarming Toronto

Toronto, April 14 (A.P.).—Dr. Forbes Goefrey, minister of Health for Ontario, said today the increasing number of cases of rabies throughout the province has become alarming. Dogs, imported into the province for hunting, are said to have been the chief cause for the spasmodic outbreaks.

CORPORATE SECURITIES STILL UNDER STAMP TAX

Realtors Are Warned Against General Misapprehension Now Existing.

REVENUE ACT EXPLAINED

The revenue act of 1926 in dropping altogether the stamp tax on real estate conveyances and in dropping also the stamp tax on bonds, debentures and certificates of indebtedness when issued by individuals, did not drop the tax for all such instruments issued in connection with real estate transactions, according to a warning against an existing general misapprehension which has been issued by the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The association, in a statement made by its general counsel, Nathan William MacChesney, points out that the stamp tax is still in force with respect to such bonds, debentures and evidences of indebtedness and other instruments as are issued by a corporation, whether in connection with real estate transactions or otherwise.

The revenue act of 1926 repealed the stamp tax on all deeds, instruments and writings whereby lands or realty are granted, assigned, transferred or otherwise conveyed. It dropped the clause of the 1924 act (schedule A5), which had imposed such a tax, and put nothing in its place. This was done at the request of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, which pointed out that this tax, requiring stamps in proportion to the declared consideration for which property was conveyed, afforded an opportunity for fraud, inasmuch as it made it easy to indicate a consideration greatly in excess of the actual selling value of the property.

The revenue act of 1926 also repealed the stamp tax on bonds, debentures and certificates of indebtedness, so far as that tax concerned individuals.

The revenue acts of 1918, 1921 and 1924 (schedule A1 of the later act) provided that all bonds, debentures, or certificates of indebtedness, issued, by any person, and all instruments, however termed, issued by any corporation with interest coupons or in registered form, known generally as corporate securities, there shall be a stamp tax. The revenue act of 1926 changed this law so that only bonds, debentures, or certificates of indebtedness issued by a corporation with interest coupons or in registered form, known generally as corporate securities, are made subject to the stamp tax.

Article 5 of regulations 71, applicable to this provision of the stamp tax law provides:

"In distinction from former revenue acts, the stamp tax provisions of the revenue act of 1926 apply to bonds, debentures, and certificates of indebtedness only when issued by corporations, and no stamp tax applies to such instruments by individual after March 28, 1926."

It has been held by the Bureau of Internal Revenue that no instrument which on its form and face is primarily a promissory note, whether made by an individual or a corporation, is liable to the stamp tax.

TOMPKINS PROJECTS WILL COST $200,000

One Will Be an Addition to Warehouse; The Other Electric Store.

Two new building projects of the Charles W. Tompkins Co. were started last week, and the estimated costs of the two will aggregate more than $200,000. One is the five-story addition to the warehouse of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., at Ninth and Channing streets northeast and the other is the four-story building for the H. C. Roberts Electrical Supply Co., at 1216 K street northwest.

When the warehouse addition for the chain store organization is completed, the company will have one of the largest properties of that type in the city, having an area of 80,000 square feet of floor space. The building is to be constructed of concrete and fireproof throughout, and will give the A. & P. additional trucking facilities as well as two sidings of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in the rear.

The K street building for the Roberts company is to be of four stories and basement, of concrete construction with a limestone and brick front. A store will be located on the first floor, offices on the second floor, and the two upper floors will be used for stockroom. Edward L. Bullock, jr., is architect for the building, which has a frontage of 26 feet on K street and a depth of 142 feet.

NEW YORKER TO ADDRESS REALTORS AT MEETING

Charles G. Edwards to Speak at Wednesday Session on "Creative Salesmanship."

SUPPER TO BE SERVED

Ben T. Webster, vice president of the Washington Real Estate Board, announced yesterday that the next meeting will be held Wednesday night at Wardman Park Hotel, when Charles G. Edwards, of New York, will be the guest speaker. His subject will be "Creative Salesmanship."

In addition to being an outstanding figure in New York realty circles, Mr. Edwards was both president of the New York Real Estate Board and the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

A brief address will also be made by Harold F. Pellegrin, of the national division of Near East Relief, who will discuss some phases of the Near East problem.

James P. Schick, who recently resigned as executive secretary of the board to accept the office of vice president and general manager of the National Mortgage and Investment Corporation, will formally retire as secretary and his successor, John A. Petty will be inducted into office.

After the meeting a musical program will be rendered with J. F. M. Bowie and Frederick East as soloists, with George H. Wilson, accompanist. Following the entertainment program, a buffet supper will be served the guests and members.

The program committee in charge of arrangements for the meeting consists of Tom L. Phillips, chairman; Howard Schladt, Edward Schwab, Edward V. Farley, David E. Barry, James Sullivan, Leo A. Walshe, Frederick H. Ugast and Frederick A. Smith.

Real Estate Boards Will Discuss Farms

Why a farm is a good buy right now will be one of the topics to come before the National Association of Real Estate Boards when it meets in Louisville, Ky., June 19-22 for its annual convention.

Harvey Rathbone, president of the Rathbone Co., Lincoln, Nebr., will lead the discussion on this topic at the three half day sessions of the farm lands section of the association to be held in connection with the convention. J. A. Willoughby, of Toronto, Canada, will address the farm lands section on advertising farm lands.

Schedule Washington Real Estate Board

Wednesday—Regular meeting of the board, ballroom, Wardman Park Hotel, 8:15 p. m.

Thursday—Executive committee meeting, offices of the board, 1:45 p. m.

Friday—Appraisal committee, offices of the board, 2 p. m.

BUILDING KEEPS UP PACE OF LAST YEAR

Construction Shows No Indication of Slackening, Says Contractors' Report.

Construction operations show no indication of slackening the pace which last year resulted in establishment of a new twelve-month record, according to statistics just compiled by the Associated General Contractors of America. Carrying surprise even to some of the closest observers of the industry, figures covering last month's operations were seen to reach the largest total ever recorded for the month of March.

As though to bolster the soundness of observations based upon actual shipments of construction materials, the volume of contracts awarded during February was the greatest to be shown by that month of any year on record.

A fair amount of assurance that the statistics covering construction work carried on during March do not signify a sudden "flare-up" is found in the fact that the volume of activities recorded for the first quarter of this year amounted above the total indicated for the corresponding period of 1927. A scale which places the 1913 average at 100 as its basis finds the volume of construction activities during March to have reached 137 as an index level, with a gain of 13 points above the February mark being registered.

Farms-to-Cities' Move Countered in 1927

The movement of population from farms to cities continued in 1927, but at a less rapid rate than in preceding years, according to W. M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture. Statistics gathered by the Department of Agriculture indicate that in addition to the movement from farms to cities which has gone on for the past eight years, there has been a contrary movement from the cities to the farms.

Of persons leaving the city for the farm during the eight-year period, the department finds that 87% had previously had some farm experience. Of the farmers who leave their farms for the city, the department finds that more than one-half still hold title to their farms.

COOPERATIVE RESALE TOPIC OF DISCUSSION

Special Meeting at National Convention Will Take Up Details of Plan.

SUTTON TO BE SPEAKER

Resale of the owned apartment is sometimes necessary, just as is resale of the ordinary type of owned home. Arrangement for ready resale of cooperative apartment units as an organizing company's responsibility will be taken up at the special meetings on cooperative apartment methods, which, with parallel meetings covering other specialized branches of real estate activity, will be a feature of the program of the coming annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Three half-day sessions will be held by the cooperative apartment division of the association. The convention will be held in Louisville, Ky., June 19-22. The projected consultation bureau to be opened by the division, a bureau which will make available to every cooperative building project expert advice on organization, legal forms, architecture, construction and selling plans, will be a central topic of the division's discussions. The proposed bureau is expected to make possible general application of the standards of practice set up from time to time by the division. It is planned to certify to the public projects which in all respects meet the division's standards.

David V. Sutton, of New York, will address the division on resales of cooperative apartment units. Roy G. Pratt, of Philadelphia, will talk on construction points of importance for apartment buildings to be sold on the cooperative ownership plan. Henry Forster, of New York, will open a discussion of the development of cooperative apartment projects on leaseholds.

Irving A. Blietz, of Chicago, will outline the plan for the division's consultation bureau, details of which have been worked out by its executive committee. Previous to the Louisville meeting the general plan for the bureau is expected to be brought before the board of directors of the National Association for their approval.

One Air Death in U. S. To 1,413,330 Miles

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—Uncle Sam is finding his wings reasonably safe as well as speedy. Though 164 fliers were killed in the country last year, the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce points out that 131 were in unlicensed planes. That in air transport operations three was one fatality in 1,413,330 pilot-passenger miles.

COUNCIL OF ARCHITECTS CONSIDERS MANY PLANS

TWO RATED IN CLASS 1

A total of thirteen sets of plans for new construction were considered at a meeting of the Architects' Advisory Council, last Thursday, in the office of Maj. W. E. R. Covell, Assistant Engineer Commissioner. Two plans were given class 1 rating by the council, being both approved and commended. These were an apartment house to be erected at 3031-41 Sedgwick street northwest, Parks & Baxter architects, at an estimated cost of $400,000, and a dwelling at 2611 Thirty-first street northwest, Portie & Lockie architects, estimated cost being $29,000.

Other plans considered by the council follow:

Addition to dwelling, 1344 R street, W. S. Plazier designer; neither approved nor disapproved.

Two dwellings, 1316-20 Juniper street northwest, H. L. Breuninger architect; approved.

Dwelling, 4534 Twenty-ninth street northwest, A. F. Thelander designer; approved.

Warehouse, 803 Channing street northeast, Edward L. Bullock, jr., architect; neither approved nor disapproved.

School building, 7753 Seventeenth street northwest, Col. P. M. Anderson architect; neither approved nor disapproved.

Modifications in the plans were suggested by the council in the following:

Dwelling, 5607 First street northeast, Sears & Roebuck designers.

Dwelling, 3608 Alabama avenue southeast, Thomas J. Jones designer.

Dwelling, 5604 Broad Branch road northwest, Griffin Brothers designers.

Dwelling, 3222 M street southeast, Joseph P. Roberts designer.

Dwelling, 3004 Ninth street southeast, J. M. McHugh designer.

Dwelling, 2420 Lawrence street northeast, C. Stanley Lightbown designer.

ITALIAN PRESS CALLS COOLIDGE "CALVINO"

Macon, Ga., Becomes 'Maconga, Stati Uniti' After Cable Message.

Rome, April 14 (A.P.).—Americans whose activities are interesting or important enough to be cabled to Italy become Italians as far as their names are concerned when published in the Italian papers. The names of some American places suffer a similar fate and are hard to recognize.

President Coolidge's Christian name becomes "Calvino." Secretary Mellon is called "Andrea" and Gen. Pershing's first name becomes "Giovanni," not to mention "Eugenio" Tunney and "Roberto" Jones.

Miss Mabel Boll, who accompanied Charles Levine on his recent flight to Havana, was metamorphosed into a man. The Italian newspaper accounts called her "Mister Abel Boll." Knowledge of non-European geography seems to be singularly lacking in most editorial offices. Macon, Ga., cabled as one word, "Maconga," invariably appears as "Maconga, Stati Uniti," which has an Italian sound and so must be all right.

SITE FOR $3,500,000 LUTHERAN WOMEN'S COLLEGE NEAR SILVER SPRING

Bird's-eye view of the proposed plan of the buildings and grounds of the Lutheran Woman's College, which has acquired 189 acres at the intersection of the Georgia Avenue pike and Kensington road, just north of Silver Spring, Md. Construction of the first unit is to begin in the late summer and be ready for the first students in the fall of 1930. Colonial type architecture is to be employed throughout the project, with drives and roadways throughout the campus. A large artificial lake is to be constructed in the rear of the property. The entire project is estimated to cost $3,500,000. Col. P. M. Anderson is the architect.

LUTHERAN WOMEN'S COLLEGE TO BE OPEN BY AUTUMN OF 1930

$3,500,000 Institution Will Be Located on 189-Acre Tract Near Silver Spring.

Another large educational institution has chosen the National Capital and its environs for its seat. Construction is expected to be started in the late summer on the first unit of buildings for the Lutheran Women's College, to be erected on the 189-acre tract recently acquired at the intersection of Georgia avenue pike and Kensington road, in Montgomery County, Md.

While the estimated cost of the total project will exceed $3,500,000, the first unit will cost approximately $750,000 with a similar amount to be used for endowment purposes. Efforts will be made to have the first group ready to accommodate 300 students in the early fall of 1930, according to Dr. G. E. Diffenderfer, of the Luther Place Memorial Church.

Plans have been drawn by Col. P. M. Anderson, architect and engineer, and in the first unit an administration building, dormitory, gymnasium, science building, commons and central heating plant will be erected. Colonial type architecture will be used throughout.

Additional Buildings Later.

Later additional buildings will include four dormitories, a chapel, recreation and music halls, a recitation building, and a group of buildings for the needs of the faculty and their families. Roads and driveways will be constructed through the campus, and in the rear of the plot a large artificial lake will be created, fed by large springs on the property.

The college is incorporated under the laws of the State of Maryland and is granted under its charter and by-laws the right to carry on the higher education of young women. The incorporation was effected by a board of directors chosen by nine constituent synods of the United Lutheran Church in America, covering New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia and West Virginia.

While the college is under the direction of a board chosen from among the Lutheran constituency, according to Dr. Diffenderfer, any woman who can pass the required entrance tests, and is willing to abide by the rules and discipline of the institution, is eligible.

Courses offered will lead to liberal arts and scientific degrees. Music and art will later be a part of the curriculum.

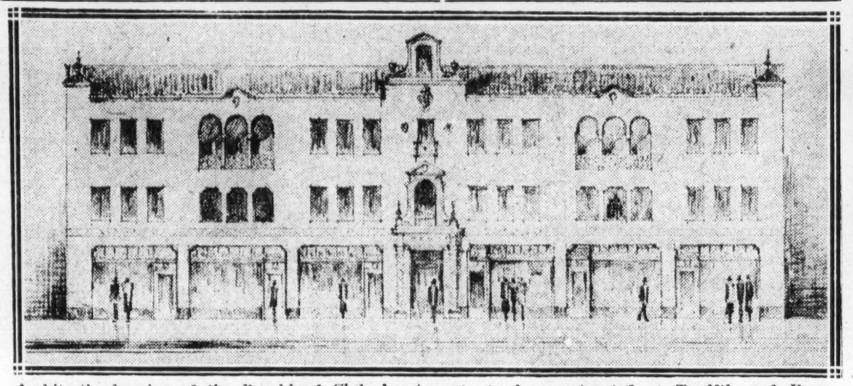

Officers and Directors.

Officers and directors of the college board are: Rev. J. Henry Harms, Philadelphia, president; Rev. W. E. Fischer, Shamokin, Pa., vice president; Rev. W. A. Krump, Chambersburg, Pa., administrative secretary; and E. Clarence Miller, Philadelphia, treasurer. Dr. Diffenderfer is the local representative of the board.

According to the pastor, the first step toward starting a college for women in the Lutheran Church was started by a district synod of east Pennsylvania in 1921. This was followed by several other synods appointing committees to confer with them and draft a constitution to be submitted to the other synods. In 1924, a legacy of $20,000 was reported provided in the will of Miss Margaret Mehring, of Key Mar, Md. About the same time Mrs. H. E. Monroe, of this city, set apart her houses at 125 Maryland avenue northeast and 204 A street southeast for the college, to be sold and the proceeds turned over to the college board.

Many sites were offered in Pennsylvania and in and around Washington, and the final selection was the George H. Earle, jr., tract of 189 acres, located about a mile and a half north of Kensington, and the National Park Seminary.

NEW BROOKLAND CLUB APARTMENTS

Architect's drawing of the Brookland Club Apartments to be constructed at Twelfth and Perry streets northeast, by Dewey & Co. The Spanish type structure will front 107 feet on Twelfth street, and will contain six stores, handsome lobby, swimming pool for members and guests, and 27 modern apartments. The entire project when completed will represent an investment of about $300,000. Maurice F. Moore is the architect.

Mud Baths Saved Ailing Race Horse

Dax, France, April 14 (A.P.).—A course of mud baths saved Grillemont, one of France's great race horses, from the slaughter house. Eight months ago Grillemont was so stricken with rheumatism that his owner, as a humanitarian measure, considered destroying him. As a last resource he decided to try on his horse what doctors were advocating for human beings, and Grillemont for weeks on end patiently suffered himself to be plastered with hot mud and steaming water.

Now, say the veterinarians, he has completely recovered, and to celebrate his return to health won a fast race over a mile and a half course. So outstanding was his performance that the government stud at Gelos, in the department of Basses-Pyrenees, bought him at auction for 600,000 francs ($24,000).

Injections of Iodine Cure Opium Addicts

Mukden, Manchuria, April 14 (A.P.). Relief for opium addicts who want the habit broken is promised by Japanese scientists working under the Kwantung Leased Territory government at Dairen.

Dr. K. Ozawa and Dr. T. Kuroi report a large measure of success in experiments in search of an opium cure. For the past year they have been treating patients in a government hospital, and absolute cure is claimed in 75 per cent of the cases. The treatment consists of hypodermic injections of a compound of arsenic, iodine and calcium.

THEATER PREPARATIONS LOST ON BRITISH RULERS

Queen Fails to Notice Box of Much Moved Chocolate Candy.

AUDIENCE GIVES CHEERS

London, April 14 (A.P.).—When royalty attends the theater in London every one about the place, manager to call boy, is on pins and needles to make sure that everything goes just right.

At a music hall star benefit performance for the veteran variety artists so much attention was paid to getting the royal box in perfect order that there was a little slip-up in the arrangements after all.

First, an attendant distributed the programs for the royal guests half an hour prior to their arrival. Then another attendant rearanged them just a little bit. Afterward an usher brought in a bouquet of three or four dozen carnations. These were placed on the railing of the box, directly in front of the queen's chair. After that another attendant had to move her program just a little more to one side.

Then came the assistant manager with an 8-pound box of chocolates, beautifully done up in pink ribbons to match the box decorations and the bois de rose velvet cloak they knew the queen would wear. The candy was also placed on the railing, to the extreme right of the queen's chair.

The box of chocolates was shifted this way and that by one attendant after another until, in the end, when the royal party did arrive the queen did not notice the candy at all, and it was still reclining on the railing when the king and queen bowed good night after the audience had given them a good-night cheer.

Fleas Are Exhibited At Berlin Bug Show

Berlin, April 14 (A.P.).—A prominent feature at a recent entomological exhibition in Berlin, at which insects from almost every part of the globe were displayed, was a special collection of many varieties of fleas and other intimate annoyers of humanity.

So plentiful were the contributions to the exhibit that there were not enough cases to hold all the specimens on hand and cigar boxes had to be turned into exhibition frames for the proper display of such an exceptional insectarium, of which some rare specimens were of considerable value. This odd exhibition, intended solely for instructive purposes, was organized by a number of entomological societies of Berlin and environs and proved a great attraction, entire classes of school children coming to be initiated into the peculiarities of the insect world.

Divorce Rate Is Cut Down by Frenchmen

Paris, April 14 (A.P.).—France is cutting down her divorce rate. There now is only one divorce to every eighteen marriages, while a year ago they ran one to seventeen.

This is somewhat due to the general tightening on divorces of foreigners, but also is attributed to a general settling back to normal after the war.

Raven Family Grows In Tower of London

London, April 14 (A.P.).—A pair of baby ravens, male and female, have arrived at the Tower of London and were entered on the books with due solemnity.

When new ravens arrive to join the famous flock they are officially "sworn in" in much the same way as an ordinary human recruit. Full particulars regarding the time of arrival and their sex are noted on an enlistment sheet, and rations are provided for them daily.

RUSSIAN GIRLS APT AS GEISHA DANCERS

Tokyo Police Reluctantly Give License to Young Entertainer From Moscow.

Tokyo, April 14 (A.P.).—All geisha girls in Japan are not Japanese. There are at least six Russian geisha maidens, all with blonde hair and red cheeks, entertaining the tired business men of Kobe, Osaka and Nagasaki. Now there is one in Tokyo who has adopted the professional name of "Helen Doran."

Miss Doran appeared at metropolitan police headquarters recently and made an application for a geisha license. The invasion of foreign girl entertainers is not encouraged by the authorities, so the young Russian candidate was given a rigid examination in her knowledge of the Japanese language and ability to strum the shamisen. She qualified in every particular and the license was reluctantly given.

She told the police she had been born in Moscow and brought up in Harbin where she earned her living as a cabaret dancer. It was in that "wickedest city" of the Far East that she began learning Japanese. Subsequently she came to Japan and completed her study of the language. She amazed the officials by her knowledge of Japanese music and dancing. Geisha girls are supposed to entertain at banquets and parties at so much an hour. They receive salaries and bonuses the same as actresses in America. Their profession is respected and many of them marry rich and influential husbands.

Furnace on Wheels Hastens Construction

Berlin, April 14 (A.P.).—Homes and apartments are so scarce in Berlin that architects and constructors think up every conceivable device for hastening the process. Their latest quick-service help consists of a furnace on wheels which is calculated to hasten the drying process in buildings under construction. It is placed outside the house or apartment building, and furnace pipes are laid from it into the room to be dried. The heat is conducted just as though a hot air furnace were in operation in the basement.

In this way, it is estimated, construction is hastened by many days, as the painters and decorators can get busy much earlier.

SINGLE COURT ASKED TO END FAMILY ROWS

Parliament Member Would Take Cases From Police Docket.

London, April 14 (A.P.).—Kin quarrels are too sacred for the police court and should have a box of their own for rattling the family skeleton in the opinion of Harry Snell, member of parliament, who has taken steps for creation of a court of domestic relations.

"Why should husbands and wives who desire to settle their matrimonial unpleasantnesses have to join the list of drunks, crooks, petty thieves and other disreputable characters in a police court?" Snell asked in making announcement of his plans.

Each district should have its own court, he contends, as distinct from the ordinary police court, where magistrates would sit and deal with desertion, separation cases and other disputes among relatives. Wealthy persons, it was pointed out, solve their domestic differences by actions for judicial separation in the high court.

"Complaints are also frequently made," Snell added, "that owing to the police courts being overworked, many of the husband and wife cases are dealt with without sufficient consideration being given to the very intricate questions involved with the result miscarriages of justice are not infrequent."

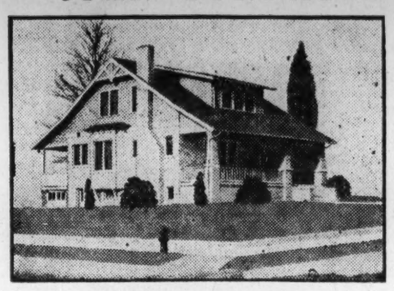

New York's Onions From Many Lands

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—All the world contributes to the big town's fragrance. There are tons and tons of onions here—from Egypt, Chile, the Virgin Islands, Cuba, Texas, Massachusetts, New York and the Middle West.

Plane Built for Hop, Illinois to Sweden

Rockford, Ill., April 14 (A.P.).—Otto Milburn, chairman of the local committee sponsoring an airplane flight from this city to Stockholm, Sweden, in June, announced today that a monoplane is under construction at Detroit. Berty Hassell, of Rockford, is to pilot the ship and is personally supervising its construction.

SEAGOING CHANNEL FOR POTOMAC RIVER READY THIS MONTH

U. S. Engineers' Dredge to Complete Work From Washington to Bay.

OCEAN-GOING VESSELS NOW MAY REACH CITY

Water Route Will Be 24 Feet Deep and 200 Feet in Width.

With completion this month of the work by the United States dredge W. T. Rossell, there will be available a channel in the Potomac River, 24 feet deep and 200 feet wide between Washington and the Atlantic Ocean.

The dredge arrived on the job January 27 to restore the channel through Maryland and Smith Point bars, including two shoals, and has removed more than 1,000,000 cubic yards of material from them.

Originally, the Potomac River between its mouth and this city was obstructed by seven shoals over which the available depth of water was from 10½ to 23 feet at low mean tide.

These shoals were at Kettle Bottom, Maryland Point, the two shoals of Smith Point, Mattawoman, Marshall Hall and the Naval Magazine. These obstructions were located, respectively, 40, 67, 69, 71, 82, 95 and 106 miles above the mouth of the river. The total length of the shoals was about 10 miles and their width ranged from 400 to 2,500 feet in the upper portion and about 3 miles in the lower part of the river.

First Channel Ready in 1905.

By the river and harbor act of March 3, 1899, the first and existing project for the improvement of the river was adopted, which provided for channels 24 feet deep at mean low water and 200 feet wide, the tidal range in the Potomac being one and two-tenths of a foot at the mouth and three feet at Washington.

The project was completed in 1905, but no maintenance work has been done during the intervening period until January, 1927, when the United States hopper dredge Willets Point arrived at Kettle Bottom Shoals from the New York United States district engineering office.

The dredging at this locality was completed in April, 1927, and during the period 581,507 cubic yards of material were taken from the river bottom and deposited in a dumping ground near Nomini Bluffs, 4 miles distant. The work of the Willets Point produced a channel 24 feet deep and 200 feet wide through this bar.

27 Wharves Served.

In the spring of 1927 the United States hydraulic pipe line dredge Talcott, attached to the Washington United States district engineering office, provided full channel depths through Naval Magazine, Marshall Hall, Mattawoman bars and excavated 570,403 cubic yards of material to be dumped on adjacent flats.

In general, the Potomac River improvement is a main river channel, so that terminal facilities are served only where the channel runs close to either bank of the river. In all, 27 wharves are thus served, distributed in the general vicinity of the following localities: Giesboro Point, two; Fort Washington, four; Fort Humphreys, three; Indianhead, three; Quantico three; Smith and Maryland Points, six, and Colonial Beach, six.

By reason of the improved channel of the Potomac, deeper draft ocean and coastwise commercial and naval vessels can now reach Washington and Alexandria, thereby increasing commerce and reducing cost of transportation. Bulk cargoes of oil and fertilizer materials in seagoing vessels are now received, and in recent years visits have been made by a number of large-sized foreign and United States naval vessels and auxiliaries.

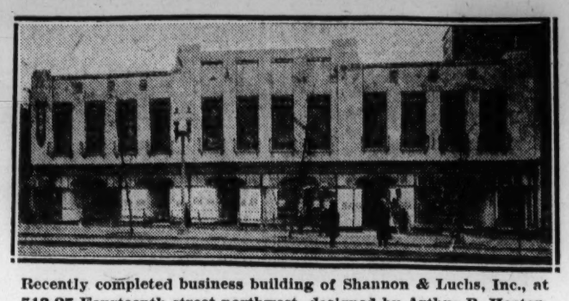

Data on Commerce.

Commerce on the Potomac River below Washington, according to latest statistics, is reported as 2,459,796 short tons, valued at $55,914,894. The principal items in order of tonnage are sand and gravel, 1,702,272; petroleum products, 229,693; forest products, 100,686; fish and oysters, 65,527; general merchandise, 62,269, and coal, 36,803.

Ninety per cent of the commerce passed over the improved section of the stream, of which 26 per cent required the increased depth. The increase in tonnage and value is due principally to the increased receipts in petroleum products.

Range of draft of loaded vessels for the principal items and the proportion of the total tonnage pertaining thereto is as follows: Sand and gravel, 6 to 8 feet, 77½ per cent; petroleum products, 10 to 21 feet, 10½ per cent; forest products, 8 to 12 feet, 4½ per cent; fish and oysters, 4 to 12 feet, 3 per cent; general merchandise, 6 to 22 feet, 2¾ per cent, and coal, 6 to 14 feet, 1¾ per cent.

NEW FOURTEENTH STREET BUILDING

Recently completed business building of Shannon & Luchs, Inc., at 713-27 Fourteenth street northwest, designed by Arthur B. Heaton, architect. The ground utilized by the building is approximately 11,800 square feet.

NEW STRUCTURE FRAMED IN MODERNIST STYLE

Shannon & Luch's Building, Now Two Stories High, Can Have Four More.

SANDSTONE FROM FRANCE

The business building recently erected and owned by Shannon & Luchs, Inc., at 713-27 Fourteenth street northwest has opened to retail concerns a structure which is modern in every phase of development.

Designed by Arthur B. Heaton, the structure takes as its architectural theme the pyramided or modernistic development which has been most effectively employed in construction of New York skyscrapers. The ground utilized in erecting the building was approximately 11,800 square feet.

While the facade of the building rises to a height of two stories, basic foundations have been installed to take care of an additional four stories, which are expected to be added in the near future. The facade is developed in Roche d'Arion sandstone which has been imported from France and is warm in color tone. Contrasting colored tile panel give a pleasing effect to the eye and all ornamental copper cornices, balconies, display windows and specially built awning frames to match the windows have been treated to give a green antique finish and add a further note of color interest to the front elevation.

The six stores on the first floor have unusual facilities and have been built to accommodate a wide variety of retail trade. Special attention has been given to the proportions of the stores, and they meet the new demands of merchandising. Rear loading platforms have been provided, and in the basement there are commodious storage facilities.

U. S. TROOPS IN CHINA ARE HEAVY READERS

15th Infantry Men Now Have Library of 2,500 Volumes.

Tientsin, China, April 14 (A.P.).—Enlisted men of the Fifteenth Infantry stationed at Tientsin do more reading per man than the soldiers of any other post in the United States Army.

This is the meaning of a letter of commendation from the War Department in Washington received by the barracks library of the Fifteenth Infantry, which stated that during the last year this library's records showed a higher ratio between total books loaned and the enlisted strength of the unit than was reported from any other post in the Army.

Conditions of the service in China form the chief reason for this, says Capt. Luther D. Miller, officer in charge of the library. Although civilians and officers usually find life in China full of interest, such is not the case with enlisted men, Capt. Miller said. They come in contact with no real home life and decent associations and places of amusement open to them are few. The Fifteenth Infantry's library is growing steadily and contains about 2,500 volumes. Two battalions of this regiment, totaling about 800, are on duty in Tienstein, in addition to the Third Marine Brigade, with its total of 3,000.

ITALIAN GIRL FIGHTER OF 1848 DIES AT 97

Chased Austrian Tyrants Out of Bologna When 17 Years Old.

Bologna, Italy, April 14 (A.P.).—In the forefront of the patriotic mob that chased the Austrian tyrants out of Bologna back in 1848 was a lanky, overgrown girl of 17, remarked even above the men for her courage and zeal. Her pigtails flying, the ardent young tomboy kept after the retreating "white coats," using whatever weapon that came to hand. Then, order restored, she returned to her work in the mill where she was employed.

"Donna" Gertrude Lolli, the pigtailed patriot of fourscore years ago, died the other day at the age of 97. She married soon after the rout of the Austrians, and presented her husband and her country with eleven children. The family was poor and for 70 years "Donna" Gertrude worked away in a tobacco factory. But that did not prevent her from looking after the welfare of others' children as well as her own.

The extraordinary old lady founded a society for factory girls, still in a flourishing condition Later, in connection with that organization, she founded an industrial school for poor children, naming it in honor of the late Queen Marguerite. She was presented to the Queen and King Humbert when they visited Bologna 40 years ago, and when King Victor Emmanuel III and Queen Elena came here in 1921 they sent for her. "A real combatant of '48," she was styled by the king.

MILAN FAIR IS OPEN LONGER THIS YEAR

New Exhibits of Italian Ceramics Cause Postponement of Closing.

Milan, Italy, April 14 (A.P.).—For the first time the yearly Milan fair, which is rivaling in Europe the famous Leipzig fair, will be kept open for two months from April 20 to June 19 next. There will be added especially to it, under the auspices of the Italian National Export Institute, created purposely by Premier Mussolini, a "Show of Interior Decoration" with the participation of more than 100 of the leading manufacturers of art products in Italy.

Artistic ceramics alone have been sent by about 20 manufacturers, including great bas-reliefs in the Della Robbia manner and all other kinds of productions in the various styles from the fourteenth century to the present time. The same may be said regarding the reproduction of antique carved and inlaid furniture, brocades, damasks, tapestries, Venetian glass, leather, marble, alabaster, onyx, iron ware, &c.

Another unique feature of this special show is that for the first time foreign firms have been asked to visit it, including 950 from the United States, 30 Canadian, 25 Argentine, 20 Australian, 18 South African, 15 French.

BOY SCOUTS

In the name of the Boy Scouts of America, eagle scouts of the District of Columbia Council, on Easter Monday, presented to the President of the United States and members of his Cabinet, copies of the revised Boy Scout Handbook. At the same time in every State in the Union, scouts were presenting Handbooks to the governors of the States and mayors of the large cities. The Washington scouts felt greatly honored at being selected for this presentation and reported that they were very cordially received. The officials to whom books were presented and the eagle scouts taking part were as follows:

President Coolidge, Loren Adams, Troop 100; Vice President Dawes, Lowell Bradford, Troop 42; Speaker Longworth, Ben Stone, Troop 8; Secretary of State Kellog, Elbridge Church, Troop 123; Secretary of War Davis, Claude Le Varre, Troop 32; Secretary of Commerce Hoover, Frederick Bammam, Troop 43; Secretary of Labor Davis, Murray Bernhardt, Troop 20; Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, Michael Farrell, Troop 20; Secretary of Interior Work, Hiram Farrell, Troop 20; Attorney General Sargent, Richmond Chambers, Troop 1; Postmaster General New, Waggner Lawder, Troop 57; Commissioner Dougherty, William Fite, Troop 25.

Secretary Wilbur and Secretary Mellon, being out of the city Easter Monday, were presented with Handbooks at a later date. Lawrence Kolb, Troop 52, and Reid Middleton, Troop 15, made these presentations.

Winners in Contest.

In the Class A group, composed of troops with 32 or more scouts, Troop 20, of the Epworth M. E. Church South, Worth E. Shoults, scoutmaster, won first place. Troop 17, meeting at Western Presbyterian Church, James S. Hawley, scoutmaster, took second place, and Troop 134, of Christ Church, Alexandria, A. T. Smith scoutmaster, followed closely in third place.

Class "B," composed of troops with from 16 to 31 members which represents the majority of the troops in the D. C. Council, was led by Troop 3, of Christ Chuch, Georgetown, F. T. Balke, scoutmaster with the highest score in the council. Troop 8, All Souls' Episcopal Church, William Westlake, scoutmaster, won second place. Troop 100, of the Y. M. C. A., D. J. Tyrell, scoutmaster, placed third, and Troop 112, of Laurel, Md., H. R. Coates, scoutmaster, finished fourth in this class.

Troop 78, of the St. Paul's Lutheran Church, H. P. Reiss, scoutmaster, won in Class "C," which includes troops with less than 16 members; with Troop 67, Anacostia Baptist Church, Harold Dennison, scoutmaster, second, and old Troop 1, Z. T. Wobensmith, scoutmaster, in third place.

Troops Are Rated.

During the five months of the efficiency contest ten troops earned in the "crack" rating, which requires at least 90 per cent of the 1,560 points given for meeting the various conditions in the contest. They are: Troops 3, 20, 8, 100, 17, 112, 78, 23, 70, 134.

Twenty additional troops reached the "standard rating" requiring 75 per cent of the total 1,560 points are as follows: Troops 51, 15, 31, 43, 67, 65, 123, 1, 96, 149, 53, 41, 92, 33, 147, 48, 10, 16, 39, 106.

It was a harder contest this season and the showing under these conditions was most heartening. It is safe to say 25 per cent more troops participated this year than last.

The outstanding features brought out by the contest were the great numbers of "civic good turns" that our scouts are doing and the many services which they are rendering.

Scout Round Table Elects.

A meeting of the Second Division officials was held at the Thompson School on the evening of Easter Monday at which officials were elected for the coming year. William Warren, of Troop 45, was chosen for president; George Palmer, Troop 92, secretary, and Harold Dennison, Troop 67, treasurer. Misses Shepherd and Wells, of the Washington College of Music, furnished entertainment, which was followed by refreshments. The round table will meet again at dinner at the City Club on the evening of May 1.

The Fourth Division Forum will be held at the Wilson Normal School tomorrow evening. Important business is scheduled and moving pictures of last year's one-day excursion to Camp Roosevelt will be shown.

The services of scouts at both the sunrise and the eventide service Easter Sunday was greatly appreciated. Troop 43 deserves special mention, since its members were present at both services.

Boat Built 117 Years Ago Still Seaworthy

Bude, England, April 14 (A.P.).—"Aye, she's a grand old boat and is still classed A1 by the board of trade, said 71-year-old Capt. R. W. Petherick, of his 52-ton ketch Ceres, believed to be Britain's oldest seagoing ship which has just celebrated her one hundred and seventeenth birthday.

The Ceres was built at Salcombe, Devon, in 1811 and was sailing across the Bay of Biscay with cargoes of fruit from Spain during the Napoleonic wars. She was dodging German submarines along the Cornish coast during the great war while carrying food from one place to another while bigger ships were fast in port. Four generations of the Petherick family has sailed on the Ceres.

Lloyd George's Recipe For a Good Cabinet

London, April 14 (A.P.).—David Lloyd George has had so much experience in building—and wrecking—cabinets that his remarks on cabinets in connection with the parliamentary discussion of the Liberal plan for combining the land, sea and air forces into a single ministry of defense have attracted much attention.

"Cabinets vary. Some have six able men, some three," said the former premier. "The able men get the chief departments. The others are filled by men not so efficient. The good minister is not he who reads and initials every paper. If one minister controlled the three fighting departments, two of these three good ministers would be available for other departments."

AMONG THE VETERANS

AMERICAN LEGION. Costello Post.

The next meeting of the post takes place in the board room of the District Building Tuesday. You have received a notice of the boxing bouts Wednesday. Remittance for the boxing cards can be made at that time.

There will be a special committee on duty at the Arcadia on Wednesday, but we want to get as much of its straightened out in advance as possible.

Cards for members and nonmembers can be obtained from the following comrades: Harvey L. Miller, 304 Coast Guard headquarters, Fourteenth and E streets northwest; Maurice M. Grudd, 602 Woodward Building; Louis Levy, 922 Four and one-half street southwest; Maurice McDonald, restaurant, Seventh and Pennsylvania avenue northwest; Ed Talburt, Willard Hotel newsstand; Fred Bucholz, Occidental Hotel; Oliver Atlas, 927 D street northwest; Goldie Ahearn, Ninth and E streets northwest; Pat Ruane, Arcadia Lunch, Fourteenth and U streets northwest; S. J. Olshefski, 1410 Church street northwest; Amos McCarthy or Sam Hogan, Mohawk A. C., or in the evenings from committee on duty at Arcadia, Fourteenth street and Park road.

Payments for cards used or mail orders or checks can be made to Harvey L. Miller at the above address.

Cups were presented to Comrade Mason at the special convention of the Legion. One cup for the largest increase of membership and another for securing the greatest number of new members.

A letter has been received from Robert Y. Conrad Post of Winchester, Va., again extending an invitation to the members of Costello Post and Drum Corps to attend the apple blossom festival. The Drum Corps won first prize at the festival last year. The festival will be held about May 1.

George Washington Post.

The next meeting of the George Washington Post, No. 1, will be held Tuesday evening at 1829 I street northwest. This will be the last meeting at this clubhouse, as plans have been made to move the latter part of this month to the post's new memorial home at 1441 Rhode Island avenue northwest. The pioneer post of the American Legion has been fortunate in acquiring this valuable piece of property which is so well adapted to its use.

Comrade Wallace Streater, chairman of the George Washington Post delegation to the special departmental convention held Wednesday and Thursday, will make a detailed report on the accomplishments of the convention.

Victory Post.

Victory Post, No. 4, American Legion, held its meeting Tuesday in the Woodmen's Hall, 935 Grant place northwest.

The post voted to adopt the Powhatan Baseball Club, a junior organization in the Capital City League.

Sergt. John Kelly, of this post drum corps, reported on the progress made and expects to have his corps equipped in new uniforms for the 30th of May.

A delegation from the Robley D. Evans Auxiliary Unit made an appeal to the post to be adopted by the post and assume the name of Victory Post, No. 4, Unit, which was unanimously agreed on.

The post unanimously adopted two resolutions, the first to revoke executive order No. 3801 on veterans preference and revert back to previous rulings given by former Attorney Generals Wickersham and Palmer. The second resolution called for the consolidation of the Efficiency Bureau, Personnel Classification Bureau, the Workingmen's Compensation Bureau and Civil Service Bureau into one bureau.

Among the visitors at the meeting were Post Commander C. J. Painter, George Washington Post, No. 1; Post Commander Ben Fuller, Spangler Post, No. 12; Post Commander John J. Orlosky, Sergt. Jasper Post, No. 13; Earl J. Brown, John M. Beauchesne Post, No. 28; First Vice Commander Wilts, Kenneth Nash Post, No. 8, and Senior Department Commander Thad Baker.

A progressive 500 card party will be given for the benefit of the post drum corps Tuesday, Mary 22, in the Northeast Masonic Temple. Mr. and Mrs. Charles (Buck) Knight, who have given many successful card parties, will handle this affair.

The First Presbyterian Players will present their play, "The Romance Hunters," and specialty acts Friday, April 20, in the First Presbyterian Hall. Admission 50 cents.

Commander Albertus Schroder presided.

The next meeting of the post will be held Tuesday, April 24, in the Woodmen's Hall.

Lafayette Post, No. 9, the American Legion, held its meeting Friday evening at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club at 1015 L street northwest.

Smokes were furnished by our worthy finance officer. Herbert W. Gardner and James R. Barr were initiated.

The following applications were voted on and passed: William H. Hyde, 1819 G street northwest; John E. Griffin, 303 Seventh street northwest; Claude Harris, 2811 Connecticut avenue northwest, and Gilman W. Smith, 1499 Irving street northwest.

The four comrades mentioned above will be initiated at the next meeting on Friday.

The notice sent out on April 5 by Department Adjt. H. Edmund Bullis shows Lafayette Post still in the lead for membership gain, having 193 per cent.

The following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas a bill (H. R. 4113) has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Mrs. Kahn, member of Congress from California, and in the Senate by Senator McNary, in which Congress is requested to enact a law awarding Michael A. Donaldson, a former sergeant, Company I, One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Infantry, Forty-second Division, who served in France, Belgium and Germany as an American soldier during the World War, the sum of $10,000 and a pension of $200 per month for conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the field; and

"Whereas Lafayette Post, No. 9, the American Legion, is in full accord with and indorses the bill (H. R. 4113); therefore be it

"Resolved, That Lafayette Post, No. 9, the American Legion, while being in full accord with and indorsing the bill (H. R. 4113), advocates that in connection with this bill (H. R. 4113) an amendment be added in which all men or women, who during the World War or who in any future war, distinguish themselves through conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the field of battle, through which action or actions, he or she shall have the distinction of having the Congressional Medal of Honor awarded them, a grant of $10,000 and a pension of $200 per month shall be awarded in connection with the award of the Congressional Medal of Honor, and

"Be it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the committee on military affairs of the Senate, the committee on military affairs of the House of Representatives, to Mrs. Kahn, sponsor of the bill (H. R. 4113) in the House of Representatives, and to Senator McNary."

Comrade Hilkert, finance officer, is in the Naval Hospital undergoing a serious operation.

At the regular meeting called for Friday every member present will be expected to offer some scheme to enliven the interest in the post and present some suggestions for increasing the post funds.

U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post.

The monthly meeting of U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post, No. 2, American Legion, took place at the Thomas Circle Club on Monday.

Plans were discussed for the banquet of the post to be held on May 22, 1928, the birthday of the post.

The commander requested volunteers to sell poppies. Any comrades who can spare a day to sell poppies or who have younger sisters or nieces who can do so are requested to get in touch with the commander.

It is requested that all members who have rummage which they wish to donate for the rummage sale get in touch with Comrade Tatspaugh.

Comrade Mary Weide's Home Fund Team will hold a card party at Comrade Chambers' tomorrow.

Bureau of Engraving Post.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing Post, No. 23, of the American Legion, met Monday night in the Red Men's Hall, 713 D street northwest. Commander Orlando reporting for the post committee on veterans' preference legislation, explained the action to be taken at the coming District of Columbia department special convention relative to the introduction of a resolution to be presented to the Congress of the United States that would prevent the indiscriminate discharge of veterans from the Government service.

The Alexandria Post of the Department of Virginia was a guest of the post. The degree team of the Virginia post staged an elabcrate initiation of a group of new members into the bureau post.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS.

Meetings for this week—Thursday, Equality-Walter Reed Post, No. 284, at Pythian Temple.

The department council of administration has set the dates for the 1928 district encampments for the nights of June 6, 7 and 8, the place to be selected by a special committee appointed for that purpose. The business of the encampment will be expedited, as much as possible on the first two evenings, leaving the last night for the election and installation of the new officers and for the addresses of the commanders of the other veteran organizations of the city.

The selection of the new department commander promises to be the keynote of the encampment as there are several candidates in the field already whose qualifications are being broadcast by their supporters and old-timers in the ranks are looking forward to some red-hot scraps when the voting begins.

Commander Joseph F. Beatty and a delegation of local V. F. W. comrades attended the burial of Capt. H. J. Watson at Arlington Monday afternoon. The services were conducted by the Department of Virginia, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Capt. Watson being a resident of the Old Dominion prior to his death. Fully 100 members of the V. F. W. from posts of the Virginia Department accompanied the body of their comrade to its final resting place.

Plans for this year's buddy poppy drive are being rapidly pushed by the poppy committee of the department, headed by Senior Vice Commander C. B. Jennings. Weekly meetings are being held and the organization work necessary is rapidly being accomplished. The various posts will try to outdo any of their previous records for sales, as the demands for relief this past winter have been unusually heavy, due to the great amount of unemployment, which has not failed to hit also the ex-service man. The buddy poppy campaign is conducted each year by the V. F. W. to help perpetuate the memories of those who gave their all on the fields of Flanders by asking the public to wear on Memorial Day the little blood red flower so symbolic of the heroism and sacrifice of these men. The proceeds of the poppy sales are never used for anything other than relief of ex-service men and their dependents. The little flowers are manufactured by men in the various Veterans' Bureau hospitals taking treatment for various disorders, and the work has the hearty indorsement of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines and other high officials of the Veterans' Bureau. Thus it can be seen how very appropriate is the slogan of the V. F. W.—Honor the dead by helping the living.

The committee headed by Maj. John G. Donavan, which has the duty of printing a monthly paper for this department, is almost ready to mail out the first issue. The little bulletin will fill a long felt want, as it will put before every member of the organization and the auxiliares each month the entire news of the department, and will bring the individual member in closer contact with that body

The on-to-Indianapolis committee has furnished each post commander with a supply of questionnaires to be filled by those comrades who intend to attend the 1928 national convention of the V. F. W. next fall in the Indiana capital. Members can secure these at all post meetings or by mail from their commander.

Before a crowd which jammed its hall, National Capital Post, No. 127, on Monday evening celebrated its ninth anniversary. Representative Butler B. Hare, of South Carolina; Gen. William Mitchell, Commander Mischou, of the District of Columbia Department, United Spanish War Veterans; Joseph F. Beaty, commander of the D. C. V. F. W., and Col. A. C. Grammes, leader of the V. F. W. forces in the State of Maryland, were the principal speakers of the evening. A fine program of entertainment was also provided. George J. Neuner, the post's first commander, and one of the organizers of the V. F. W. in this city, also spoke.

The last meeting of Front Line Post, No. 1401, took the form of a smoker and stag and was largely attended. Commander Harvey L. Miller was in charge of festivities. Past Commander Lozier, of the Department of New Jersey, V. F. W., was present and gave a little talk on the organization's doings in the "Skeeter State." Commander Miller has received a letter from Benjamin Franklin Post, V. F. W., of Paris, France, thanking the delegation from Front Line Post that placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier on Armistice Day in the name of the overseas post.

Representative Butler B. Hare, of South Carolina, delivered an address before the post which covered a wide scope of interesting coincidences pertaining to the value of the veteran in a civil capacity to this country, the sincerity of Congress to the veteran, and the honor this country owes to the women for their sacrifices during wars and tributes to the Ladies' Auxiliary of National Capital Post.

A very appropriate address was delivered by Commander R. C. Muschlitz, dwelling upon the occasion of the birthday celebration, the value of the Veterans of Foreign Wars as an organization, the great work being carried on by National Capital Post, No. 127, and a brief description of the history of the post.

A very expressive address was delivered by Gen. William Mitchell on a subject of vital interest to the welfare of this country, the subject being "National Defense." Many practical and vivid points were brought before the post relative to the modern form of defense and the future possibility of warding off a hostile invasion under modern implements of war.

The post was presented with a token for the occasion by the National Capital Post Auxiliary in the form of a three-tier birthday cake surmounted with nine golden candles, representative of the nine years of existance of National Capital Post, No. 127, in the District of Columbia.

A program of entertainment was arranged by the entertainment committee, which includes Erma Calvert and Kin Carroll, in music and novelty songs; Boy Scout Troop No. 49, under the direction of Sergt. Henry Loveless, in musical selections and songs; Anna Greenberg, in songs and dances, assisted at the piano by Miss Pauline Bogan.

The reception committee officiating at this celebration comprised Col. Robert P. Parrott, Col. Harry Coope, Col. Edward J. Cassidy, Col. E. Lester Jones, Dr. G. B. Trible, Dr. Z. W. Alderman, Dr. John L. DeMayo, Luther W. Linkins, Clarence P. Brower, Past Post and Department Commander George J. Neuner and Alfred A. Hoffman.

The honor guests of the evening were Department Commander Joseph F. Beattie, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the District of Columbia; Department Commander Col. Robert A. Grammes, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of Maryland; Department Commander Albert Michaud, of the United Spanish War Veterans, of the District of Columbia; Past Department Commander Charles H. Reilley, Department Quartermaster and Council Member William Miller and John Faid, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Maryland; Past Department Commander George J. Neuner, Commander W. L. Thomas, of Equality-Walter Reed Post, No. 284, and Past Post Commanders John J. Allen, A. E. Pierce, Joseph Gardella and Daniel J. Leahy.

In appreciation of the valuable assistance and relief work carried on at Walter Reed Hospital by Miss Cora Roy, of National Capital Post Auxiliary, a handsome cedar chest was presented to her through the post by the disabled comrades of that institution, Julius C. Hansen, Johnnie Jackson and Oscar Carmer, which was the results of their handiwork.

Federal Post.

Federal Post, No. 824, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will give a benefit theater party Thursday, matinee and evening, at Keith's. All holders of post tickets are requested to make their reservations as soon as possible, turning in their post tickets at the box office in ex-

Wathen as commissary officer, naval training station, San Diego, Calif., and Lieut. E. F. Ney to naval supply depot, Brooklyn, N. Y.

COMPETITIVE RIFLE TESTS WITHDRAWN

January Proposal to Be Postponed Until Later in 1929.

The War Department has withdrawn its announcement, made several months ago, that competitive tests of semiautomatic shoulder rifles would be conducted beginning January, 1929, it being the intention again to announce that such tests will be carried on some time next year.

One reason for this action is that the using services, the Infantry and Cavalry, should be given further opportunity to decide definitely whether they prefer to adhere to the caliber .30 rifle or accept a weapon of .276 or smaller caliber. Moreover, there has been much discussion among ordnance and other Army officers, and also on the part of those outside of the service that may submit weapons to the tests, with respect to the ammunition to be used, and other conditions and restrictions that may be prescribed for the test.

In the meantime, as one of the preliminaries of formulation of ammunition specifications, regulations to govern the competition, tests will be conducted at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., to ascertain the penetration ability and destructive effects of bullets of various types of ammunition, including the 0- caliber, 150-grain bullet; M-1, the 0-6 caliber, 150-grain bullet; caliber .30, 172-grain bullet; caliber

QUANTICO WILL GET BUILDINGS TO COST ABOVE $1,200,000

Navy Department Takes Advantage of Low Prices to Start Much Work.

AVIATION PROJECTS ARE TO COST $1,000,000

Repairs to Be Made Here to Observatory; New Construction Elsewhere.

The Bureau of Yards and Docks, Navy Department, is taking advantage of good prices now being obtained for construction work, and projects are being prepared for contracts as rapidly as the available force permits.

The tentative schedule of jobs calls for award of a number of large contracts in the near future, among them being the second unit of the development at Marine Barracks, Quantico, consisting of seven apartment buildings, a disciplinary barracks, storehouse, motor-transport building, power plant and bakery, at an estimated cost of $1,200,000.

Aviation station developments at San Diego, Calif., Hampton Roads, Va., Sand Point, Wash., and Coco Solo, Canal Zone, also are in the program, the total being about $1,000,000.

Construction in Capital.

New piers will be constructed at New London, Conn., at about $150,000, and improvements to the power plant at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, are contemplated at a cost of about $100,000.

Contracts recently were awarded by the bureau for painting tanks at fuel depot, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, at $21,973; construction of three barracks buildings at Marine Barracks, Quantico, $788,000; installation of screens at Naval Hospital, Norfolk, $1,050, and miscellaneous repairs at Naval Observatory, Washington, $4,260.

Installation of hydrotherapeutic equipment at navy yard, Mare Island, $4,640, also is included, as is construction of hangar and shop building, naval operating base, Hampton Roads, $159,000; foundations and repairs of buildings at radio station, Bethany Beach, Del., $1,134; refrigeration plant, New York Navy Yard, $13,600; gate house and miscellaneous service, Naval Hospital, San Diego, $9,500; garage at New York Navy Yard, $4,200, and swing bridge, Marine Barracks, Parris Island, S. C.

Bids Unusually Low.

The contract for construction of a hangar and shop building at naval air station, Hampton Roads, awarded at a price of $159,018, is equivalent to an approximate cost of 9 cents a cubic foot, which is very low for that type of structure.

The foundations consist of reinforced concrete piles and footings. The framework is of structural steel and the walls of terra cotta covered with stucco. The difference between the low and next low bid was less than one per cent.

CHANGES IN ARTILLERY OFFICE ANNOUNCED

Maj. Gen. F. T. Austin Assumes New Duties as Chief of Service.

Maj. Gen. Fred T. Austin, who was on duty in the Philippines when appointed chief of Field Artillery last December upon the retirement of Maj. Gen. William J. Snow arrived in Washington last week and assumed the duties of his office on Tuesday. Lieut. Col. Alden F. Brewster has been in charge of the field artillery office since retirement of Gen. Snow, in addition to his other duties.

A number of officers will be relieved from duty in the Field Artillery office during the next few months. Lieut. Col. Brewster, Maj. R. M. Danford, of the training section, and Maj. A. C. Sandeford, of the material section, will go to the Army War College in August. Maj. Harleigh Parkhurst, of the intelligence section, editor of the Field Artillery Journal, and Maj. E. C. W. Davis, of the personnel section, will go to the command and general staff school, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., leaving the office about June 30. Lieut. Col. E. H. DeArmond, chief of the training section, will leave in June for his new station in Hawaii.

Lieut. Col. William Bryden, now at the Army War College, will relieve Lieut. Col. DeArmond as chief of the training section, and Lieut. Col. Donald C. McDonald, also at the War College, will relieve Maj. Danford in that section.

ARMY CLASSIFICATION OFFICERS ANNOUNCED

Elimination System Criticized by Members of Congress Following Report.

Some members of Congress have been displaying interest in, and making criticisms of, the system of classification and elimination of Army officers established by the national defense act of 1920, which requires the annual classification of officers "with a view of the elimination of those whose efficiency no longer warrants their retention in the service."

A statement sent to Congress by the War Department shows that at the close of the fiscal year ended June 30, 1926, two cases were pending in addition to the fifteen accounted for in the report of that period.

The action taken during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927, was as follows: Officers remaining provisionally in class "B" June 30, 1926, 15; officers remaining finally in class "B" June 30, 1926, 2; officers placed provisionally in class "B" by the 1926-1927 board, 49; total, 66.

Resigned prior to final classification, 1; retired prior to final classification, 4; dismissed by general court-martial, 3; continued in class "A" by final board, 11; remaining provisionally in class "B," 20; total, 39. Officers remaining finally in class "B" June 30, 1926, 2; placed finally in class "B" by 1926-1927 board, 25; total, 27.

Discharged without pay, 7; discharged with one year's pay, 2; restored to class "A" by direction of the President, 2; retired, 4; remaining finally in class "B," 12; total, 27.

London Population Placed at 8,000,000

London, April 14 (A.P.).—The biggest city in the world is getting bigger. The latest estimate of the population is 8,000,000. All 93,000 seats for a football game at Wembley two weeks hence have been sold; more American girls than ever will have a chance to display skains at court in May and June.

Cotton Olive-Drab Uniform Still Big Army Problem

Question, Debated Since Spanish-American War, Seen Near Fruition Through Dull Times in Textile Industry—Fast Color Promised.

Efforts still are being made by the Army to obtain a satisfactory cotton olive-drab for uniforms, of the proper shade and fastness of color, and Lieut. Col. John S. Chambers, Quartermaster Corps, attached to the clothing and equippage division of the quartermaster general's office, and Lieut. Harry Kirsner, of that corps, on duty at the Philadelphia quartermaster depot, lately were in conference with the Cotton-Textile Institute of America at New York and with some of the leading American textile manufacturers with respect to the problems involved.

Assurances have been received from one of the leading dye concerns that it is expected to have a dye of the proper shade by August of this year which will stand up under all tests.

The regular Army has been struggling with the cotton uniform problem since the Spanish-American War, and it is hoped that in the near future it can be determined definitely whether or not it is possible for American manufacturers to produce a cotton uniform cloth that will meet the specification requirements and at the same time will be satisfactory as to shade and fastness of color.

Since the World War, due to the surplus stocks of uniforms left on hand as a result of war time procurement, the Army has not been in the market for cotton uniform cloth, and, consequently, there has been little incentive to manufacturers to produce this cloth.

One obstacle that must be overcome is the fact that, in any considerable Government purchase, the law requires that competition be obtained and the contract awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. From the standpoint of the manufacturer this appears to him to be unfair. If he goes ahead, and at much expense, both of time and money, develops a fabric that stands up under tests and is thoroughly satisfactory, the Government is unable to give him any assurance that he will receive a contract, and someone else may reap the benefit of his efforts.

However, where groups of manufacturers, as in the present instance, are working together on a proposition, it is believed that a means can be found to overcome this objection. With the prospect that within the next few years it will be necessary to produce cotton uniforms for the Army, and with the present situation in the cotton textile industry of overproduction and efforts to find a market for cotton goods, it is believed in the War Department to be a psychological time to secure the desired results.

MARINE CORPS OFFICERS NAMED TO NEW POSTS

Lieut. Col. Ramsey to Be Transferred From Haiti to Quantico School.

OTHER CHANGES ARE MADE

Lieut. Col. Frederick A. Ramsey, now with the First Brigade in Haiti, will be transferred to duty as assistant to the commandant of the gendarmerie d'Haiti as relief of Maj. William F. Bevan, who will go to the next field officers' course at Marine Corps School, Quantico.

Maj. Ralph E. Davis, after completion of the course at Naval War College, will come to duty at Marine Barracks, this city, as relief of Maj. Randolph Coyle, who will go to duty with the First Brigade in Haiti, succeeding to the duties relinquished by Lieut. Col. Ramsey.

Maj. Harold B. Pratt will be transferred from office of naval intelligence, Navy Department, to duty with gendarmerie d'Haiti as relief of Maj. David S. Barry, jr., who will go to recruiting duty and in command of the Eighth Reserve Regiment at Philadelphia as relief of Maj. Nedom A. Eastman, who will be assigned to the field officers' course at Quantico.

Maj. Jeter R. Horton, assistant quartermaster, will be detached from the headquarters of the Marine Corps in this city and assigned to gendarmerie d'Haiti as relief of Maj. Bennet Puryear, jr., assistant quartermaster, who goes to the field officers' course at Quantico. Maj. Louis M. Bourne, jr., who has been on aviation duty at Quantico, has been ordered to stand detached from that station on April 20 and to proceed to naval air station, San Diego, Calif., and assume command of observation squadron 8-M.

CHANGES ARE ANNOUNCED IN ARMY DENTAL CORPS

Col. J. R. Burnheim to Head Division of the Surgeon General's Office.

COL. RHOADES TO GEORGIA

Col. Julien R. Burnheim, promoted in the Dental Corps from the grade of lieutenant colonel on April 9, has been selected to succeed Col. Rex. H. Rhoades, Dental Corps, as head of the dental division of the office of the surgeon general of the Army. Col. HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space, questions pertinent to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

CURING SKIN CANCERS.

IN writing about skin cancers, Drs. Mackie and Lewis say the best way to cure them is to recognize them early and to destroy them before they have any chance to spread to new locations. This is true of every kind of cancer, regardless of where it is located.

One reason for the recognized curability of skin and lip cancers, and even tongue cancer, is that they can be seen and, therefore, are generally recognized in the early stages. Cancers in parts of the body where they can not be seen are more difficult to cure.

There are several methods of destruction that give satisfactory results, though in most instances operation is to be preferred.

They then discuss different kinds of cancer, principally those of the skin and the orifices of the body. Leukaplakia is a condition in which a "hardish" spot is found on the tongue or inside of the cheek. A person who has leukoplakia should stop smoking at once. He should have his teeth smoothed of all jagged points and also cleaned and polished. He can then afford to wait and watch if he will keep his mouth clean. If the plaque becomes inflamed it should come out.

Small patches on the lips should be watched in the same way, or even more closely. Drs. Mackie and Lewis advise that a person with such a place should see a physician. The place may be syphilitic and, therefore, curable by specific treatment. It may be merely a herpes eruption or fever sore. It may be a beginning cancer. Or it may be of trivial importance. It should be watched. They advise against smoking, wetting the lips, or irritating the patch in any way. They even advise against exposure to strong sunlight. Cancer of the lip is generally curable.

In recent years cancer of the tongue is being cured with considerable frequency. In fact, when diagnosed early and well operated on, cure can be expected. There has been improvement since the fatal illness of President Grant just 50 years ago.

To avoid cancer of the tongue one should refrain from smoking. Jagged teeth is another cause to be avoided. What is said of cancer of the mouth holds good in a general way of cancer of the other orifices of the body.

BOOKLETS ON CHILDREN'S DIET.

Mrs. R. M. writes: I liked your article where you printed the schedule recommended for the meals of a child from 10 to 12 months. Could you give any information as to the proper diet for a child from 1 to 5 years? Is there any booklet or pamphlet printed that explains the proper feeding times and sleeping hours for a child from 1 to 5 years?

REPLY.

There are many such booklets. Practically every State and city health department gives one or more to parents who ask for them.

The Children's Bureau, United States Department of Labor, supplies "Child Care" on request.

The Woman's Community Council of Minneapolis, Minn., sends "The Right Food for the Growing Child" to those who send 5 cents for it.

TREATING RINGWORM.

Mrs. A. A. M. writes: I have a little girl 4 years old. About three months ago a spot appeared on the under part of her leg. This spot itches very much. Now a similar spot has appeared on her neck. I have been told that it is ringworm.

REPLY.

Ringworm on a nonhairy part of the body presents no problem.

Paint it four times with iodine once a day. Then apply sulphur ointment.

Ringworm in hairy areas is a different proposition.

Guard Children Against Eating Cheap and Germ-Filled Candy

Health Expert Advises About Injurious Ingredients in Some Penny Confections.

By DANIEL R. HODGDON,
Formerly president of Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital of Chicago, director Industrial Educational Bureau, president of College of Technology and director School of Technology, Newark; lecturer Newark Institute of Arts and Sciences and member of the faculty of New York University and New Jersey State Normal School.

Some years ago I bought a doll, 18 inches high, and dressed it in clothes which I dyed myself. This was not because I had arrived at my second childhood, but because I wanted to drive home the results of a penny candy investigation which I had just completed. I wanted to teach children the difference between good candy and cheap candy.

Dr. Daniel R Hodgdon.

In my laboratory the doll was dressed in stockings and undershirt which had been dyed a vivid green from coloring matter obtained from one penny's worth of lollypops. Its shoes were blackened with lampblack obtained from penny licorice sticks. Its hair was fastened to the head with glue obtained from "Easter chicks," and its cheeks wore a rosy red blush from the dye contained in a penny candy peach pith.

The doll attracted a great deal of attention, since the candy used in connection with it had all come from a candy store near a public school.

Today we hear that all this has passed and that all candy is pure and wholesome. Nothing is further from the truth, as a little inspection of some candy showed.

The first thing to be examined was a peanut bar. It was one of the most despicable products that an infamous brain could concoct. No child who purchased and ate this contemptible pollution could do so without risk of impaired health.

This peanut bar was vile in color and disgusting in content. It was full of eggs from weevils. Tiny chrysalis shells of insects that had lived in the candy were to be found throughout the foul material. Under the microscope this candy appeared to be more or less alive with tiny worms which had been living in the peanuts.

Now this is only one example of that cheaply made candy which is often found in some penny candy store that buy any kind of candy regardless of the manufacturer, just as long as it can be purchased cheaply.

We exclaim in horror, "Such things are unpardonable." And well we may! Yet they exist, not as a dream, but as a reality.

We are not careful enough about what our school children eat. Candy they must have, and candy we should let them have, because there is no better food to give quickly available energy in the blood. Children require something to supply them with energy when the recess comes around. They naturally turn to candy to supply this demand. The penny candy store is nearby. It takes but a moment to skip out of the school grounds to the sweet shop.

Children like highly colored candy. It is naturally pleasing to the eye. Colored candy is not objectionable, as long as it is colored properly. The trouble today is with the manufacturers who produce the dyes. There is a Government standard requiring certain purity for all dyes entering into foodstuffs. If these standards were properly lived up to there would be no complaint, but the number of prosecutions the Government makes each year shows how often the regulation is disobeyed.

All coal-tar dye products used in coloring foods and candies before purification contain metallic compounds. Compounds of iron, lead, tin, arsenate are present. Some of these dyes are very poisonous.

One-tenth of a gram of dimitrocregal or saffron substitute will kill a dog in twenty minutes.

The dyes which the Government allows to be used are purified and freed of all poisonous metals to meet a certain standard. Too frequently candy manufacturers buy inferior dyes without the knowledge of it. It is only the candy manufacturer that employs a chemist who is sure of his product.

A short time ago I was in the chemical laboratory of one of the best manufacturers of candy products. He is a man who takes a real pride in his product; otherwise he would not maintain an expensive laboratory. Everything that went into his candies had to meet a high standard of purity.

The chemical laboratory must certify the sugars, flavors, dyes, nuts, chocolate, milk extracts, gelatin, &c.

Sometimes the honest manufacturer is victimized by some unscrupulous dealer who imposes upon him low grade or adulterated products guaranteed to be as represented. The price may be attractive. The material may look satisfactory, but the result is an inferior candy product. The nuts may be infected, the sugar may be adulterated, the gelatin may be high in bacteria count.

Some manufacturers are careful to obtain as near the best grade and as near bacteria-free gelatin as possible, but the extracts may be poor and other things may be highly unsatisfactory.

The candy manufacturer who has no laboratory must use the products as purchased. Well may we rejoice when the manufacturer of candy says: "I test everything for purity."

It is against the law to murder children. I don't need to tell you that; but it is not against the law to feed children inferior products that may undermine the health, retard the growth, produce mental slowness and backwardness, destroy the teeth, starve the bones, vitiate the blood, upset the digestion and produce an underweight, undernourished, aenemic, mentally deficient boy or girl.

We owe our children proper care and attention. This is their citizenship birthright. The time has come when we must insist that the candy be a wholesome, honest product. The school must maintain its own candy store, where the children can obtain candy at the proper time without leaving the grounds. This helps to reduce accidents. Only a few days ago a little girl was run down and killed on her way to the candy store across the street.

The candy sold under the direction of and by the school assures the child of an excellent food, if the school is careful of its choice and sees to it that only pure, wholesome candy is used. This same degree of safety should be given to all those who eat candy. Candies containing injurious ingredients are cheap and offer large profits to the retailer. We must guard ourselves against the use of such candy.

There are plenty of wholesome candy products made by reputable and honest concerns. These are the candies we should select.

TESTED RECIPES

5-Minute Pecan Fudge.

Melt ¼ cup butter in pan No. 1. Mix following ingredients in pan No. 2:
1 cup brown sugar.
1 cup white sugar.
¼ cup Karo sirup.
½ cup milk.
1½ squares chocolate (grated).

When pan No. 2 comes to boil pour in pan No. 1; then boil five minutes over moderate flame. Add 1 cup shelled pecans (broken), vanilla to taste, beat until creamy, and spread on buttered platter.

Nut Cookies.

Mix one and one-half cupfuls of brown sugar with one cupful of butter, three eggs beaten separately, one teaspoonful of baking soda dissolved in a little boiling water, two and three-fourths cupfuls of flour, a pinch of salt, one teaspoonful of cloves, one pound of nuts and one pound of raisins. Drop with a teaspoon on buttered tins.

MOONSHINE.

The following is delicious on gelatin, peaches, or other fruits, or in cake: Mix the white of an egg with one tablespoonful of sugar and one tablespoonful of jelly. Beat until stiff. This will take about 20 to 25 minutes. These measurements will serve four helpings. If more is desired, simply double or triple each ingredient. This is a splendid substitute for whipped cream.

BAKED CAULIFLOWER.

Remove the leaves and trim off the stalk from one medium-sized cauliflower. Soak in a solution of one tablespoonful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of salt, and one quart of water for 15 minutes to remove all dirt and insects. Cook whole, with stem up, in boiling water for 7 minutes. Put the cauliflower in an oiled baking dish and pour tablespoonful of flour, one tablespoonful of evaporated milk, and one cupful of water or meat stock. Cover the top with one-fourth cupful of grated cheese, and brown in a moderate oven. This gives five servings.

ANCIENT JAPANESE DIARY TELLS OF JOURNEY TO U.S.

Logbook Describes Trip to San Francisco, Where 'Fried Shark Caught Fire.'

TO BE GIVEN TO MUSEUM

Etajima, Japan, April 14 (A.P.).—The oldest logbook in Japan, concerned with the first official Japanese voyage to America, is soon to be installed in the museum of the Etajima Naval Academy here. The log was recently found in an old, privately owned library.

Brief notes in the log describe a 44-day voyage made to San Francisco by the Tokugawa Shogunate's envoys to the United States. The entries were made partly in English and Japanese. Of the arrival in America and the Japanese impressions of the foreigners the log relates:

"American officials receive us. Paradise-like melody of music comes forth from somewhere.

"Americans, though barbarians, are found more mild-hearted and sympathetic than the Asiatics. Is this just because America is a new world?

"Served fried shark in a foreign style restaurant. It is highly delicious, but it caught fire at last. The flames were suppressed instantly. Had it been inside a Japanese house the whole building would have been ablaze. But the house was built of stone. The Westerners seem to make better use of things for more practical purposes than the Easterners."

The writer of the diary is said to have been one Kosaku Nagao, the first Japanese to cut off his queue or "top-not." He later opened an English language school in Japan.

Woman Born in U. S. Runs for Parliament

Aylsham, Norfolk, England, April 14 (A.P.).—An American-born woman, Mrs. Charles Hoffman, is a candidate for a seat in the house of commons. She has been adopted as the Liberal candidate for the north division of Norfolk at the next election.

Mrs. Hoffman has lived in England for many years and recently took out naturalization papers. She has leased Blickling Hall from Lord Lothian and entertains on a large scale, her parties given in the true American style being voted as remarkable. Blickling Hall is one of the best examples of Tudor architecture in East Anglia and was once the seat of the Boleyns. A Sir Thomas Boleyn was the father of the ill-fated Anne Boleyn, whose ghost is said to walk at night in the tapestried drawing room.

Curate in Limehouse Is England's Richest

London, April 14 (A.P.).—The Courtauld family, whose great artificial silk manufacturing business has made four of them millionaires, includes a clergyman who is probably the richest curate in England.

He is the Rev. Maitland S. Courtauld, curate of St. Peter's, Wapping, whose holding in the Courtauld concern is said to represent about $800,000.

Wapping is an area of main streets, poverty-stricken homes and numerous drinking saloons, and here Mr. Courtauld for 20 years has devoted his time to the service of the poor and of the church at which he is a subordinate minister.

Raquel Meller's Home Is Where Cash Flows

Paris, April 14 (A.P.).—To the Spanish singer Raquel Meller, home is where the money is. Just at present she is appearing in a revue here.

"But I have no preferences," she says. "Paris or Madrid, New York or Constantinople, it's all the same to me. I go where I am called, and the thing that calls clearest is money. My home is everywhere and nowhere."

"But you are happy to be in Paris?" she was asked.

"Oh, as you like it, monsieur. As for myself, I am happy where I make money."

Keep Girls on Farm, French Teachers' Aim

Paris, April 14, (A.P.).—Thirteen hundred country school teachers, fighting the rural exodus, advocate a new way to "keep 'em down on the farm."

Girls leave, they say, because they want better clothes and a more enjoyable life. It is the teachers' plan to encourage coquetry at home, to keep the girls abreast of fashion, and teach them to care for their personal beauty. The idea won a prize from the Union of Economic Interests.

change. This will be the biggest post event this year for Federal, and its friends are urged to be present.

Auxiliaries.

A caravan of representatives of the ladies' auxiliaries of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the District visited Annapolis Auxiliary Monday evening, accompanied by veterans of local posts. The women were given a reception by the Annapolis Auxiliary, which exemplified its work in fine form. Later the veterans of the party were admitted to the meeting, and a musical program was rendered, followed by the serving of refreshments to the visitors and members. Among the visitors from Washington were Mrs. Mary Lucas, State deputy for the District of Columbia; Mrs. Adelaide M. Grant, president of Federal Auxiliary, No. 824; Mrs. Lloyd Kelloy, president of Potomac Auxiliary, No. 1085; several past presidents of auxiliaries, and a number of other members of Washington auxiliaries.

SPANISH WAR VETERANS.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, has rendered a decision concerning hospitalization that will interest honorably discharged veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Philippine insurrection, Boer uprising and World War. The decision follows:

"The question was raised as to whether hospitalization is mandatory under the first provision of section 202 (10), of the act as amended or whether hospitalization under said provision is discretionary with the bureau.

"The provision in question reads as follows: 'That all hospital facilities under the control and jurisdiction of the bureau shall be available for every honorably discharged veteran of the Spanish-American War, the Philippine insurrection, the Boxer uprising or the World War suffering from neuropsychiatric or tubercular ailments and diseases, paralysis agitans, encephalitis lethargica or amoebic dysentery, or the loss of sight of both eyes, regardless whether such ailments or diseases are due to military service or otherwise, including traveling expenses as granted to those receiving compensation and hospitalization under this act.'

"It will be noted from the language of the statute above quoted that it is mandatory on the bureau to utilize all hospital facilities under the control and jurisdiction thereof for the hospitalization of this class of beneficiaries. This class of beneficiaries, in so far as hospital facilities under the control and jurisdiction of the bureau are concerned, are on a parity with persons suffering from service-connected disabilities. Therefore, in so far as persons coming within the first provision of section 202 (10) are concerned, all hospital facilities under the control and jurisdiction of the bureau must be utilized and hospitalization can not be refused on the ground that there may be a potential demand for such facilities which may arise by reason of future requirements for service-connected cases.

"The Comptroller General considers the term 'hospital facilities under the control and jurisdiction of the bureau' as equivalent to or synonymous with 'Government facilities.' The decision of the Comptroller General is predicated on the theory that these facilities, which are made available to the bureau by virtue of section 10 of the act of June 7, 1924, are to all intents and purposes under the control and jurisdiction of the bureau.

"Held that hospitalization under the first provision of section 202 (10) of the act as amended is mandatory. Held further that hospital facilities 'under the control and jurisdiction of the bureau' are equivalent to 'Government facilities.'

"The foregoing decision is hereby promulgated for observance by all officials and employes of the United States Veterans' Bureau."

Richard Harden Camp.

The Richard J. Harden Camp at its last meeting had a complete attendance of officers, the chairs being filled as follows: Commander Harry J. Sherwood, Senior Vice Commander George P. Cook, Junior Vice Commander Leo M. Devlin, Officer of the Day Thomas F. Allman, Officer of the Guard John Konitz, Adjutant H. L. Leslie, Quartermaster Thomas A. Hudlow, Chaplain Terrence N. Fielder, Surgeon Victor E. Walkins, Patriotic Instructor Christopher Cotton, Historian E. Byrd Doran, Sergt. Maj. William O. Ohm, Color Sergt. Charles Ammann, Chief Musician Fred Kaske, and Trustees Daniel Foley, John A. G. Shuster and William E. O'Neill.

The following recruits were mustered in as active members: Orval P. Townshend, Ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry (now colonel in the regular Army); Robert E. Morfing, Fifth United States Cavalry; Harry S. Hegy, First United States Cavalry; George J. Cole, First Regiment District of Columbia Volunteer Infantry. Harry L. Slater was taken in by readmission and John B. Stanton by affidavit. Louis Rollman was transferred to the Col. James S. Pettit Camp.

A communication from Representative Frederick R. Lehlback acknowledging receipt of the resolutions of the camp indorsing the Welch bill was read.

William O. Ohm, chairman of the relief committee, reported Capt. Harry A. Walsh in Walter Reed Hospital, William A. Young and Jacob A. Van Allen discharged from hospital and Fred Kaske returned to duty.

The camp gave a rising vote of thanks to William J. Sammond for placing the station lights in condition to embellish the ritualistic work.

F. H. Gould, of St. Augustine, Fla.; John A. Gallagher, Jacob Orken, W. T. Conn, Charles D. Long and George W. Kingsbury gave short talks on the good of the order.

Col. Pettit Camp.

The following recruits were mustered in as active members of the Col. James S. Pettit Camp at its meeting Tuesday night at 921 Pennsylvania avenue southeast: Robert S. Mackinnon, Willard H. Wheeler, Louis Rollman, William T. Danner, Joseph Stein, Raymond H. Roberts.

Senior Vice Commander William T. Ryan, chairman of the sick committee, reported Frank Weber and H. Bendig in the Soldiers' Home Hospital, Eddie Care in Naval Hospital and Milton Smith, William Burke, Harry Thomas and Willard H. Wheeler ill at their homes.

The national encampment to be held in Havana, Cuba, next October was discussed, and a number of the members signified their intention of making plans for the trip on a chartered steamer.

Charles A. Strobel, chairman of the recruiting committee, reported progress by his committee and stated that 26 members had been added to the roster of the camp since the first of the year. Others who made short talks were Ernest R. Graves, chairman of the department recruiting committee; Senior Vice Commander C. E. Barstow and Past Commander J. L. Dawson, of the Gen. Henry W. Lawton Camp, and W. Simpson, of the Richard J. Harden Camp.

At the last meeting of the Col. John Jacob Astor Auxiliary plans were made for the official visit of Department President Margaret E. Burns and her staff Thursday night. The auxiliary will hold a card party May 26 at Northeast Masonic Temple, Eighth and F streets northeast. The proceeds will go to the treasury of the auxiliary.

The meetings of the camps and auxiliaries for the week are, Col. John Jacob Astor Camp, tomorrow night, Stanley Hall, United States Soldiers' Home; Gen. M. Emmet Urell Camp, Wednesday night, Pythian Temple; Richard J. Harden Camp, Thursday night, Pythian Temple; Admiral George Dewey Naval Auxiliary, tomorrow night, 921 Pennsylvania avenue southeast; Gen. M. Emmet Urell Auxiliary, Wednesday night, Pythian Temple; Col. John Jacob Astor Auxiliary, Thursday night, 921 Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

DISABLED AMERICAN VETERANS.

That World War men who are on the Civil Service eligible list should be afforded an opportunity to answer reasons why they are skipped when appointments are made for Federal positions, is a proposal that was made to the Civil Service Commission by the Disabled American Veterans.

The commission recently issued a statement showing certain preferences given veterans and one of these was that an appointing officer is compelled to state his reason for the record as to why he did not name the former service man. The D. A. V. is urging the commission to change its regulations so the veteran will have a chance to see the objection and be given a chance to explain, during which the appointment will be held up a specified time.

There is now before the Senate the Dill bill and before the House the Fish bill, each intended to conserve the rights of veterans for Federal jobs, but the D. A. V. is represented as feeling that a marked advance forward will result should the commission act favorably upon the latest recommendation governing actual appointment.

Representation at the eighth national convention at Denver in June was one of the principal topics of discussion at a meeting of members of the various chapters of the D. A. V. in Washington in a meeting in the board room of the District Building during the week.

On the evening of May 8, the D. C. department of the D. A. V. will hold a benefit at the National Theater, and the indications today are that the delegation that will go to Denver will be the largest from this city that has ever attended a national gathering of the organization when the policies for the coming year will be decided upon.

A check on the rolls at the meeting last week show that the membership of the D. A. V. here is larger than at this time a year ago, so this will entitle the District department to a stronger voice on the floor than in the past.

Last week the veterans committee of the House reported out a series of amendments to the law governing the Veterans' Bureau, based upon proposals made by the D. A. V. and other service groups.

As drafted, the bill would reopen Government insurance to all former service men who are insurable risks. By existing law applications for Government converted insurance ceased on July 2, 1927.

Other provisions of the report are as follows:

Permits those former service men with converted insurance to change to lower premium-rate policies, as in the case of an endowment policy which may be converted to straight life insurance.

Permits the naming of any beneficiary whom the insured designates.

Provides a uniform Federal statute of limitations fixing six years as the time in which suits may be brought.

Provides that where an ex-service man is totally disabled for one year that he shall be entitled to the full benefits of the policy on a permanent and total basis.

Authorizes the Veterans Bureau to contract for funeral services up to $100 without compliance with the usual Federal statute requiring advertising.

Extends from 18 years to 21 years the ages in which children attending school may be entitled to compensation payments as provided by law.

Increases from $20 to $30 the amount of payments to compensible persons in institutions for the insane.

Removes the time limit on the filing of claim and proof of disability for compensation.

Removes a classification of widows in the present law and fixes a uniform compensation of $30 for them.

Representative Royal Johnson, chairman of the committee, said he expected little delay in the House in taking action on the report as well as the report on the Rogers bill for hospital construction.

Another advance in legislation for the disabled came during the past week when the rules committee of the house voted to make the Tyson-Fitzgerald bill for the retirement of permanently disabled former emergency officers of the Army special business. This is construed to mean that this measure will surely be acted upon before adjournment. It has already passed the Senate without a roll call and informal polls are said to indicate a substantial majority in its favor in the House.

James L. Monnahan, commander of the department of Minnesota; Owen A. Galvin, commander of the Minneapolis Chapter, and Millard W. Rice, liaison officer at Minneapolis, have been in Washington for the past week in a series of conferences at the Veterans' Bureau on problems of the disabled in Minnesota and aiding and speeding D. A. V. legislative plans at the Capitol.

W. T. Henning, of Denver, chairman of the D. A. V. convention committee, will come to this city this week to confer with the Washington office of the organization on plans for the convention in June.

Henning has been visiting various units of the organization on the way east and writes that the outlook for a large attendance is excellent.

A drive to bring early consideration of the Hawes-Reece bill for the extension of time for awarding decorations based upon citations during the war, has been renewed by the D. A. V. The organization is particularly anxious to make it possible for crosses to be awarded to the mothers and widows of veterans who have been recommended but who have never been given the decorations because of the expiration of the time limit before full consideration was given all cases.

As business will compel him to forego the Denver campaign, John Maher, of this city, has offered his resignation as national executive committeeman for this section of the D. A. V. It is expected there will be an early appointment as committeeman for the fourth district, which comprises this city, Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia.

ARMY AND NAVY UNION.

National Commander W. L. Peak, of the Army and Navy Union, has announced the following additional appointments in the organization:

John H. Halper and Edward C. Kriz, of Washington, D. C., to be members of the national legislative committee.

Col. M. A. Winter and Capt. Joseph H. Bean, of Washington, D. C.; James P. Watson, Manila, P. I.; John W. Hammond, Capt. Roy B. Shook, Albert V. Cress, William M. Walker and the Rev. Samuel M. Griffith, of Dayton, Ohio, to be national deputies and organizers.

Lieut. Comdr. Stephen S. Yeandle, United States Coast Guard, Washington, D. C.; Walter H. Schoeler and Herman R. Schoeler, of New York City; John Montgomery, of Massillon, Ohio; Joseph O. Kasper, of Cleveland, Ohio, and James Broderick, of South Boston, Mass., to be national aide de camps.

The various garrisons in the Army and Navy Union are urged to prepare programs for Memorial Day services and all members of the organization are requested to wear their badges and buttons on this occasion and assist in placing flowers on the graves of deceased members. Each garrison is requested to appoint a Memorial Day committee for these services. A report of the activities is to be sent to the department and national patriotic instructors in order that such activities may be embodied in the annual report to be submitted to the fortieth annual convention to be held in this city, September 4 to 7 next. The national patriotic instructor is J. R. C. Ward, of Philadelphia.

In connection with the Memorial Day exercises in this city National Commander Peak has appointed the following to represent the National Corps of the Army and Navy Union, to serve as a committee in conjunction with the Grand Army of the Republic, in charge of the exercises:

National Chief Deputy and Organizer William F. Franklin, chairman; national aide de camp, Lieut. Comdr. Stephen S. Yeandle, U. S. Coast Guard; National Deputy and Organizer Col. M. A. Winter and National Chief Aide de Camp A. J. Renoe.,

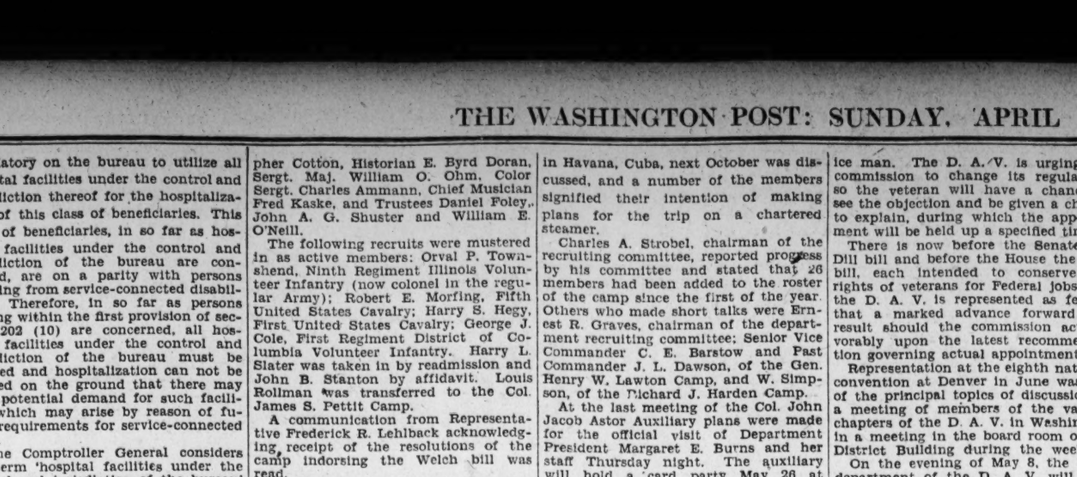

National Commander W. L. Peak and National Chief Deputy Organizer William F. Franklin, of this city, recently returned from a trip to Leavenworth, Kans., where they revived General Henry Leavenworth Garrison, No. 75, of Leavenworth, Kans., which has been defunct for nearly 30 years.

Announcement is made that a tentative application has been made for a charter for Gen. J. Franklin Bell Garrison, No. 204, located at Manila, Philippine Islands. The Department of New York has announced the formation of the "Gubler Garrison." Reports from Manila, Philippine Islands, indicate progress in establishing new garrisons of the Army and Navy Union in foreign possessions.

Commodore Barry Garrison, of Washington, D. C., was mustered in April 5 in the board room, District Building, with appropriate ceremonies in the presence of a large gathering.

Washington Gets Resident Catholic Bishop

The Rt. Rev. John M. McNamara, Pastor of St. Gabriel's Church, Brings New Honors to His Parish and to His Home City—Remarkable Growth of His Church and Parish Due to His Untiring Efforts.

By JOHN J. DALY.

SINCE John Carroll, of Rock Creek, was appointed Prefect Apostolic of the United States, on June 9, 1784, no Washington pastor of a Catholic church has been made bishop until the recent appointment of the Rev. John M. McNamara, pastor of St. Gabriel's Church, as auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore. Paraphrasing the words of the Governor of North Carolina to the Governor of South Carolina, "It's a long time between bishops!"

As pastor of St. Gabriel's Church, Bishop McNamara is the first and only resident bishop that Washington has had in its own right since John Carroll held forth in the post-revolutionary days. There have been, of course, and still are, bishops in Washington, of the Catholic and other faiths, but most of the bishops belonging to the apostolic see are assigned here, or have been, from overseas. So the pastor of St. Gabriel's has a distinction that has come to no other man of his faith. Bishop Carroll was appointed from Maryland.

Though he has been a resident of Washington for many years, originally as assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Church. Bishop McNamara first attracted city-wide attention by building almost overnight one of the most thriving parishes in all Washington. It was on March 13, 1920 that, as a church, he threw open the doors of what had once been a K. of C. hut, in use at Edgemoor, Md., for soldiers during the war. Out of this humble beginning has arisen a church property comprising almost a city block in area. When completed, the Church of St. Gabriel, together with the rectory, a convent and the school, will be one of the most valuable pieces of church property in the city.

* * * *

IT was in the last days of Cardinal Gibbons' life that the parish of St. Gabriel was contemplated. Out in the Petworth section there was a thriving and bustling community made up of many Catholics who were attending downtown churches. They prevailed upon the late cardinal to let them have a place of their own. He turned to the assistant pastor of St. Patrick's, and through the aid of the War Department the old abandoned hut at Edgemoor was torn down and trundled into a site off Grant Circle. One of the leading builders of the city, looking at that pile of debris, strewn and scattered timber, advised the then Father McNamara to set a match to it. "It isn't worth the effort," he said, but Father McNamara set men at work there and not only did this humble little hut serve as the nucleus for what is now a prosperous parish, but it has since been removed over the old Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge to a site on Randle Highlands, where a young priest, the Rev. Joseph Buckley, has now set up the infant parish of the archdiocese, St. Francis Xavier's.

Eight years have gone by since the parishioners of St. Gabriel's opened their hut-church. They decided one day that the time had come to build a larger structure. So they went about the task of raising a sum of money. They set upon $50,000 as the quota. Like magic the money was raised and the first start of the parish realized. They got together $70,000, when they only needed $50,000. Instead of building a church forthwith, Father McNamara erected a handsome school building which now serves as combination church and school, the upper portion for the school, the lower for the church. This, of course, is only temporary and makeshift.

As soon as the parishioners of St. Gabriel's are willing and ready to go ahead with the financing of the church proper, Bishop McNamara will break ground. This he said only the other day when asked when his church would be completed. There stands now on a beautiful tract of ground that once was nothing but woodland as fine an assemblage of buildings as any Catholic church may boast in Washington. The priests' house is a classic in architectural design and construction. It is of Gothic mold and character. The convent nearby is of the same line and so, too, will be the church—all built of stone.

* * * *

AN old city in an old diocese—the oldest in the United States, in point of fact—it is a well known fact in Catholic circles that there is no parish in all Washington imbued with the dash and spirit that characterize St. Gabriel's. To begin with, Petworth is one of the newer sections. Of course, old Petworth has been in existence for many years and the Soldiers' Home was there in that neighborhood ever since the Civil War, but the new Petworth, that sprang up since the World War, is of the new Washington. It is the infant of the various subdivisions and sections of the city—barring a few but by old Chevy Chase—and its people are what the boys in the Army characterize as "rarin' to go." So St. Gabriel's is this kind of a parish, an up-and-doing sort of community that wants what it wants when it wants it. Though it is the youngest, it is the lustiest and it prides itself on the fact now that of all the old parishes, it alone possesses a bishop as its pastor.

"Bishop McNamara," you hear a St. Gabriel's man say, and he says it as if this was the last word in all the language, for the pastor of St. Gabriel's has about him something that wins to his side every man he meets. They are McNamara men, the men of St. Gabriel's, and they will tell you, if you ask them, that the honor conferred upon their pastor is one of the most justly deserved in all Christendom; that a humble man has risen to the heights and taken with him his humility.

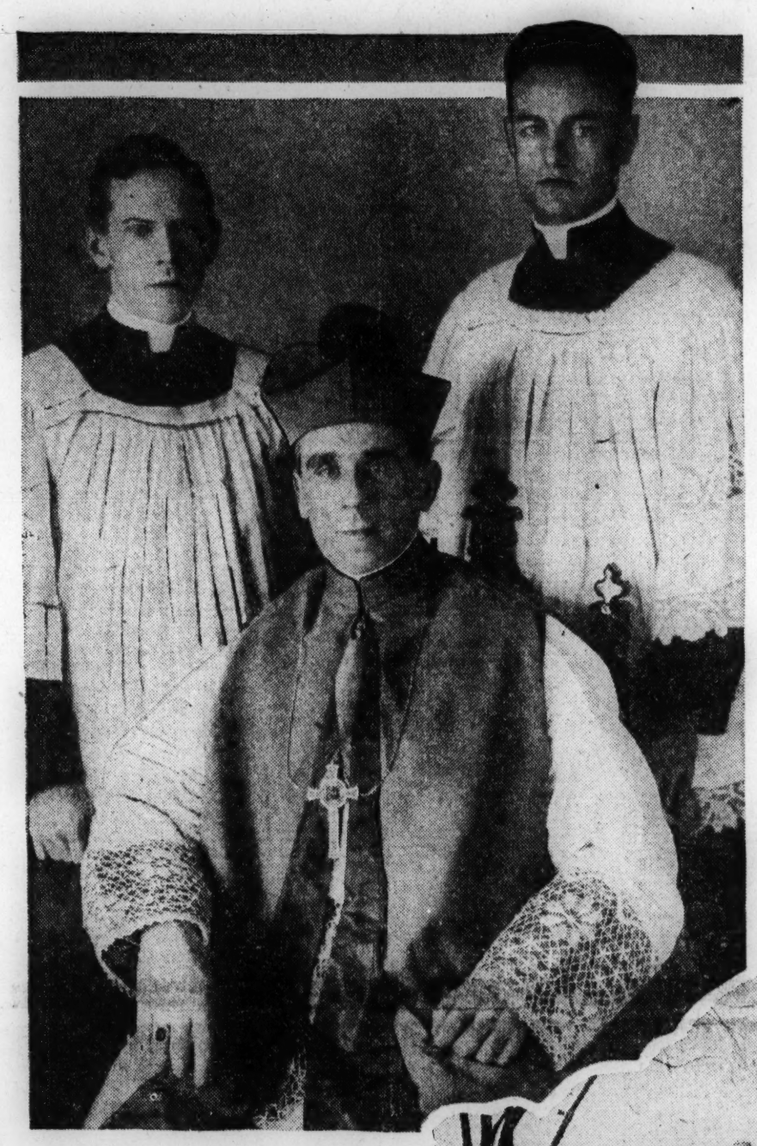

Father McNamara, who is now Bishop McNamara, is keen for St. Gabriel's. Under his guidance, things have happened in eight years that usually take anywhere from half a century to a century to accomplish. When completed the entire church property proper will have a total value of about a million dollars, and the debt on the church today stands at only $70,000 or thereabouts. At the rate they raise money out in Petworth the whole debt will have been paid off in a few years. They gather money like magic.

* * * *

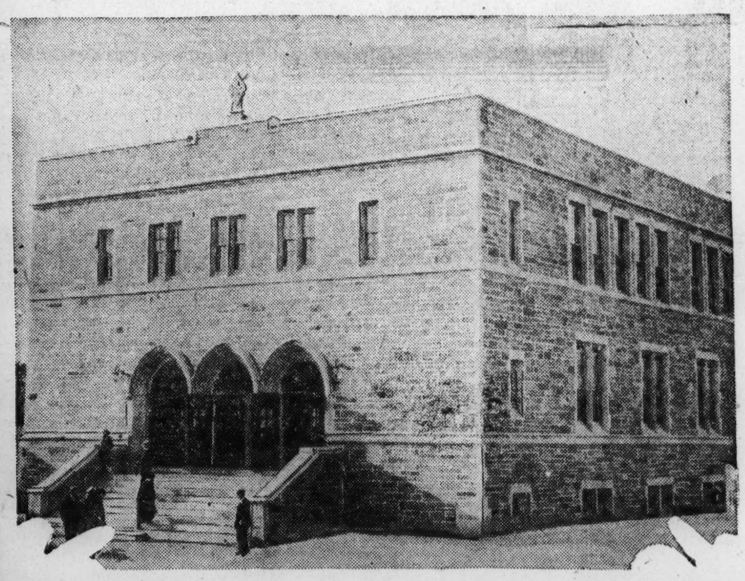

IT was only recently that Bishop McNamara celebrated his silver jubilee, the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. There was quite an ado in the parish. At a reception given in the rectory after the formal ceremonies in the church some one stepped up to the pastor and handed him a check for $20,000, a slight token of what the boys and girls of St. Gabriel's think of the man who has guided their spiritual welfare four-fifths of a decade. This is the way they do things at St. Gabriel's. The money, of course, was applied to the church fund.

Some one thought that the pastor ought to have an automobile. There was a silent campaign put on for that. In a week or so a committee called on Father McNamara with a check for $1,500.

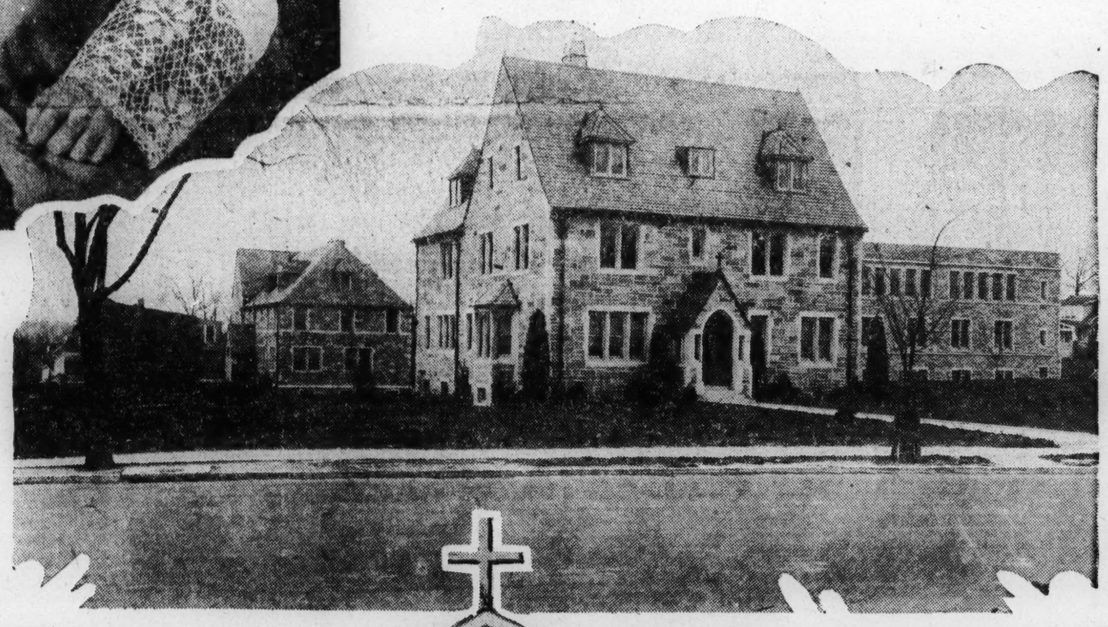

"What's this for?" he asked.

"To get yourself a car," said the parishioner who had brought the check.

"Not for me," said Father McNamara, "I'll add this to the church fund."

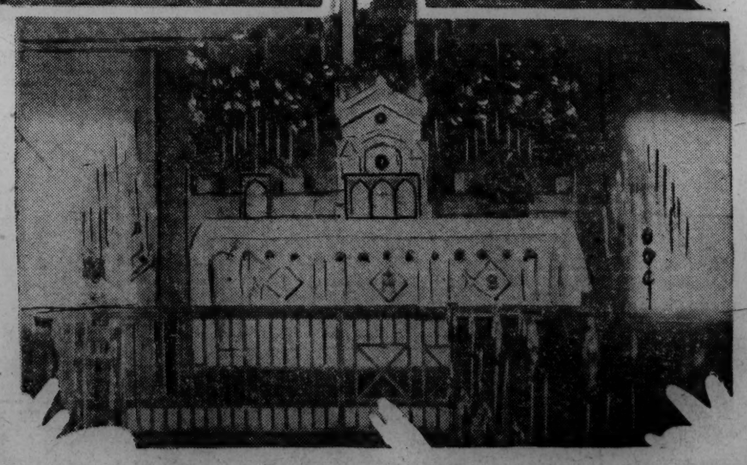

"Give me back that check," said the parishioner, reaching for the crisp paper.

In the argument that ensued, Father McNamara won out and the money went to the church.

Afterward, somebody wheeled a car to the door and left it there, and they use that now for parish work. They call it now "The Bishop's Carriage."

They are mighty proud of having a bishop at St. Gabriel's, the first bishop ever consecrated from the ranks of Washington clergy.

At the right is shown the altar when the hut was St. Gabriel's Church and at the left is shown Bishop McNamara about the time he assumed the pastorate of St. Gabriel's. (Photos by Charles Lanman.)

So far as Bishop McNamara is concerned, he wears his purple with the same calm and dignity that characterized the straight black of the parish priest. He feels it an honor that has come to St. Gabriel's rather than to him. A parish of the Diocese of Baltimore, the great glow in his soul comes from being connected with a diocese that dates back to the very beginning of America.

"You know," he muses, "the Archdiocese of Baltimore is a wonderful old territory. Its first bishop was John Carroll, who was born not very far from Washington, out in Upper Marlboro. When he was bishop the Diocese of Baltimore was practically the diocese of the United States. In fact, it took in the entire thirteen original States of North America."

At the seat of this episcopal see, the oldest in the Nation, the first Bishop of Baltimore, John Carroll, was charged with the jurisdiction of all Catholics in the United States. There were at that time about 22,000 souls in his diocese, out of a total population of some 3,000,000 in the entire United States. For 25 years he was their chief shepherd. In 1808 the see of Baltimore was raised to an archbishopric. Four suffragen dioceses were created, at Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Bardstown, Ky. Whereas there was one bishop only in that period, which ended with the death of John Carroll in Baltimore December 3, 1815, today, some hundred-odd years thence, there are more than 100 bishops of the Catholic faith in the entire United States, numerous archbishops, and four cardinals.

* * * *

A LOVER of the Diocese of Baltimore, Bishop McNamara feels that this and his native land are inseparably connected in the historic processes that brought about and helped consummate the American republic. He points with pride to the fact that the Continental Congress, meeting in Philadelphia, asked his predecessor, Bishop John Carroll, to intercede with the people of Canada in the hope that the Canadians might join forces with the Americans in common battle against the English. The commission appointed to undertake this gigantic mission was composed of Benjamin Franklin, Samuel Chase and Charles Carroll of Carrollton. Because of Canada's Catholicity, it was deemed propitious to have some one intimately connected with the Catholic hierarchy to intercede with the then Bishop Brian, Episcopal dictator of the Province of Quebec. The outstanding American Catholic cleric of his day, John Carroll, the Marylander, was prevailed upon to accompany the American mission.

As auxiliary bishop, it befalls Bishop McNamara to help in the administration of the Diocese of Baltimore. While still retaining the pastorship of St. Gabriel's he will be known in the ecclesiastical world as the Bishop of Eumenia, a defunct see in Asia Minor. It is a long way from Petworth to Eumenia, and Bishop McNamara may never visit the old city founded by Atlas II in the second century before Christ a place that has less than 1,000 inhabitants, though once it was an important and prosperous city under the Roman rule. In the thirteenth century, Christianity having suffered so under the persecution of Diocletian, the Diocese of Eumenia went out of business. That a Washington man should now be appointed over this see may seem strange to those who are not familiar with the workings of the Catholic hierarchy. It is traditional with the Roman Catholic Church to keep alive even inactive places by the appointment of men thousands of miles away to bear the titular honors of defunct dioceses. The last Bishop of Eumenia was one William Miller, who died recently somewhere in Germany.

With his actual see not in dire need of a bishop's services, the pastor of St. Gabriel's can carry on in the work selected for him, a real boon to parishioners loyal to the man and to his work. With a bishop at the helm, St. Gabriel's is just getting a fresh start, though it still remains a church and not a cathedral.

Gadsby's Tavern to Be War Memorial

Citizens of Alexandria Plan to Combine With American Legion Post No. 24 in Drive to Purchase Historic Old Buildings for Club Rooms and Museum in Honor of Service Men Who Made the Supreme Sacrifice.

By CHARLES M. SHEPPERSON.
Alexandria, Va.

IN a city and a locality abounding in structures of historic interest, one building, or rather, group of buildings, perhaps more intimately connected with the early colonial history of Virginia and the Nation than any other, has been neglected for so many years that all efforts to compile a connected and comprehensive historical sketch seem doomed to failure. The old City Tavern, of Alexandria, Va., later known as Gadsby's Tavern or Gadsby's Inn, referred to in some accounts as Clagett's Tavern, and for more than a century past bearing the name of the City Hotel, was the scene of more vitally important events connected with the early history of this country than any other building or group of buildings in existence, in the opinion of Virginia historians.

Abandoned for many years as a hotel, and its dignified character desecrated by being converted into a junk shop, Gadsby's and the City Hotel were in a fair way to entirely lose their identity and connection with the history of this section which, on account of its proximity to the Nation's Capital, and to the shrine of the Nation, Mount Vernon, is becoming more interesting and valuable with the passing of years.

Alexandria Post, No. 24, of the American Legion, had, in common with most other posts of the country, been considering since the close of the World War the building or establishing of a memorial to the men of that city who gave their lives in the service of their country in the World War. Many projects had been suggested and rejected, when finally, a year ago, the suggestion was made that the post acquire the Gadsby's Tavern property, restore these historic buildings to their original condition, and thus establish a memorial to their war dead which would, at the same time, be a shrine at which those visiting and passing through the city would pay their homage to the war dead in much the same reverent spirit in which they would visit Arlington Cemetery and Mount Vernon.

A committee of members of the post was appointed by Commander F. Clinton Knight to investigate the feasibility of purchasing the property and, after looking carefully into the matter, this committee recommended the purchase, and outlined the almost endless possibilities offered by the buildings, as a memorial, as a home for the local post and its auxiliary, as a place for the collection and preservation of relics, and as headquarters for the various patriotic organizations having chapters in this city.

The three buildings which comprise the Gadsby's Tavern property have for many years been under the ownership of the Ervin estate, the members of which are now all dead, and it now belongs to the Fleming estate, of which there are numerous heirs. A number of years ago, the curator of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, of New York, through Thomas Fortune Ryan, Virginia financier, became interested in the buildings, and purchased the interior woodwork of the main ballroom in the City Hotel, which was taken to New York and installed in a special room, which was then furnished in a style appropriate to the period of the tavern's prosperity. The accompanying photographs will give an idea of the appearance of this room and its furnishings.

ONCE agreed upon the desirability of acquiring the property, and fully realizing its immense value from a historic standpoint, as well as its adaptability to the purpose of the war veterans, the legionnaires began to consider means of financing the project. The property can be purchased for $18,000. Its restoration and repair is estimated to cost $22,000. At least half this amount must be raised within a short time. The best brains of the post were put to work on the problem, but the goal seemed impossible of attainment.

Early in 1919 a committee of Alexandria citizens was formed to raise funds and arrange a program to welcome home the men who had seen service overseas. Their work was so well done that a surplus, after the last red flare had been burned in welcome to the homecoming boys, was left of the money contributed for entertainment. The committee decided to hold this surplus as a nucleus of a fund to provide a permanent memorial to the city's dead heroes, and when the Legion post was formed the committee notified the organization that if and when the post decided upon the form of memorial they desired, the committee stood ready to aid in financing the project.

Recalling this assurance, the post called upon Robert S. Jones, chairman of the citizens' committee, for aid on the Gadsby's Tavern project. Mr. Jones immediately set in motion machinery which has ground out a plan whereby the committee purposes to go before the Alexandria public with an appeal for funds, to then purchase and restore Gadsby's Tavern and the City Hotel to their former glory, and turn them over to the post. The properties being a part of an unsettled estate, a suit in chancery to clear the title will be necessary, and by the time this legal formality is complied with, the committee confidently expects to have funds in hand to carry out its part of the transaction.

After the early settlers along the Potomac River had driven out the Indians, the cultivation of tobacco followed as the first product of the soil after the removal of the virgin forests, and tobacco warehouses were located at Aquia, Dumfries, Colchester and Alexandria. As the tide of empire pushed its way toward the Falls of the Potomac, all these tobacco warehouses were located on the Potomac Path, which afterwards became known as the King's Highway, and around these tobacco depositories grew up villages which became in the course of a very short time thriving centers of commerce. This brought, as a matter of course, other demands in the way of public accommodations. Inns, or ordinaries, as they were then called, were located in all these villages, and stage lines were established to accommodate the increasing traffic. No consecutive or comprehensive history has been written of these old hostelries, and we must look to the occasional references of the traveler, and to the dust-covered volumes of court records, to obtain even meager information concerning most of them.

* * * *

AMONG the famous hostelries erected along the Potomac Path, or King's Highway, was the City Tavern, of Alexandria, which was destined to become the scene of some of the most important events in the annals of America. Who operated the premises as proprietor, or managed the famous inn from its establishment in 1752 to the time of its enlargement in 1792, has not been definitely proven. We only know from scattering references in diaries, letters and similar documents that it became a popular and famous resort during this period, and that, in its very infancy, great events began to transpire within its walls.

ROBERT S. JONES, Chairman of Alexandria Citizens Committee for the American Legion Memorial Home.

The original City Tavern, on what is now known as North Royal street, faced the market square, one block from the Carlyle House, home of John Carlyle, commissary general of the Continental Army, in which George Washington was a frequent guest. The old tavern, which is still in a state of excellent preservation, was built of brick, two and a half stories in height, with a great ballroom on the second floor.

In 1792 John Wise, who had been conducting a tavern on the corner of Cameron and Fairfax streets, now occupied by the Anne Lee Memorial Home for the Aged, under the name of "The Bunch of Grapes," announced the opening of his new tavern at Cameron and Royal streets, in a newly constructed building just north of the original City Tavern. Mr. Wise probably operated both buildings under the name of the City Tavern, and it is assumed he removed the sign from the old building to the new.

In 1795 an Englishman named John Gadsby, with an associate whose name is believed to have been Davis, acquired control of the buildings and operated them under the name of Gadsby's Inn until 1818.

The next record we have is in 1824 and 1825, when the Marquis de Lafayette visited the United States on the invitation of Congress, and during that visit was made an honorary member of Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons, of which George Washington was the first worshipful master. It is then referred to both as "Clagett's Tavern" and the "City Hotel." It is probable that Glagett acquired the property from Gadsby, or at least assumed the management, and changed its name from Gadsby's Tavern to the City Hotel, and that it was informally referred to as "Clagett's Tavern."

A wide gap appears in the record then, the next manager of which there is authentic mention being Samuel Heflebower, a great uncle of Charles J. Deahl, of this city. He is known to have been the manager in 1862, and is supposed to have been succeeded, shortly after the close of the Civil War, by James Carr.

The youthful George Washington, in the fall of 1753, having returned from a mission to the French commandant near Lake Erie, made his report to Gov. Dinwiddie of Virginia, which brought on the French and Indian War. Washington was immediately commissioned a lieutenant colonel and took up his headquarters in the City Tavern at Alexandria, from which he recruited and drilled two companies of provincial troops, and on April 2, 1754, started on his memorable expedition which resulted in the battle of Great Meadows, in which he suffered disastrous defeat. Returning to Alexandria, he again established his headquarters in the City Tavern and awaited events. Resenting the action of Gov. Dinwiddie in reducing all provincial officers to the rank of captain, he promptly resigned and retired to private life at Mount Vernon.

* * * *

IN RESPONSE to an invitation from Gen. Braddock, who had just arrived in Virginia, Washington came to Alexandria and again made his headquarters at the City Tavern, and while there received his commission as a major on Braddock's staff. This was the second important event in the history of the tavern. Braddock's defeat and the serious condition following it resulted in the appointment of Washington as commander in chief of the Virginia forces, and history has recorded his subsequent career while protecting the Valley of Virginia.

During the Revolution, the City Tavern became the meeting place for various patriotic gatherings called at the instance of Washington and George Mason, and we can well imagine the crowds that gathered there during that exciting period, which brought George Mason to the front and called into service his marvelous political genius. These preliminary meetings in the City Tavern resulted in the organization of numerous military companies, but above all, they resulted in the preparation of the "Fairfax County Resolves," which, of all other public documents of the period, first enunciated in no uncertain terms the political position of the struggling patriots. Written by George Mason at a meeting at which Washington presided, it constitutes one of the most remarkable state documents of that or any other era in the history of this country, and became the model for future protests along the same lines.

F. CLINTON KNIGHT, Past Commander Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, and present State Commander of the Virginia American Legion.

The Revolution came, with its harrowing effects. Washington was called to lead the Continental Army, and Mason, his neighbor and friend, took his place in the House of Burgesses.

At the conclusion of the Revolution, after his return to private life, Washington became interested in the development of the upper reaches of the Potomac River and obtained charters from the legislatures of Maryland and Virginia. An impost and commercial duty, or regular tariff, was imposed upon all articles passing between the colonies of Maryland and Virginia, and to simplify the matter Washington called a little convention in Alexandria, which was held in the City Tavern, to regulate this embarrassing situation. From this convention grew the general convention which prepared the Constitution of the United States.

The delegates to this convention from Maryland—Mr. Stone, Mr. Jenifer and Mr. Chase—assembled with those of Virginia—George Mason, Alexander Henderson and Gen. Washington, in the City Tavern on April 22, 1785. On the twenty-fifth, after holding several meetings in the Tavern, Washington sent his coach to Alexandria and conducted the delegates to Mount Vernon, and there, behind closed doors, they agreed on a compact between Maryland and Virginia which recommended a future meeting to strengthen the Federal system of government.

This meeting was held in Annapolis, September 11, 1786, and as only five States were represented, other resolutions were passed calling upon the various colonies to send delegates to a general convention which assembled in Philadelphia May 24, 1787, and drafted the Constitution of the United States. Virginia was the tenth State to take favorable action, through its legislature, on the document.

* * * *

ALEXANDRIA celebrated the event, and Gen. Washington records it in his diary. The celebration took place at the City Tavern, with Washington present and participating, and in a letter to Charles Cotesworthy Pinckney, he writes: "Thus the citizens of Alexandria, when convened, constituted the first public company in America which had the pleasure of pouring a libation to the prosperity of the ten States that had actually adopted the general government. * * * I have just returned from assisting at the entertainment."

Elected President of the United States by the unanimous voice of the people, Washington started on his journey to New York for inauguration. On his arrival in Alexandria he was received at the City Tavern by the mayor, Dennis Ramsay, the commonality and populace of the town, with a farewell address by the mayor, to which Washington feelingly responded.

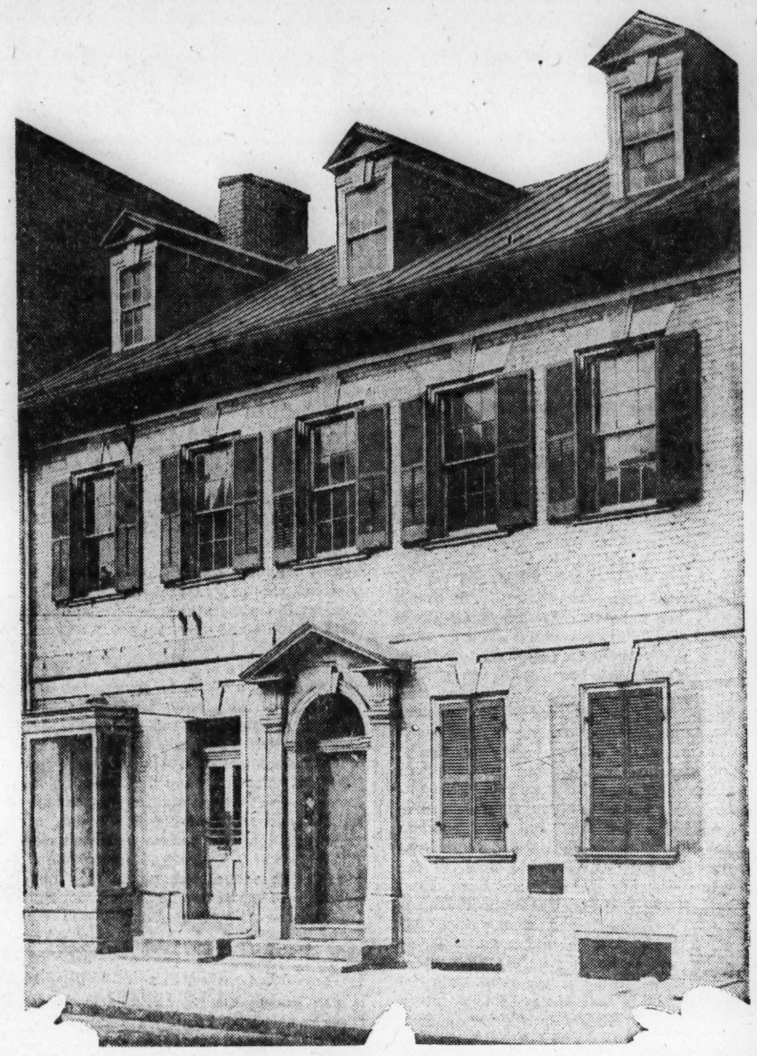

His period of service as President ended, Washington returned again to Mount Vernon, to be again entertained at the City Tavern by his friends and neighbors when he reached here.

In the City Tavern, on February 11, 1799 (there was a difference of eleven days between the calendar then in use and the one now used), was given the last public celebration of Washington's Birthday during his lifetime, and here, the previous year, had been the first public celebration. The Birthnight Balls, given in honor of the King and Queen of England, which were among the most brilliant functions known to an age when brilliant balls were the rule rather than the exception, had been given in the main ballroom of the City Tavern, or Gadsby's as it was now known, until superseded by the celebrations of Washington's Birthday.

The celebration of February 11, 1799, was a most pretentious one. Washington was escorted from Mount Vernon by three troops of dragons, and reviewed, from the steps of Gadsby's, the body of troops which were paraded in his honor. In an account of the day's happenings published in "The Columbian Mirror and Alexandria Gazette," the following appears:

"The evening was concluded by a ball and supper given at Mr. Gadsby's, which was much superior to anything of the kind ever known here. The company was numerous and brilliant, and beauty of person and excellence of taste, in the ladies, seemed to vie for a preference. The house was elegantly illuminated and the ballroom was adorned with a transparent likeness of Gen. Washington, executed in a masterly style."

More Flapper Husbands, Urges Lady Peel

American Men Nowadays Must Keep Up With Fair Sex in Youth, Dress and Good Looks, Says Beatrice Lillie, if the "Oldsters" Insist Upon Having Pretty "Debs" for Their Wives

By LILLIAN G. GENN

Beatrice Lillie, English comedienne, who is Lady Peel in private life.

"IT seems to me that every time I return to America I find the women looking younger and prettier than ever. Really, it is amazing," commented Lady Peel, wife of Sir Robert Peel, known on the stage as Beatrice Lillie.

"But isn't it just due to their very short skirts and bobbed hair?" she was asked.

"In a way it is, because they are becoming more abbreviated all the time," she laughed. "But that would not make them look so young, would it? In fact, if there wasn't that spirit of youthfulness within them, their faces would contrast oddly with their youthful clothes and haircuts. But their faces and their spirit match their clothes in youthfulness. I believe it is their mental attitude. They have a youthful attitude toward everything."

* * * *

SHE was seated in her dressing room, a comfortable, colorful place with lovely costumes hanging on the rack half covered by a gay cretonne curtain, a negligee thrown carelessly over a chair, a dressing table framed in electric lights on which were colorful make-up jars, a photograph of her husband, Sir Robert Peel, and their little son; photographs plastered all over the walls, and in the midst of it all Beatrice Lillie, more colorful looking than her background, because she herself is such a sparkling and vivid personality. She is small and slim, and her closely clipped black hair boldly brings out her beautiful features.

Beatrice Lillie's career is one of those romantic tales that one likes to read about and yet is quite sure can never happen. She was born in a little town in Canada, and at the age of 15 went to Germany, where her sister, a talented pianist, was studying. When war broke out she went to London, and, because she was in need of funds, she made the rounds of the theatrical agents looking for a job.

She sang very serious, solemn songs, to which manager after manager listened with polite but bored interest. Finally, when Andre Charlot sent for her, she desperately decided there was no use in singing the same sad repertoire for him. Since she didn't know any other songs and yet wanted to go to the audition, she determined that at least she would have some fun in making her last appearance before a theatrical manager.

And so she sang her tragic songs, but this time she laughed and grimaced through them, enjoying herself hugely, much to Charlot's astonishment. But evidently her funny antics made an impression on him, for he gave her a job as a comic and the stage was thus saved an irresistibly funny comedienne.

However, it was not until she had undergone a long, hard struggle that Beatrice Lillie finally registered as a hit and took England by storm. America soon added its plaudits, but that was not until after the tall, handsome Sir Robert Peel saw her and made her his bride. Marrying into this old and distinguished family has not made the actress affect the cold and aristocratic pose. She is very unassuming and friendly, and one immediately feels at ease with her. Best of all, fame, fortune and a title have not impaired her sense of humor. It is very much in action off the stage as on the stage, though, of course, it is tempered with more dignity.

"I love it in America," she said; "there is so much doing here. One can even get up a jolly party the very same day. I tried it in England and they considered it a rather shocking but delightful innovation. They are accustomed to plan their parties weeks and months ahead. You might think that it would therefore be difficult to get them for a party the same day, but English people are usually to be found at home. They are more sedentary and home-loving and do not go out half so much as the American people do.

* * * *

HERE one can go to parties every day. And if it isn't a party, it is something else. One feels on the qui vive all the time. I guess that is one of the reasons, also, that the women look so radiantly alive and young. You can't tell the grandmother from her flapper granddaughter. Both seem to have the same zest for living. I believe it is because they are so active that they don't get the chance to think of their age or of the fact that they are growing older. The women are getting to be younger-looking in England and in France, too, but it is not quite so obvious as here in America."

She paused for a moment while she applied some make-up.

"It is very nice," the actress continued, "that this spirit of youthfulness is beginning to pervade. But I think it would be still nicer if the men adopted the spirit, too."

In Miss Lillie's opinion, it is not so pleasant to see a man looking ten or fifteen years older than he really is with a very youthful wife. As if to make the contrast more pointed, the men do not show much interest in their clothes.

"They do not dress as nicely or as carefully as the Englishmen," said Miss Lillie.

"Are Englishmen more fastidious about their physical appearance?" she was asked.

"On the whole, they are. They are brought up from childhood to be careful of their appearance, just as much as the girl is. In former times it was only the men who gave attention to symmetrical and strong bodies. Today the condition has changed. The average woman is more interested than the man in attaining physical perfection. But in America it seems that it is only the women who are interested in their looks. Witness the beauty and health columns that almost every magazine and newspaper publish for the women readers."

"But the men are too busy, too absorbed in their work to think about their looks," it was objected.

"True enough," admitted the famous comedienne. "But that is no reason why they can't diet or exercise. The American business woman does not let herself go. She finds the time to make a success of her work and yet not lose her looks doing it. What is going to happen if the women keep on looking so young while the men appear to be older? Women will become dissatisfied with their husbands. They will seek the younger men.

"As it is, when the American man marries he wants only a young woman. No matter how old he is, he wants a young wife. Naturally after five or ten years of married life the wife is still young—perhaps even younger-looking than at the time of her marriage"—she flashed a smile—"while the husband begins to look like the father or the grandfather of the wife."

"But men seek young wives everywhere, don't they? That isn't typical of the American men?"

"Oh, but it is in that they seek very young women. I am not speaking of women who look young but of those who really are youngsters. The Englishmen, and even the men in some countries of the Continent—at least in those countries that I've been—marry women the same age or even older. Much more seems to count with them than just youthfulness in a wife. But here, so far as I've noticed, the youth and the prettiness of the woman are the only things a man looks for.

"Now, this sounds as if I am criticizing the men. But nothing is farther from my mind. They have so many splendid qualities, and in some ways are far superior to the men of Europe. It is only that I think they are losing so much when they don't try to keep up a youthful appearance that matches a bit with their wives.

"Instead of working at such high tension and speed, the man should relax more. In England everything stops at 3 o'clock while the men can have their tea. And the women, too—even those who work in the department stores. It is really a wonderful habit that ought to be instituted in America. Just five to ten minutes, and how much better you feel! There are a few houses, I understand, that do it here, but they are quite reticent about it. They are afraid of being kidded.

"Since Americans work at top speed and their minutes seem so precious to them, they might regard such an idea as an absurd one. They don't realize, though, that they would really gain more, because when their nerves have a chance to relax for those few minutes they can return to their work with greater energy. Certainly England, which is a very economically inlined nation, would never have persisted in such a habit if the time spent in drinking tea were regarded as sheer waste of time or just as an opportunity to gossip. The busiest of men realize its necessity and its value.

"Englishmen are very keen about the sports, too. Of course, American men like them, but you will usually find that they prefer to sit and watch the sports rather than engage in them. That is why if you take a dozen of the average Englishmen and a dozen of the average American men, you will find that the Englishmen have better and trimmer figures."

"Don't you think it is possible that the men might yet catch a little of woman's enthusiasm for youth?" it was suggested.

"Yes, indeed," Miss Lillie smiled. "If women continue to look youthful, if they feel and act youthful, then they are apt to bring their children up imbued with the same idea, the same enthusiasm for looking young, for thinking young. My mother is a wonderful example of what just thinking young thoughts can do. She is positively growing younger all the time. And she does not do anything to keep young in the way of going to the baths or the masseuse. Her mind is active and young, and strangers always take her for my sister."

* * * *

OUTSIDE in the house the orchestra was beginning to play the overture, a gay, lilting tune. Miss Lillie hastened with her make-up.

"You know," she said with a twinkle of amusement in her eyes, "with the women growing younger-looking all the time, it is possible that they will more easily be able to fool the men as to their ages. And so the American men, who seem to have a fetish for marrying only young women, will be fooled anyway. And a good thing it will be, too."

"In what way?" the interviewer questioned.

"A woman of 25 or 30," she replied, "can be a more sensible wife for a man than a young girl of 18 or 20. Isn't that so? And she can certainly be a far more intelligent mother. The great disparity in the ages of the American husband and wife can not make for much companionship between them. The wife will want to go to dances, parties and teas, while the husband will want to rest his weary bones by the fireside with his newspaper. In England the wives don't go off to all kinds of affairs without their husbands, as is the habit here. They are always escorted by their husbands."

Although the English actress quite naturally liked her countrymen best, she repeatedly professed her admiration for the American men.

"I particularly admire the way the wealthy men here can get their sons to work," Miss Lillie said. "In England the sons of the upper classes receive a very fine education at some university like Oxford or Cambridge, but it isn't considered the thing to permit them to go into the trades after graduation. Nor are many of the professions open to them. In this country the sons of the wealthy can work at anything at all, and that is a splendid thing. My son will come into a very large estate when he is 21, but he is not going to know that, if I can help it. I want him to work and he can select any profession that he wants."

There was a knock on the door. The actress hustled into a lovely frock, took a final glimpse into the mirror and then turned to go.

"The American men are all right," she said with her hand on the doorknob, "only let them procure from the women their secret of youth. And they ought to be mighty thankful that they don't have to make as long a trip as Ponce de Leon did," she chuckled and was gone.

Keep Young With Mamma!

WHAT is going to happen if the women keep on looking so young while the men appear to be older? asks Lady Robert Peel, the Beatrice Lillie of the stage. Women will become dissatisfied with their husbands and they will seek the younger men, is her answer.

When the American man marries, he wants only a young woman. After a few years the husband begins to look like the father or grandfather of his wife.

Instead of working at such high tension and speed, men should relax more. When nerves are relaxed for a few minutes, you return to work with greater energy.

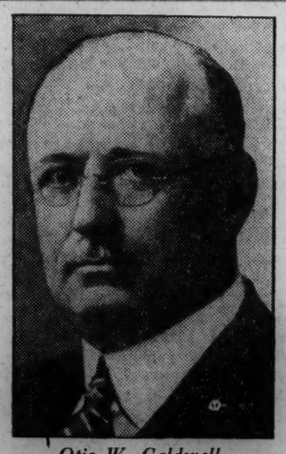

American men are all right, you understand; only, let them procure from their womenfolk their secret of youth!

Modern Education Costs More But Accomplishments Are Greater

By OTIS W. CALDWELL.
(Lincoln Institute of School Experimentation, Columbia University.)

Otis W. Caldwell.

New York, (A.P.).—Modern education is bigger and more costly than the education of a few years ago, but its accomplishments are superior.

The school of today has everybody's children in it, many of them from homes and ancestry which do not provide the educational background enjoyed by the restricted and privileged school population of an earlier day.

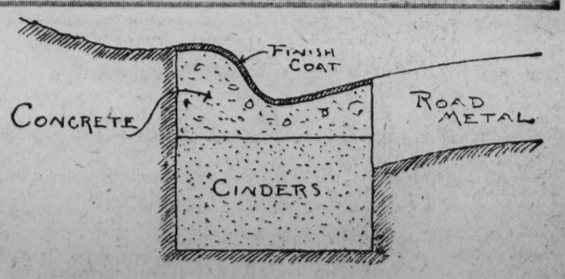

Whether the vast growth in enrollment has been accompanied by an increase in pupil accomplishments is harder to answer than when education attempted only the so-called fundamentals. Still, a survey of modern eighth grade work in Boston schools, compared with a Boston survey in 1845, shows that present-day students, while weaker on mere memory facts are stronger on the use of knowledge, on solving problems and in doing the things which life makes necessary, than were the pupils tested 80 years ago.

Nowadays, instead of trying to raise the highest a bit higher, education has undertaken to raise the whole mass. In this alone is evidence of accomplishment. The older school did not help most children, for most of them did not go to school. Now they are all enrolled, from the child scarcely more than an infant to the budding citizen and even the adult.

If anyone doubts that education is making significant gains for its unequalled school population, let him obtain school reports from any truly modern city.

The Milwaukee report of 1926 is one of the most valuable pictorial educational documents yet issued. Milwaukee spent $22.02 per pupil enrolled in 1900, but in 1925 the number of pupils had more than doubled and the expenditure per pupil had increased to $92.25. The report is crowded with evidence that education and real life are getting closer together, that education is better and not merely bigger and more costly. Measurements show that even with our large numbers of relatively unselected pupils the fundamental subjects are gaining in quality of work accomplished.

Concrete Cutter for Driveway

© HOUSE AND GARDEN

Where the driveway is on a slope it is often necessary to provide a substantial gutter to prevent damage from erosion. Such a gutter can be made easily according to the accompanying sketch. The shape of it is such that forms are unnecessary with the exception of a single board about 8 inches wide at either side. If the concrete is poured fairly dry the shape of the gutter can easily be made with a trowel. It should have a foundation of well-tamped cinders at least 10 inches deep, and the concrete itself should never be less than 6 inches thick at any point. The width of the gutter would vary from 18 inches to 2½ feet, according to the width of the driveway.

In grading against the drive it is well to have a flat space or even a slight dip in the soil so that water gushing down toward the gutter will be checked before it goes into the gutter and hence will carry less soil along with it.

For driveways which are not only on hills but are curved as well, such a gutter prevents a great deal of damage to the lawn caused by cars taking the curves too sharply. Its shape also prevents damage to the tires of the car should they ride up against it, for there are no sharp edges to catch.

C-l-i-c-k! And Another Prize Is "Shot"

Hunting Wild Game With a Camera Ever So Much More Fun Than Stalking Jungle Beasts With Rifles, Insists Vivacious "Bobs" Dugmore, as She Relates Some of Her "Thrillers" in the Inner Recesses of the Dark Continent

By ISABEL STEPHEN

"BOBS" DUGMORE, '22, prefers the velvety darkness of the African jungles to the bright lights of New York ballrooms and night clubs, hunting wild animals with a camera to dancing and flirting, the tom-tom of the natives to the most celebrated orchestras and classical symphonies.

Miss Dugmore admits, however, that jungleland might not be so alluring to others as it is to her. There are such drawbacks as the tsetse fly, which breeds sleeping sickness; the spirillum tick, which generates a fatal fever; fetid pools, frequently the only source of drinking water—not to mention lions, elephants, hippos, rhinos and vicious buffaloes, which are the real lords of the forests.

However, Henrietta Dugmore, better known as "Bobs," has imbibed the fascination of the jungle from the time she was 2 years old. She is the daughter of Maj. A. Radclyffe Dugmore, F. R. G. S., F. R. P. S., photographer of big game and a life member of the New York Zoological Society, also of the American Museum of Natural History.

"Daddy would like to have me take part in the regulation social life and go to balls and so on during the season, but I have a very good defense. I tell him that if it had been his ambition for me to be a society butterfly he should have brought me up differently," Miss Dugmore explained. "He never should have introduced me to the enchantment of going 'out on safari'—that's what they call trekking out into the jungles.

* * * *

"THOUGH I was born in America and my mother is an American, I feel far more at home in the jungle than I do in Times Square, New York, or in the Place d'Opera, Paris. I feel safer in the jungle, for terrific, congested traffic confuses me.

"It has always been my ambition to act as Daddy's assistant, and I am thrilled at the prospect of starting this summer, when we are going to the Canadian Rockies to 'shoot' big game there with a camera. I haven't yet acquired his trick with animals—his ability to catch them with a pleasant expression—but I am really not afraid of them, and in time I hope to be able to do so.

"Elephants are the most intelligent of all animals. There is one called the Crown Prince in British East Africa which every hunter has tried to get. I would love to snap him, for I just know he has a gorgeous sense of humor. He attacks the sugar plantations and then disappears. This is immediately a challenge to all hunters of big game to get on his track. He comes right back and does some more destructive mischief just to show that he knows they have been after him. He is an enormous brute with gigantic tusks and quite a national celebrity."

* * * *

MISS DUGMORE was asked to relate a few of her thrilling adventures in the jungle —hair-raising experiences which brought her into the shadow of death.

"I have never been taken on Daddy's really dangerous expeditions so far," she said wistfully. "He has had some very exciting times stalking elephant and buffalo. For instance, one evening he was waiting in a blind for an elephant when he was surprised to hear a herd of elephants right behind him and heading right in his direction. They came blowing and flapping their ears until they were within 8 feet of him and their long trunks were directly over his head as he lay flat on the ground, all alone and very lonely.

"For fifteen minutes they stayed there," there was admiring awe in "Bobs" Dugmore's voice as she described her father's adventure. "They knew there was a human being somewhere about, but were fortunately too close to smell him. At last, after what seemed an eternity, they moved on; but Daddy got their picture before they were hidden in the forest.

"Another time he was stalking a small herd of buffalo when he heard a terrific crashing in the underbrush to the rear and a second later a larger herd was upon him. He was between two fires. Then a funny thing happened and saved Daddy's life. The one herd alarmed the other and the two herds started off, giving Daddy a dandy opportunity to take their pictures. Those are the sort of adventures I hope to have some day."

So innately feminine is "Bobs" Dugmore that her ambitions sound rather paradoxical. Some 5 foot 3 of bubbling, effervescent spirits she is, with blond, bobbed, wavy hair and large laughing blue eyes.

Her hero is her father, whose constant companion she is. It was difficult to sidetrack her from talking exclusively of the major's exploits. However, she did dig up one or two of her own exciting experiences in the jungle. As, for instance, the occasion on which her party ran into a couple of buffaloes. "We went out that morning to see if we couldn't run across a rhino or a leopard. Instead of these, our little Ford ran almost plumb into a couple of big buffalo bulls feeding. We were unarmed, and you know a car is apt to break down unexpectedly. Buffalo usually charge on sight. They lower their heads to protect their chests, and even if we had had a gun it wouldn't have been of much use.

"Well, that pair started bellowing and pawing the air with their front hoofs, which is ordinarily the preliminary of a charge. Fortunately that was an off day with them. They weren't looking for trouble; just wanted to warn us that we were trespassing, and we didn't stop to argue the matter with them. We got off lickety-split.

"In the excitement our chauffeur picked out a route along a very narrow ledge which skirted a sheer drop of 2,000 feet. Just as we reached one of those hairpin bends, simultaneously the brake went flooey and the crust of earth gave way. Our driver just managed to swing into the bank and that saved us from being launched into eternity. My mother was thrown out and slightly hurt.

"That night we slept in a farmhouse in Kyabi. I was reliving the auto smash in a sort of nightmare when I was suddenly awakened by hearing an animal, which I surmised was a leopard, pawing on the furrows of the corrugated tin roof. In the dead silence of the night I could hear, too, the clawing of a fluttering fowl's feet. My room was on the ground floor and the window was wide open. Leopards had been killing dogs on that farm, and I momentarily expected to have the beast enter my room. I kept my head under the bedclothes—not that that would have helped any," Miss Dugmore interposed with a gamin grin 'but I hated the idea of meeting the leopard face to face.

"I didn't dare to get up to investigate. It really was a most unpleasant half hour which followed.

"Leopards are very bold. The next evening one visited that farm and picked up a puppy which was lying right under the knees of our host.

"Another night after a long conversation on the subject of leopards I awoke to hear a snuffing in my room. That time I summoned up enough courage to call out for Daddy, who occupied the next room. He came with a light and we found a blind ox had blundered in.

"Although I took hardly any part in the photographing of the wild animals, I did a lot of fishing in the Mara River, which has a species of very large catfish called carbels. They are very game and fight like the dickens. We use a very large hook fishing for carbels, and one day the man who was fishing next to me caught a crocodile. It naturally snatched hook, line and rod from the fisherman—and he was mighty lucky it didn't drag him into the water, too. But first you should have seen the frantic turmoil it made of the river—it looked as if some one had fired a depth charge!"

* * * *

AS Miss Dugmore could not recall any more "thrilling experiences" at the moment, she digressed to the angles of jungle customs and discomforts.

"The tribes all throughout the Masai reserve are very kind and gentle, if you approach and meet them properly. They are very sensitive, however, and you must be careful not to hurt their feelings. When they greet you they always spit on the palms of their hands before shaking hands with you. Then they bring you gifts such as gourds of milk. These gourds are never washed. The natives use smoke to purify them. Naturally the flavor of the milk is anything but delicate, but it's much better than the water which we are obliged to take from water holes, where wild animals drink and bathe. People who imagine that the natives of these parts are dirty creatures are very much mistaken. They simply love soap, and it is necessary to get our drinking water supply immediately we strike camp, otherwise the servants would get there first for a swim.

"The men and women are all beautifully built. They are like marvelous bronze statues and have the most exquisitely small hands and feet. The women do all the outdoor work, such as tilling the soil and so forth, and the men work as domestic servants in the plantations, doing the housework.

"Their marriage customs are interesting. The bride has to run away and be caught three times before the ceremony is considered complete. A bride is purchased with so many head of cattle. If the groom can afford to pay only two head of cattle, the bride doesn't run very fast. However, if he can pay a dozen head, then she can run like blazes. Every man can have as many wives as he wants, but the largest total averages around five.

"The chiefs are not at all high-hat. They are quite chummy with their tribes, but wear a great many more bracelets and other ornaments than the poorer men. The women also are loaded down with heavy copper bracelets which they wear on their arms and legs.

"All have beautiful teeth, which they keep in excellent condition by scouring them with soapsticks. In certain tribes it is considered very swank to have two front teeth extracted and wear substitutes of boxwood false teeth on ordinary occasions and teeth made of hippo's tusks for gala affairs.

* * * *

"THEN the 'Dances of the Maidens,' which take place in the courtyards of hotels and are very interesting for an hour or so, get frightfully on your nerves after the boom! boom! boom! bang! bang! bang of the tom-tom has been kept up monotonously for three days without interruption.

"All these people have a marvelous sense of rhythm which makes the most celebrated dancers in civilized countries appear awkward in comparison.

"The women are very strong. They not only carry huge bundles on their heads but very often carry a child or two strapped on top of the bundle. That is probably because they are out of doors so much. The men, who, on the contrary, are occupied with indoor occupations, are not nearly so strong and husky.

"They are not a very superstitious people, and back of most of their superstitions there is a solid foundation. For example, they have a 'sacred tree' on top of each hill. They know that trees attract water, and as water is very precious they worship this tree as a god.

"All of them are very vain and adore adorning themselves with bracelets and beads, but not just any sort of beads. Each section has a particular color and shape of bead which is fashionable, and they don't care a rap for any other sort. They will accept them politely, but will throw them away as soon as the donor departs.

"Oh, I love the jungle! I have had a wonderful time here and every one has been perfectly lovely to me, but I long to see the great plains and forests again. I am looking forward to the trip to the Canadian Rockies, but I won't be perfectly happy until I get 'home' to the jungle.

"And next time I'll be Daddy's assistant cameraman and shoot big game with a camera! I don't dare hope I'll ever catch his knack with big game, but at least I'll have the thrill of snapping some marvelous pictures.

"I'm fed up with civilization—I want the wilds!"

And on this wistful note the young lady left for a smart tea fight in one of Park avenue's swankiest rendezvous.

Hunting with a camera has all the thrills of dangerous adventure, but leaves no wanton slaughter of animal life in its wake. A close-up of a charging elephant is a real prize. At bottom of page is shown a herd of giraffes galloping across the plains on the approach of a safari in the Tanganyika territory.

"SHOOTING animals with a gun is much easier than shooting them with a camera, but I'd rather shoot them with a camera than a gun. They are so beautiful alive. I just couldn't find words to express the sublime gorgeousness of a herd of gazelles or giraffes approaching a pool in the early dawn, or the magnificence of a herd of elephants charging over the plains."

"Gun" Washes, Brushes, Cars in Two Minutes

Motor buses at an English station are thoroughly washed in a few moments with the aid of a combined brush and water spray gun, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Electric pumps force the water out at a pressure of 3,000 pounds to the square inch and the operator can regulate the stream to form a fine spray or a direct flow, as he desires. The exterior of the car can be cleaned very quickly and water reaches parts that would be slighted in ordinary washing.

Pressure Equalizer for Tires Helps Reduce Wear

Automobile tires are easily inflated to exactly the same pressure with an equalizer that has been introduced in England. This insures safer and easier driving and a saving of rubber, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Less time is required to inflate the tires as two can be blown up in about the same time as one. Air is supplied to two tires simultaneously, as there are valve connections to both from a main tube. Pressure may thus be quickly equalized and when the pump is used, both are inflated alike. A gauge reading is taken from a valve at the point where the tubes to each tire join. The pump is operated by a foot lever.

Rivers Made Famous in Poetry and Song

Rivers endear themselves to those that live near their banks, and the sentiment finds natural expression in poetry and song. But, according to the Mentor Magazine, there is sometimes more sentiment than truth in river songs.

Take "Roll, Jordan, Roll" for instance. To accuse the Jordan of rolling is like accusing the Sphinx of cutting capers. The Jordan sleeps on throughout the ages in unruffled serenity. "Deep River," one of the most beautiful of all negro spirituals, treats the Jordan with a little more respect. Its text alludes to crossing over the Jordan into the promised land.

A river in Florida has gained an undeserved prominence through song, the Suwanee. Stephen Foster never even saw this river, an inconspicuous little stream emptying into the Gulf of Mexico. He sought the name of a Southern river in two syllables when writing "Old Folks at Home." He had "Pedee" jotted down on his notebook, but he did not like the sound of it. Search of a map revealed Suwanee, a very singable name, and thus an inconspicuous river sprang into world prominence, for "Old Folks at Home" has been translated into nearly every language extant and is without doubt one of the most popular songs in the English language.

America surely does not lack for singable rivers. The Hudson, for instance, should offer prolific inspiration to song writers. There is a much-belabored piano piece, "Moonlight on the Hudson," but there seems to be no outstanding song. Back some 20 or 25 years ago Paul Dresser wrote a ballad, "On the Banks of the Wabash," which gained a tremendous vogue. Not quite so long ago William Knight Logan immortalized the Missouri by writing a waltz which reverberated around the globe. Words have more recently been applied to the old waltz "Beautiful Ohio," although the Ohio is not particularly exceptional for its beauty. The composer of "Where the Silvery Colorado Winds Its Way" could scarcely have seen the Colorado in the Grand Canyon and called it "silvery." There it is yellow with mud.

That imposing stream, the Mississippi, has not escaped the song writers. "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee" refers to an old river boat plying up and down that waterway, while "On the Mississippi" has even more direct application. "Down on the Chesapeake" and "Down on the Potomac" are other American river songs.

The Irish and Scotch bards have not been unmindful of the rivers' charm. "The Bells of Shandon," whose air is similar to that of "The Last Rose of Summer," refers at the close of every verse to "The pleasant waters of the River Lee." Other Irish rivers mentioned in song are the Shannon, Liffey and Wash.

The Scotch seem equally enamored of rivers. The mistake is often made of thinking that "Comin' Through the Rye" alludes to passing through a field of grain, but there is a streamlet of that name in Ayrshire, and the lines refer to fording this stream. There is probably no poet who keeps so consistently to the source of his inspiration as Burns in his "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton." The whole theme of this number tells of the charms of the Afton, incidentally admonishing it not to disturb Mary in her dreams. Burns also wrote the words to "On the Banks and Braes of Bonnie Doon."

The Thames has not gone unsung; and in Holland, of course, the Zuider Zee, though this body is properly an arm of the North Sea.

Carnation That Changes Hue Gains Beauty in Fading

Instead of becoming less attractive as it withers, a carnation produced in England assumes a delicate gray color, more beautiful than its shade when fresh, according to reports, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It is a medium size blossom with heliotrope stripes.

WELL, all I know is what I read in the papers. As I pen these lines I am messing around in Indiana. (In fact everybody that is in Indiana is messing around, or was till they caught 'em.) I am trying to keep my visit kinder quiet. I don't want to let it get out I am here. But I do believe the old State is trying to do better. There is a whole lot of awful nice people in here. They are kinder like Florida during their setback; they are not really responsible for what some have done.

I proposed the other day that they run George Ade for Governor, and I wasen't kidding. He has lived here in this State all his life and he has either been too honest or slick for 'em. You know he is a very remarkable man. I think he has his life better organized than any man I ever saw. He just travels around and goes where he pleases, writes when He pleases, and always is happy when he has his congenial friends with him, and he carries them with him, so he takes no chances. He is down in the West Indies somewhere prowling around, he and some friends. But really wouldent he add a lot of confidence and even dignity to the Governorship of Indiana?

AND speaking of Humorists, wasent that too bad about Chauncey Depew dying! Oh, what a grand old man! I was pulling for him to reach a thousand. He left Florida too quick, come North and got a cold. That's one thing if you go away for the winter, stay for the winter. It's the cold spring months that are bad. He comes to see me in the Follies one time at a Matinee performance, and I will always remember it. He never went out to shows. I introduced him to the audience and he got a tremendous hand, and then is where he pulled the Gag on me that I have so oft repeated. I made him make a little speech, and as I had just finished my little roping stunt, he said, "I have been entertaining the Public for 70 years (that was on his ninetieth birthday) and I have never found it necessary to use a rope!" Wasent that nifty? Lord, just think of the memories of that man! He was in politics before Abraham Lincoln decided to "Choose to run." Just think of the Presidents he had known, and help elect too. He was going to go to Kansas City if he had lived. Well, they missed a greater attraction than any one they will have there. Suppose he hadent had this humor and wonderful entertaining qualities, how long do you recken he would have lived? And the great part of it was he dident have to be funny for a living. It was kind of a side line with him.

I wonder who he was for for President? Well, I wonder who anybody is for. Did you ever see such a scrambled up race? As I told you last week I take my little straw vote every night, and I had a mighty hard time scaring up any Jim Watson sentiment here in his own State. I can hardly understand Jim running. I guess it was to kinder head off Hoover. I tell you this Hoover is a tough Guy to head off. Of course the smoke-filled room at 3:30 a. m. in Kansas City may head him off. That's stopped many a good man, and let an inferior one get by. I still got my bet with William Allen Hearst, that Coolidge will run, and I have not lost yet.

* * * *

OH, and say, did you see where the Daughters of the American Revolution had vetoed the speaking in Massachusetts of William Randolph White, Governor General of Emporia, Kans.? It seems like White was agin the Revolution at the time. Him and that old fellow Ed Howe, of Potato Bug Hill, and Henry Allen. Well, all these old Kansas Newspaper men wrote Editorials against the Revolution, and that's whats the matter with the Daughters. I hope it don't make any difference with him in Kansas. Course if he is barred everywhere else he can always go to Oklahoma. They will listen to you there, I don't care what you were against.

I told you about being made Colonel down in Kentucky. The Governor made me Aide on his staff, with the rank of Colonel. So I am working now on the Goatee, and getting out the old string tie. But no kidding. I sure do like those old fellows. They sure do know how to live down there. I like that Lexington. Its got the prettiest country around it in the world. We all went out to "Big Ham Davis' " and had a breakfast, at a town called Midway. He makes these wonderful smoked Hams. The Governor was there, and a fine fellow, Republican, but unusual. Boy what a Breakfast!

Well, sir, I guess you read about 'em. But if you have I must tell you more. This Carr Creek Basketball team, that kicked up such a fuss later on among all the best High School Basketball teams in America. They was in Lexington when I got there. They come from away down in the mountain. There is only eighteen boys at their little country school. They played barefooted, and out on the ground. They just had the baskets fastened up to two trees, had no suits when they come to play in the Kentucky State Tournament. They walked in eight miles to get on the train, and it was one of those slow jerkwater lines, and the reporter in Lexington asked them how they made out coming from the Mountains, and the kid told em. "We made pretty good time till we got on the train." The whole five is cousins and two are Brothers. They were beat for the Kentucky Championship by one goal in I think it was the second extra quarter. They never had a coach, and don't know what is commonly called by the coaches "the finer points of the game." They just know one point. I don't know if they call it fine or not, but that is they have been told that the idea of the game is to get that Ball in that hoop, and Boy, how they do it! I think it's the greatest example of what any school any place can do. Its funny that the two greatest upsets in our Sports have been by Kentucky teams, when you think of what Center College at Danville did a few years back. I visited the school, and they only have a couple of little brick buildings, and to think they beat Harvard! Then here are these Kids right out of those Mountains, beating big City teams from all over America. "The Carr Creek Boys!" That's a great kick to a country school any place anywhere, to know that they can go outdo the principal sport just as good as any other school in America. "Viva Carr Creek!"

Uncle Sam's Family Grows.

"It has ever been my hobby horse," wrote John Adams in 1786, while he was United States Minister to the Court of St. James, "to see rising in America an empire of liberty, and a prospect of two or three hundred millions of freemen, without one noble or king among them."

God bless old John Adams, whose oratory did more than any other single force to drive Jefferson's well-written Declaration of Independence through the Continental Congress. One hundred and forty-two years have passed since Adams wrote the words quoted above. The far-seeing old patriot has already slept more than a full century in his tomb beneath the church at Quincy.

He can sleep on in peace. No king, no noble mars the symmetry of our body politic. Adams' dream of two or three hundred million freemen is not yet realized in point of numbers. But it will be. Slowly but surely we are growing. The Census Bureau estimates that the total population of the United States will be 120,013,000 on July 1, 1928, as compared with 105,710,620 on January 1, 1920. This is merely an estimate, not a new census. The bureau bases its estimates on the available data regarding births, deaths, immigration and emigration.—The Pathfinder.

Fish Dried on Ship's Rigging to Save Extra Handling.

Curious use is made of the rigging of a fishing schooner, putting out from Havana, Cuba, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Instead of taking the catch ashore for drying, the fish are hung on the lines of the rig where they are safe, comparatively free from dirt and exposed to the sun at all times of the day.

HOLLERAN YELL Tries Baseball

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

ONE spring when I was down in Dixieland with my dumb bum, Leader Kranz, engaged in pugilistic exhibitions hither and yon for a nominal remuneration, we suddenly found ourselves without any funds. This was quite embarrassing to me because I am extremely honorable and no matter how much practice I may have I will never get used to the idea of lowering my suitcase out of a window with a rope and then walking out of a hotel just as if I was going down to the telegraph office to inquire for a money order.

I always have quite a struggle with my honor when it is necessary for me to do anything of this kind, and the time that I am speaking about my honor won the struggle. In fact, I had just tied the rope around the handle of the suitcase when Leader Kranz said: "Can you read what this notice on the wall says? I think it says something about jail."

So I read the notice and it stated that the hotel association would pay a reward of $1,000 for the capture of anybody who jumped a board bill. It stated that the last last 50 guests who jumped their board bills in this State were all caught and sentenced to the jailhouse.

* * * *

SO, with a mighty heave, my sense of honor conquered temptation and I untied the suitcase from the rope.

That night as I happened to be hanging around the lobby of the hostelry, I saw a number of young men with very comical haircuts, and when I went into Ye Olde Englishe Coffee Shoppe to get some coffee and doughnuts I noticed several of them at the lunch counter eating off of their knife. The waitress stated that they were members of a prominent baseball club. It seems that this hotel was the training camp of the baseball club and this inspired me with one of my inspirations.

"Who is the manager of the baseball club?" I asked one of the young men with the comical haircuts, and he replied: "That fat gentleman over there squeezing the ketchup bottle on the steak is the manager and his name is Mr. Hugo Bloh."

Well, now, my bum was not a very good fistic prize fighter, but I figured there must be something he could do, so I thought he might be able to play baseball. Therefore, I introduced myself to Mr. Bloh, stating that I was a great admirer of his and wished to sell him a left-handed pitcher.

"The only drawback about him is that he is inclined to be slightly dumb," I told Mr. Bloh, but he replied: "That is encouraging, because I never saw a smart left-hander yet who amounted to anything."

When Mr. Bloh handed him a baseball glove he inquired: "Where is the glove for the other hand?"

Well, the next morning I took my stiff out to the baseball arena for his tryout and he almost embarrassed me silly because when Mr. Bloh handed him a baseball glove, he inquired, "Where is the glove for the other hand?"

I laughed off this dumb crack with gay laughter, stating, "Ha-ha, Mr. Bloh. That shows what a wonderful left-hander he is, because he is so dumb that he forgets he is a diamond hero and probably thinks he is a prize fighter of the fistic sport where they wear two gloves."

* * * *

FOR a while they had my bum standing off to one side playing catch, but presently Mr. Bloh came along, snapping his suspenders and chewing a large supply of tobacco. He said: "Hey, Leader Kranz, go on out and chase some fungus."

Well, my stiff came over to me and said: "He wants me to go out and chase fungus. Who is fungus?"

This display of dumbness disgusted me to the bone, but I said: "Do not be so dumb. Go out there and do what the other athletic idols are doing. They are chasing around, so they are probably chasing fungus, too."

In this manner Leader Kranz got along very well except for one unfortunate break when somebody hit a ball high up in the air and he ran up waving his arms, shouting, "Look out, everybody. A baseball is falling from midair." And while he was warning everybody about the falling baseball it came down and hit him a smack on top of the head and almost knocked him insensible.

Mr. Bloh looked very puzzled, but I just laughed again and stated, "O, he is a very comical fellow and always clowning."

So Mr. Bloh then called him in and said, "Go over there with McCurdy and throw some."

Well, they gave Leader Kranz a baseball and he started to throw to McCurdy. This McCurdy was a tough catcher, but the first time my bum wound up and threw the baseball he knocked McCurdy's glove off, and a few minutes later he let one fly so hard that he broke a plank in the grand stand.

"Well," said Mr. Bloh, coming up to McCurdy, "what has this punk got?"

"I don't know," McCurdy replied, "They come so fast I can't see them."

Well, I really never knew my stiff could throw a baseball at all. I only knew he had a wild left, and I naturally supposed he could throw a ball somewhat, but I didn't think he could demolish property with it.

* * * *

AFTER a while they had a baseball match, but my bum did not play until the ninth inning, when Mr. Bloh exclaimed: "I want a pinch hitter. Get up there, stupid, and drive in those runs."

Of course, my bum jumped up and grabbed a bat, but I was greatly amused to see about ten other athletes grab bats, too. But Mr. Bloh said, "Go on, Leader Kranz, and give us a hit."

So my champion stepped up, shut his eyes and waved the bat with such a terrific paste that he almost mashed the baseball. I do not think he realized that he had hit it until he saw everybody running and Mr. Bloh exclaimed, "Well, get going. Are you waiting for a guide?"

My bum then started running and his paste won the baseball contest, much to my surprise.

That night Mr. Bloh wished to know what league Leader Kranz ever played in, but I said he never played in any league as he was just a natural phenomenon and I had been coaching him privately to make a bum out of Babe Ruth. I said I would sell him for the advertised price of $500, but I did not wish to be mercenary, so we finally compromised on $350 cash. That night the club secretary gave out a statement to the baseball writers stating that he had purchased Leader Kranz for $25,000.

That $350 enabled me to pay my board bill and get several little trinkets out of pawn. Leader Kranz was transferred to the ball club's board bill and we enjoyed quite a pleasant stay with the club for the next few days, but it seems that being an inexperienced baseball idol, my gentleman had hurt his arm throwing so swift that first day and the first time Mr. Bloh sent him in to pitch in a contest all the hitters hit home runs. Also, he kept on shutting his eyes when he went to bat so he never hit the baseball again.

* * * *

AFTER a few days a man came through the town from one of the smaller baseball firms buying up used players, and Mr. Bloh showed him the articles out of the newspapers telling all that Leader Kranz did the day he hit a home run and threw his fast ball through the plank in the grand stand. On the strength of this the man bought my fellow for $500 cash.

But that night we got a telegram offering us $300 and two railroad tickets to Tampa, Fla., to box some local stiff by the name of Serafino Parafino. So, without troubling to resign from the second hand baseball dealer, Leader Kranz retired from the great national pastime and returned to the grand old pugilistic calling where his high spirits could revel in the fair, clean clash of fist on bone within the confines of the resined square.

Historic Gadsby's Tavern to Be War Memorial

The same paper publishes a list of six simultaneous official banquets on that day, at each of which Gen. Washington looked in during the progress of the evening, and gives in detail sixteen toasts proposed at each banquet, to which were added several "volunteer" toasts in some instances.

* * * *

FROM the steps of Gadsby's, just 30 days before his death, Washington held his last military review and gave his last military command, which was conveyed to the commandant by George Washington Parke Custis, foster son of the general. This was in November, 1799, when Washington, with a number of friends, visited Alexandria on business and dined at Gadsby's. During the repast it was suggested that a new company of militia, the "Independent Blues," commanded by Capt. Piercy, should parade for his inspection. The general, with others, took his stand on the steps of Gadsby's and reviewed the troops, sending his congratulations to Capt. Piercy by young Custis.

The Marquis de Lafayette was a guest at Gadsby's on several occasions. This young French nobleman, becoming intensely interested in the cause of the colonies, was offered a commission as major general in the continental army when only 19 years of age by Silas Deane, then our Ambassador to France. He, with his friend, Baron De Kalb, came to this country, landing at Georgetown. After visiting several Southern cities he proceeded on his way to Philadelphia to offer his services to Washington. On arriving at Alexandria they spent the night at Gadsby's, and the next morning, on attempting to arrange for a relay of horses to continue their journey, had great difficulty in making themselves understood. John Paul Jones, happening to pass by, was attracted by their difficulty and volunteered to interpret for them, and thus an intimacy was formed between Lafayette and Jones which endured until the death of the latter in 1792.

To Gadsby's, in 1816, was brought a young woman suffering from typhoid fever. She was accompanied by a young man, presumably her husband, and placed in an upstairs room and a physician summoned. The latter, before being permitted to see the patient, was called aside and placed on his honor not to reveal what he might see or learn concerning her. He kept the faith, only stating, in answer to questions, that he had never seen his patient's face, but that it was evident she was of distinguished birth. The man was her only nurse for many weeks, but when his long vigil resulted in complete exhaustion, two Alexandria ladies, of prominent families, were permitted to administer to the stranger, only after taking a solemn oath that they would never reveal what they might learn about the mysterious invalid. At midnight, October 3, when it became evident that the end was near, the man requested that he be left alone with his loved one. Death came at dawn and then, so that no one else might gaze upon the features, the man prepared the body for burial and personally sealed the casket.

* * * *

LITTLE is known of the burial. The man remained in Alexandria only long enough to witness the erection of a tombstone, which may be seen in St. Paul's Cemetery, with this epitaph carved on a flat slab of stone:

To the Memory of a
FEMALE STRANGER
whose mortal suffering terminated on the 4th day of October, 1816, Aged 23 years and 8 months,
this stone is erected by her disconsolate husband, in whose arms she sighed out her latest breath, and who, under God, did his utmost to sooth the cold dull ear of death.
How loved, how honor'd once avails thee not,
To whom related or by whom begot;
A heap of dust alone remains of thee—
'Tis all thou art, and all the proud shall be.

That the mysterious woman was Theodosia Burr Alston, daughter of Aaron Burr and wife of the Governor of South Carolina, who left on a sailing ship to join her husband and neither she nor the ship was ever heard of again, was one theory advanced many years ago, and another was that she was Sarah Curran, the heartbroken fiancee of Robert Emmet, the Irish revolutionist, and that the "disconsolate husband" was none other than a British officer whom she was forced to marry after Emmet's death. Both these theories, however, have long since been exploded, it is believed, and the mystery remains unsolved.

In 1815, or thereabouts, an English gentleman, traveling incognito, was taken ill in Alexandria. He called upon the Masons of the city for attention, which he received in ample measure. Upon his recovery, he declined to give his name, and resumed his journey. Two years later, Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons, the members of which had attended him in his illness, received from a gentleman in England a set containing 2,500 pieces of cut glass, with the emblem of Masonry, the number and initial of the lodge, cut in each piece, with a card reading: "As a token of my appreciation for fraternal courtesy and attention during my late illness in Alexandria." There are 165 pieces of this interesting collection left, which are now on exhibition in the old lodgeroom on Cameron stret. The name of the donor was never disclosed, like that of the "Female Stranger," remaining a mystery to this day. It was in Gadsby's, in 1808, that Mrs. Anne Warren, one of the most celebrated actresses of her day, died. Her tomb may now be seen in Christ Church yard, she being the last but one to be buried there. At the time she became ill she was appearing in the Liberty Theater, on Cameron street just across from Gadsby's, which has long since disappeared. She was a cousin of the late Joseph Jefferson.

The American Legion realizes in its existence a purpose more far-reaching than merely the fraternal association of its members and the preservation of their individual or organization records as relating to the World War. The local post, therefore, decided that in restoring to the country at large these buildings with their priceless associations with Washington, Lafayette and other great men of their day and time, and combining that work with the perpetuation of their own records and associations for the interest and benefit of posterity, they would be rendering a service to the country which would be in keeping with the purposes of the Legion.

* * * *

THE plans of the post, while as yet undeveloped, are far-reaching. One of the smaller central rooms, probably in the old original City Tavern, would in all probability be fitted up as the principal feature of the memorial. There, on tablets of imperishable bronze, may be inscribed the names of the honored dead, and there, as has been done in other memorials of like character, may be hung enlarged portraits of each man who gave his life that his country might endure, with a history of the man, his service, and the manner and place in which he gave up his life. This would be an innermost shrine —a Holy of Holies—to enter which, with uncovered head and humbled spirit, would be an honor. Here, on each Armistice Day and each Decoration Day, floral tributes may be brought in honor of the revered dead, and here the gold star mother, on the anniversaries which mean most to her, may come as she would go to the tomb of her boy, and hold her own communion with his spirit, undisturbed.

In the more modern annex to the old City Hotel, on Cameron street, would be the home of the Legion post and its auxiliary. The ten rooms of which this is composed would provide ample space for meeting rooms large enough to accommodate the 500 members of the post; clubrooms, such living quarters as might be required, and probably a dining room in which could be served the "chow" so indispensable to all gatherings of soldiers or former soldiers. The Legion records would require a room where the adjutant of the post could have his business headquarters and where the historian could keep his records, which would include a complete personal history of every member of the post, so that they might be consulted at will by those entitled to do so. Here would be space in which other patriotic organizations, such as the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Colonial Dames and others could have their business headquarters. Provision could be made for the Boy Scouts, an organization which the Legion especially favors.

As for the rooms in the two main buildings, the possibilities there are almost endless. The curator of the National Museum has already given assurance that he will have made ready four rooms in which will be displayed specimens of all bird and reptile life known in this country. It has been suggested that the Botanical Society would be willing to display in other rooms specimens of all plant life indigenous to this country, and doubtless other exhibits, equally interesting, would be donated.

As a museum, this would be unique. The members of the Legion post would, as a matter of course, donate or loan every conceivable manner of souvenirs of the World War brought from France in their packs, their trunk lockers, or in whatever other way their ingenuity had devised to circumvent the order that no such souvenirs would be permitted to be brought to this country.

* * * *

NO CITY or locality in the United States could hope to compete with Alexandria in the richness of its material for the establishment of a museum of articles dealing with the Revolutionary period. Such an exhibit in this building would, on account of the authenticity of the articles displayed, its compactness and its relation to the other rooms containing articles of more recent origin but of no less interest, be decidedly unique.

A Mexican War room, of which there are few in existence, and probably none devoted exclusively to souvenirs of that campaign, would be among the possibilities. With the name of the American Legion and the influence of the post members to support requests for donations or loans of such articles, they would undoubtedly be forthcoming in profusion, and would serve to recall the struggle with which Alexandria was closely connected, and to which the city generously contributed of its young men, but of which, due to the distance at which it was waged, little is known here.

The wearers of the gray in the war between the States are each year becoming fewer in number, there being left but a shadow of the once sturdy line. While they have their own home and their own memorial, records of their deeds and tributes to their valor can not, in the opinion of Southerners, be so multiplied as to be uninteresting. The Confederate Museum, in Lee Camp Hall, contains very many priceless relics of that four years' struggle. The Confederate room in the American Legion Memorial Home would contain more relics, equally priceless, and, in time equally numerous.

For some unknown reason, probably due to the comparatively small number engaged as compared with those participating in the Civil War or the World War, organizations of veterans of the Spanish-American War have not greatly prospered. With the passing of years, however, those who took part in the first war which this country fought on foreign shores are receiving more and more of their just due in recognition of their service, than which none could have been less selfish. All were volunteers, and a roster of Civil War veterans who told white lies to the recruiting officer as to their age in order to again smell the smoke of battle would be astonishing. Their number would be equaled, probably, only by those Spanish-American veterans who told similar untruths in order to be accepted for service in the World War. There are enough of the Spanish-American veterans in Alexandria to insure that their room in the American Legion Memorial Home would also be of intense interest to the veterans and their descendants.

The citizens committee, with Mr. Jones at its head, has established headquarters in the old City Tavern, and is ready to begin its intensive campaign looking to the restoration of these buildings to the public, and making them available for inspection by those interested, which, it is confidently believed, will include every man, woman and child in this country. It is the purpose of the Legion to have competent caretakers and guides in charge of the premises, so that those inspecting the buildings may do so intelligently. This will be the tribute of the people of Alexandria to the boys who risked and lost their lives for their country and their home town, and of the American Legion to their "buddies," whom they will never forget or neglect.

Great Fighter Finds Smiles Most Effective

By WILLIAM S. DUNCAN

DOWN through the years of a long and illustrious boxing career a sense of humor is a great defense against the jabs and hooks of Old Man Fate.

Battling Levinsky has found that to be true, and he should know, because twenty years have rolled around since he first answered the clang of the gong.

"Boxing isn't all cuts and bruises and knockdowns and jeers," said the Battler. "There are a lot of funny things happening every day in the gymnasium, dressing room and in the ring itself to give the game a humorous side."

Levinsky began his boxing career under the name of Barney Williams in 1908, but five years later changed to Battling Levinsky and became light-heavyweight champion of the world from 1916 to 1920 and light-heavyweight champion of America from 1920 to 1922, being dethroned by no less a personage than Gene Tunney himself.

The Battler is still a very good man, however, and only last year was rated among the leading light-heavyweights of America by Tex Rickard, whose selections are to boxing what Walter Camp's once were to football. To date he has fought a total of 412 opponents and has lost only eight decisions, two to Jack Dillon and one each to Carl Morris, Charley Weinert, Gene Tunney, Bill Brennan, Gunboat Smith and Matt Adgie. Two men—and it might be added very good men—Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier, have knocked him out. Incidentally, in return bouts, he has won decisions from some of the best of those who outpointed him, winning the light-heavyweight title from Jack Dillon, whom he fought ten times, and subsequently defeating Dillon, Smith and Adgie. He boxed Porky Flynn nine times, Harry Greb seven times and Jim Flynn three times, the majority being no-decision bouts.

* * * *

HERE are some humorous ring reminiscences and opinions from one who has fought the best in his class, from Jack Dillon, Tommy Gibbons, Bob Moha, Jimmy Coffey, Al Kubiak, Leo Houck and the other headliners mentioned above on down through the years to Young Stribling, a headliner of today. He says:

"Just a few weeks ago I was out in Pittsburgh, where I boxed a draw with Sandy Seifert. When I was in my dressing room before the fight started the policeman on the door said: 'Barney, there's a fellow outside who says he knows you well. I'm gonna show him in.'

"He did and there before me stood Paddy Burns, the first man I ever fought in the ring. Of course, I didn't recognize him at first, but when he told me who it was we had a good laugh over our first fight.

"We met at Tumbling Run Park in Pottsville in August of 1908. I was afraid of Paddy and he was afraid of me, so we agreed before the fight not to knock out each other. Well, my career as a 'frame-up' boxer lasted exactly thirty seconds, because Paddy broke my nose right at the start. I broke his nose in the fifth round and won the fight. I got fifteen bucks for that fight and never had a desire to fake anything after that.

"A funny thing happened during my first fight in Philadelphia, which was held at Lew Bailey's old Broadway Club. My opponent was Tom Jones, who drove a wagon for the Jones Company and named himself after his firm. Before the bout Jones called Nick Hayes, the referee, over to his corner, whispered something in his ear and then Nick announced: 'Gentlemen (there were no ladies then), Tom Jones wants me to announce that this is his first professional fight.'

"The bell rang, we came out of our corners. I crossed my right and Tom went down and out. After being revived, Jones again summoned Nick to his corner, again whispered in his ear and Nick, holding up his hand for silence, shouted: 'Gentlemen, Tom Jones wants me to announce that this is his last professional fight.'

In all my ring career I never met a man who gave me so many laughs as that good old Irishman, Dan Morgan, who piloted me to the light-heavyweight title.

"Dan had many Irish friends in New York, none of whom thought, of course, that a Hebrew could possibly be a good fighter. One day we were strolling down Broadway and Dan met a particularly good old friend who was very deaf. Dan stopped him and shouted: 'Mike, I want you to meet my latest find, Battling Levinsky, the new light-heavyweight champion of the world. He's a great fighter.'

"'Please speak a little louder, Danny, me boy,' said Mike. 'I didn't catch that name.'

"Dan did. He shouted again with the same result. So the third time he put his mouth right to Mike's ear and bellowed: 'Battling Levinsky, Mike; he's a great fighter.'

"The old man shook his head and said: 'It's no use, Dan. It sounds like Levinsky to me.'

* * * *

"AFTER winning the title from Jack Dillion I was in great demand in various parts of the country, so Dan and I were soon on our way to New Orleans, where I boxed a twenty-round draw with Gunboat Smith. Several nights before the bout Dan ran into an old friend of his, Raymond Hitchcock, stage celebrity, who has many friends in the boxing game. Hitchey was playing in New Orleans and presented Dan with two complimentary tickets.

"The production failed to please Dan. We were sitting in the front row and the people were greatly amused as Dan fell asleep and snored loudly. At the end of the first act he awoke and started out.

"'Hey, where are you going?' I asked.

"'Outside, but I'll be back,' he answered.

"'What are you going out there for?' I asked.

"'Why, I'm going out and buy a ticket so I can hiss this show,' said Dan.

"I had several tough fights with the late Billy Miske, whom ring followers of a dozen years ago will recall as a leading heavyweight contender. I won my title from Jack Dillon in Boston November 11, 1916, and had been signed to box Miske in Boston six days later, so had to go through with it.

"Miske won the fight, in my opinion, but it didn't affect the title any, because those were the days of no-decision bouts or, in other words, precommission days. Billy cut me under the eye and I didn't look so very fresh when the bout was over. However, he insisted on meeting me after the bout, saying: 'Battler, I want you to meet my wife.' Mrs. Miske naturally was very proud of her husband cutting up a brand-new champion that way.

* * * *

"A FEW months later Miske and I met again in St. Paul. This time I did the cutting and Billy's face was a mess at the end of the bout. I kept my eyes open when in the dressing room and finally saw him ducking for the exit. 'Just a minute, Billy,' I shouted as I grabbed him. 'Come back here. Now I want you to meet my wife.'

"Another man who has been connected with the boxing game for a long time and also sees the funny side of the 'racket,' as we call it, is Jack Stanley, my present trainer. One time when I was to fight the wind-up in Pottsville Jack took as his protege an unknown who, as far as recalling his name is concerned, is still unknown to me. Jack hadn't been guaranteed much money for his fighter and was very anxious to catch a train back to Philadelphia so as to save the hotel bill.

"They were fighting the second bout of the evening and there had been some delays, so it began to look as if they would miss the train back to Philadelphia if the bout went the limit. At the end of the first round Jack's boy was out in front, but said between the rounds: 'I think I can beat him, but he's a tough guy and I can't knock him out.'

"'Just lead with your chin, kid, and you'll knock him out,' said Jack, who had the money tucked away and was thinking only of that train to Philadelphia.

"The boy 'led his chin' all right and was promptly knocked out by the husky young Pottsville miner. Jack's boy lost the fight, but he made the train and, considering it from a financial standpoint, that was a victory. That was only one of many funny things pulled off by Jack Stanley. He is one of the most optimistic fellows I ever met and it's a tonic to have him around a gymnasium."

There is no man in the ring today better qualified to give an unbiased opinion of great fighters of yesterday and great fighters of today than Battling Levinsky. He has not only "met them all" but has defeated most of them and, as one of the most clever big men of the century and a close student of the art, never fails to note the strong and weak characteristics of his opponents. He is one of the few men still in the game who has met both Tunney and Dempsey. Here is what he has to say about them:

"I boxed Tunney at Madison Square Garden January 13, 1922, and he took the light-heavyweight title from me. I thought I had him beaten at the end of the first six rounds, but I tired in the last six and Gene was given a close decision, which I believe he deserved.

"Tunney is not considered a great champion by most followers of the game, but he should be. I think he got himself in wrong after winning the title by putting on the 'high hat' to the newspaper men and giving out his views on philosophy and all such stuff as that.

"But Tunney really is a great fighter. He can hit harder than most people think. He is very fast and very smart and learns with every bout. After Tunney won his second bout from Harry Greb, who had previously beaten him, Harry said to me: 'That fellow is going to be a champion. I never saw a man improve as fast as he has. Why, he can hit, too. He nearly tore my head off.' Tunney is not the killer type, but he is a good short puncher.

"Don't forget this: Tunney has been judged the last few years on his showings against Dempsey, who is far superior to the other so-called contenders. With Dempsey out of the picture it will be easy sailing for Tunney. He'll be champion for a long time to come.

"As for Dempsey, I can vouch for his hitting ability, because only he and Georges Carpentier have knocked me out in 412 ring battles to date. Dempsey, in his prime, was a cruel puncher and very fast. His punch always was a mental threat, too. You kept saying to yourself: 'Well, if I miss this time I guess he'll land and knock me out.' That's why Tunney was careful when he boxed Dempsey. Get careless with the Dempsey of old and it meant curtain.

"Most of the fans will tell you they believe Dempsey in his prime would kill the Tunney of today. I don't. It's a question in my mind if Dempsey could ever get through Tunney enough times to knock him out. I know he knocked him down in Chicago, but I doubt if he could have done better in 1920.

"Tunney probably will never be a very popular champion, because he is not the type the fans like. The great majority of them do not appreciate the science of boxing. They do not want to see the boxer but the killer, and Tunney is not a killer. But, killer or no killer, he is a great fighter, in my estimation.

"For being a generally good all-round fighter I class Jack Dillon right up with all of them. I fought him ten times, so I should have a fair idea of his ability. For boxing ability only I rate Tommy Gibbons as the best man I ever met. Gibbons was a past master at 'rolling' with punches. He was very fast mechanically and mentally, being just about the quickest thinker I ever boxed. When he saw an opening he didn't lose an instant in shooting for it. As to punching ability, I pick Dempsey without question. When in his prime that man surely could hit.

"Strange as it may seem, none of these so-called immortals of the ring gave me what I consider the hardest fight of my career. Frankie Mantell did that in Brown's Gymnasium, New York City, in 1911, and I received $62 for the fight.

"In the first round Mantell clipped me on the chin, and from then on I didn't know what was happening. People knowing nothing about boxing might think I was telling a fairy tale when I say I fought the rest of that bout by instinct and actually won the decision, but it's the truth. Just recently, if you recall, Tommy Loughran said he didn't know what it was all about for several rounds after Leo Lomski clipped him in the first round. I, for one, knew Tommy was telling the truth, because I had been in the same predicament myself.

"The next to the toughest fight I ever had was an indoor bout with Harry Weist, in Jacksonville on July 20, 1912. We fought for 15 rounds in a gymnasium above a poolroom. The place was jammed with people and filled with smoke from their cigars and from a fire which broke out after the flashlight for a picture was set off. If you want an idea of how I felt, go to Jacksonville in July, lock yourself in a room, fill it with smoke and then box for fifteen rounds with a man who outweighs you by 25 pounds."

* * * *

COMMENTING on some of the outstanding changes that have taken place since he was in the early part of his career, the Battler went on: "I think the presence of boxing commissions is a good thing for the boxer, because it assures him that he is going to be paid, and, like every one else, he must get his money if he is to stay in the game.

"As to the quality of the fighters, I am stating a fact when I say there are not nearly as many topnotchers in my class now as there were twelve years ago. Look at the line-up of those I met and you'll have to agree. One big reason for this condition, in my opinion, is that managers will not give their boys the proper chance to develop. If a manager of today runs into a find he isn't content to bring him along and let him develop, but insists on sending him into the 'big shot' so as to reap the big gate. That's a shortsighted policy. The promising boy may bring in one or two big purses, but that's all. If he isn't ripe for the leaders in his class he'll be ruined and, in a very few years, be on the 'punch drunk' heap with the rest of the relics."

THE big bogy of Levinsky's fighting career of 412 battles was that of two knockouts administered by Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier, pictured at top. He lost eight other fights by decision to the following: In the upper row, left to right: Jack Dillon, who defeated him twice; Carl Morris and Charley Weinert; lower row, left to right, Gene Tunney, Bill Brennan, Gunboat Smith and Matt Adgie.

RADIO WILL COME OVER LIGHT WIRES

Within a few months radio broadcasting will enter an important new phase. It is wired radio.

While present broadcasting and receiving through the ether will go on as usual, elaborate new programs from an entirely new source will travel into American homes along the same wires that supply light, heat and power. With a special receiving instrument rented from your local electric lighting company you can plug into any light socket and receive programs, as well as the "juice" to run your set.

This remarkable system, involving radically new inventions in receiving and transmitting instruments, is a development of the "wired wireless" or "line radio" invented some sixteen years ago by Maj. Gen. George O. Squier, U. S. A., retired, formerly Chief Signal Officer of the Army.

A subsidiary of one of the world's largest public utility companies has completed plans for immense wired radio broadcasting studios in New York City, from which programs eventually will be supplied to wired homes in many cities throughout the nation.

The plan, as described by Edwin Ketchum in the May issue of Popular Science Monthly, is this:

Programs picked up by microphones in the studios will pass over telephone lines to electric power substations in various cities. In each substation a high-frequency wired radio transmitter will send the signals out over the power lines.

The householder will pay a monthly rental ranging from $2 to $4.50, depending on the type of receiving instrument. This will include installation and servicing of the instrument. Least expensive will be a simple crystal detector for use with headphones. Standard equipment will be a three-tube set, consisting of a detector and two stages of audio-frequency amplification, with a rectifying tube to supply direct B current to the set from the alternating house current. A loud-speaker will be included.

Three programs will be sent out simultaneously. The desired program will be brought in by the subscriber simply by turning a selector switch to one of three numbered positions. No tuning adjustments will be necessary. Present plans provide for an average of 510 program numbers a day, including music of all kinds, lectures, sport events, news bulletins, stock market reports, weather bulletins and so on. Special events, such as boxing matches and football games, will be picked up through telephone line connections, as at present.

One of the Deadly Diseases Yielding to Heroic Research

By COLEMAN B. JONES
(Associated Press Science Editor).

One of the most deadly diseases known to science, Rocky Mountain spotted fever, appears to be yielding to the long, patient, self-sacrificing efforts of Public Health Service research workers.

Although the disease is, fortunately, localized in the Bitter Root Valley of Montana and a few areas of Idaho, Wyoming and Colorado, four lives and more than 20 years of study have been expended in the effort to overcome it. With the development of a vaccine by Dr. R. R. Spencer, now in charge of the work, important progress seems to have been made, but much remains to be done.

Dr. T. B. McClintic, who died in 1912 while in charge of the field laboratory set up to combat the disease at Hamilton, Mont., was the first of the Government scientists killed by the exceptionally virulent germs. The latest was A. Leroy Kerlee, who graduated at the Montana State College less than a year ago, and was working as a bacteriological assistant to earn funds for a medical course.

Kerlee, like all of the laboratory workers and many of the residents of the affected localities, had been vaccinated against the dicalities, had been vaccinated against the disease. His death, February 14, established a large number who take it into their blood, it is not wholly effective.

The first to test the vaccine was Dr. Spencer himself. He was put in charge of the spotted fever work about seven years ago. After several years investigating the disease in the field and laboratory, he evolved the idea of a preventive vaccine. Many tedious and disappointing experiments followed, for the germ has eluded complete analysis, but finally he reached the point where he was able to immunize guinea pigs and monkeys.

Then, although he knew that a victim of the disease had only one or two chances in ten to survive, he vaccinated himself and injected some of the deadly germs into his own blood. The vaccination was effective, and since that experiment only one person, Kerlee, has died of the disease after receiving the injection. Others who have been vaccinated against the germs have contracted the disease, but invariably in a much milder form than usual.

Until about two years ago, when vaccination of residents of the affected area began on a large scale, between 60 and 100 cases were reported annually, with the death rate at times mounting to 90 per cent. Relatively few cases have been reported recently, however, and health service officials are daring to hope that the disease, which is communicated by wood ticks and is not contagious, will soon be brought definitely under control. Sheep herders and other outdoor workers have been its principal victims.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

Pushcart Tomatoes and a Sporting Extra Divert a Sunday Call

FROM the vaulted dusk of St. Mary-le-Strand out into the hazy sunlight.

Pausing at the gate, Helen glanced back at the old church. That white spire with the song-famed "Bells of St. Mary's!" How serenely it dominated the Strand!

All week a bewildered isle in the roaring traffic. But now a stately guardian of this drowsy Sunday quiet.

A bus rolled by, almost empty. An ideal day for a bus-top ride. But no, the Wendells coming for tea.

Turning off towards the Embankment—down a deserted side-street. How she loved these Old World streets! And in this slumbrous Sunday lull—like stepping back through the centuries.

Wishing Warren had come. But he had grouchily refused. Letters to write, accounts to straighten.

A flutter of pigeons. An old woman throwing crumbs from a gabled window.

Chimes from Big Ben. Half past twelve—almost time for lunch. After that late breakfast—— And having the Wendells to tea—then dinner with the Stiles!

No wonder Warren always had indigestion in London! The English ate too much and too often. If only he would skip lunch—but he wouldn't.

A peddler with a hand-cart of fruit. Grapes, pears, tomatoes.

The small English tomatoes Warren loved. Perhaps with these—and she had a tin of biscuits—he would wait till tea.

"Eight pence a 'alf pound, miss. Very nice they are, too."

Hurrying on with the bulging brown-paper bag. An incongruous package to take into Whitehall Court.

Two ex-service men fluting a doleful tune. Helen dropped a sixpence in the shabby cap.

Further on, the half-obliterated drawings of a pavement artist. Sentimental sketches in colored chalk. Lettered: "If worthy, kindly help. My only means of support. Wife and four children. I thank you."

Along the Embankment now. The gray Thames and misted bridges a Whistler pastel.

The great pile of Whitehall Court looming ahead.

Soon at the imposing entrance. Past the haughty doorman—guiltily conscious of her plebeian parcel.

Up in the mirrored lift to their seventh-floor flat.

* * * *

WARREN still at the littered desk.

"See if you can poke up that fire," at her exuberant greeting.

"Dear, it's much warmer outdoors—a glorious day for a bus ride. If only they weren't coming!"

"Now having Wendell's a darn sight more important than your bus rides. Vice president of the Transatlantic Trust—he can steer a lot of things my way."

"I'll have everything just as nice as I can," poking the smoldering coals. "I do dread her. We only met that once—but she was so stiff and formal."

"Well, how about lunch?" sealing the last letter with a vigorous fist.

"Lunch? Why, we just had breakfast! You can't eat again ——"

"Why not? After one," glancing at the mantel clock.

"That heavy breakfast! You had porridge and two kippers. Let's just have these," opening the bag of tomatoes, "with a biscuit and a glass of port."

"Expect me to make a meal on a cracker and tomato?" he exploded.

"Oh, I forgot—that jar of foie gras Mr. Goldschmidt sent me!"

"Foie gras? That's different," calming down. "Trot it out."

"I put it out here to keep cool," opening the long balcony window.

The small yellow jar still sealed. Mr. Goldschmidt had remembered from their lunch in Vienna her passion for goose-livers.

"Dear, draw this up to the fire," she raised the leaf of the gate-leg table.

Spreading newspapers to protect the polished top. Punctiliously careful of everything in this charming sublet flat.

Washing the tomatoes. Heaping them in the cover of the biscuit tin.

No salt? Yes, that tiny envelope in her traveling bag—from those hardboiled eggs on the train in Italy.

* * * *

WARREN lounging in the deep wing chair before the fire. Watching her spread the goose-liver paste.

"Huh, not bad," munching critically over a newspaper napkin.

Helen absently nibbling. Planning her stage-setting for the Wendells.

Wear her amber crepe—and brown velvet slippers. Get out the needlework pictures bought in Vienna—anxious to show those. Really collector's pieces.

And she must phone down about the tea. Speak to William, the headwaiter—it must be specially nice.

Brush up the hearth, too—ashes all over. And clear those stockings from the towel rack—they might go in the bathroom.

"Oh, that's the valet with your suit," at a sharp ring. "Dear, you go."

The tassel of his blanket-robe trailing as he stalked to the hall. Then ——

"Why, hello!" he boomed. "Come right in. Didn't expect you so early."

Helen jumped up. Not the WENDELLS!

"Phillip just had a wire," Mrs. Wendell's voice unmistakable. "We must meet his sister at four-thirty. And we did want to see you ——"

"That's all right. Glad you came. Leave your coat here, Wendell."

Helen panic stricken! This awful mess! The newspaper tablecloth —— No time to clear away ——

"I do hope you'll forgive us, Mrs. Curtis," entering the sitting room. "It was our only chance—— Oh, you're having your lunch!"

"We had such a late breakfast," Helen crimsoned. "We just couldn't go down to a heavy meal. I'll clear this off——"

"Hold on!" Warren nonchalantly at ease in his faded old robe. "I'm not through yet. You folks just in time to join us."

How could he? The correct, formal Wendells!

"Thank you, we've just had our lunch," a polite refusal.

"A glass of port, then," he persisted.

Her face aflame, Helen escaped to the bathroom for two more glasses.

The Wendells! And Warren making it worse. Forcing his careless informality.

"Better have a cracker with it," when he filled the glasses. "Sure you won't have some of this foie gras? The real Strasbourg vintage."

"Foie gras? That's Betty's weakness!"

"I never can resist it," laughed Mrs. Wendell. "Oh, just a little——"

"Don't you admire our elaborate service?" Helen trying to carry it off. "But I did wash this paper knife!" spreading more crackers.

* * * *

THEIR enthusiasm over the tomato-topped sandwiches reassuring.

"I saw those tomatoes coming from church—on a pushcart. I thought a sandwich might keep Warren from a heavy lunch."

"You're quite right. We all eat too much in London. That's what I always tell Phillip. These heavy English breakfasts——"

"That's a good old port," Warren refilled the glasses. "From that place on Duke street Brady recommended."

"Met him yesterday at the Carlton. Sailing this week. He's engineering that power syndicate—slow work getting any action over here."

The men talking shop now—consuming the crackers as Helen spread them.

"You've an ideal place here," Mrs. Wendell gazed around admiringly. "Much more homelike than our hotel. Two rooms and bath?"

"Yes, we sublet this every year from an M. P.—Mr. Collins," Helen more at ease. "He doesn't use it much—always in Scotland when we're here. Another?"

"No, really, I mustn't! Well, just one more. I'll have to diet for weeks after this! I wonder if we could sublet a flat here next time we're over?"

"It's a huge place—if you knew someone—— Oh let me show you the view."

Stepping out on the stone balcony. The sun still glimmering through the violet haze.

"That's the war office opposite," the great structure grim in its Sunday desertion. "The Liberal Club's on the corner—in this building. Oh, aren't they lovely?"

A flutter of iridescent wings. Pigeons from the lofty stone cornices.

Helen dashing in for a handful of crackers. Crumbling them on the ledge.

"How tame!" glowed Mrs. Wendell, as one lighted on her arm.

* * * *

LINGERING on the balcony. Talking of London and feeding the greedy pigeons.

Back to the sitting room. The men smoking in foot-on-the-fender comfort.

"Quarter of four, Phillip!"

"Late as that?" jumping up. "Great Scott, we'll have to hustle! This has been a real treat, Mrs. Curtis. That foie gras and tomatoes beat all the teas!"

"Oh, I've loved it! Phillip, let's try to get a flat here next year."

"Suits me. You folks must give us the inside on that. How about dining with us Tuesday? Nothing on then, have we, Betty? Oh, get out of that somehow. Meet us at the Berkeley at seven-thirty."

"Why the Berkeley?" shrugged Warren, as they all went out to the lift. "We can go to high-hat hotels at home. Let's gun up a real old English chophouse."

"Fine! We'll let you pick the place. You know London better than we do."

A cordial good-by and they were gone.

"Dear, they really liked it!" thrilled Helen. "And when they walked in—I thought I'd go through the floor! It looked awful—that newspaper——"

"Huh, you all over," back by the fire. "Always afraid to be yourself."

"But they were so different the first time! She was awfully stiff."

"Everybody's human if you give 'em a chance," heaping on more coal. "When you doll up and fuss for 'em—they act up to the atmosphere."

"Didn't they love those sandwiches?" starting to clear the table. "Dear, if I hadn't got those tomatoes—we'd have gone down to lunch and missed them."

"Yes, that was a good stunt," thumping his pipe on the fender. "Made a real hit. The 'Pink-Un's' not a very nifty tablecloth—but we got away with it."

"How I was dreading that tea!" gathering up the pink sporting sheet. "And this picnic lunch went off perfectly."

"Because you didn't have time for any of your fancy stage setting. Always tryin' to impress people! Impress 'em a darn sight more by just being natural. Hold on, any of that stuff left?" tilting the foie gras jar. "Enough for one more cracker—fix it for me. And get another jar—we'll repeat on this next Sunday!"

AN UNUSUAL SUN SHIELD

Sunshine is a splendid thing, we will agree—until it bothers us in the morning when we want to get in those 40 extra winks. A first glance at the sketch shown above may not be very enlightening but a close study will bear out the following description.

The bed is merely a box spring and mattress set directly upon the floor with a molding as base to keep it in place. The headboard is a low, wall-paper covered screen, one leaf of which comes around the side of the bed. Over this is draped a piece of material, which hangs from a bracket and serves to shield the sleeper's eyes from the glare of the window which is on that side of the room. And here you have two very practical suggestions for your bedroom.

Tales of Real Dogs

By Albert Payson Terhune

SOOR, the Pariah Dog That Was a Tiger's Chum

THEY called him "Soor" — which means "swine" and means also several less complimentary things. In fact, it is the lowest possible term of reproach. Perhaps that is why such a wretched name was tacked on to this mongrel pariah dog by the Hindoos among whom he lived.

The Hindoos, for the most part, regard dogs as unclean, and they tolerate the animals' presence in their towns and villages only because the dogs are scavengers and keep the streets and alleys cleaner than the natives have energy to do. The poor brutes, as a rule, are half-starved and are forced to depend wholly upon themselves for a living. They are mongrels, and not prepossessing to look at.

Soor was a reddish-brown dog, bone thin and with pointed fox-like ears. But for mere chance he might have been allowed to spend his whole unhappy life in nosing for food in the gutters, and might never have found his way into history. Here is his story:

At last the tiger drew back, bleeding and tortured.

In the Carnatic district, early in the nineteenth century, the local rulers had zoos for their own personal amusement. In these were kept all manner of wild beasts, and there were adjoining tanks full of enormous alligators.

In a moment of thrift, one such ruler hit on an economical method for furnishing the raw meat for his savage pets. It was costly to buy cattle and sheep and goats for the carnivora to feed on. So he found cheaper rations for them.

He ordered that large quantities of pariah dogs be caught and thrown into the cages and into the alligator tanks. The luckless dogs proved an acceptable diet for the monsters. Also, it amused the cruel spectators to watch a dog dragged screaming below the surface of the water by a crocodile's jaws or to see it crushed to death at a blow from the paw of a hungry lion or tiger.

In the cages of the larger carnivora were small doors, through which the cages' occupants could not possibly squeeze their way, but through which dogs could be shoved, for their daily food. Crowds used to gather in front of the bars "to watch the fun."

One day a young pariah dog was caught in an alleyway and carried to the zoo to serve as dinner for a gigantic Bengal tiger, which was the ruler's prize exhibit. The dog was lively and the tiger was hungry. So the spectators looked forward to an interesting sight. The dog was later to be known throughout the region as "Soor"—one of the few pariahs honored by any kind of a name.

Soor was thrust in through the small door, and the door was clapped shut behind him. There was a wide dish of rice and milk in the cage, for the tiger, but the striped brute preferred fresh meat. He was savage with hunger.

As Soor was tossed in through the aperture, the tiger bounded at him. Soor darted nimbly out of reach of the mighty paws and backed into a corner of the cage. The tiger, having cornered him, advanced in leisurely fashion to kill and devour him.

Soor ducked under the crushing forepaw that sought to smash him to a pulp, and he drove his keen white teeth clean through the tiger's nostril. Then, once more ducking out of reach, he flashed back into his corner and stood ready for the tiger's next move.

Maddened by the pain of the bite, the tiger sprang afresh at the little dog. Once more Soor dodged the charge, and his teeth met in the tiger's underlip, ripping it deeply and agonizingly. Roaring with wild fury, the tiger flung himself again and again at the corner where Soor crouched.

But the pariah dog had learned speed and strength and fierceness in the alleys where he had been forced to battle for his livelihood. He was fearless, and he was an inspired fighter, deadly and as swift as a striking snake. Again and again he eluded the tiger's rushes. Again and again he slashed or bit deep into the tiger's face and throat.

At last the tiger drew back, bleeding and tortured and panting. He had had enough of the strange duel, and he had no desire to continue assailing a foe which was everywhere and nowhere and whose teeth had such unerring punitive powers. The tiger was through.

Soor was yanked out of the cage. He had given the spectators rare sport, and they wanted more of it. He was stuck into a box and kept there for several days, fed and watered, but not allowed to escape. Meanwhile, except for his dish of rice and milk and his pan of water, the tiger was left without food. He craved raw meat, and he grew frantic for the lack of it.

When the keepers thought the tiger was hungry enough, they shoved Soor back into the cage. The half-starved tiger launched himself at the dog. Once again, the former scene was enacted. Soor dodged and shifted and ducked the fierce attacks, and countered by ugly wounds upon his enemy's face and throat.

At last the tiger drew back from the conflict, as before. But this time, Soor seemed to read some new meaning in the giant's retreat. For, instead of crouching in his corner, he stepped forward fearlessly and touched noses with the great creature. Then Soor's tail began to wag.

Turning his back on his recent antagonist, the dog walked over to the dish of rice and milk and began to eat. The tiger followed, ranging alongside the dog and eating peacefully out of the same dish with him. The spectators stared, unbelievingly.

That was the beginning of one of the strangest friendships in animal history. Dog and tiger lived on for years in the cage, the dog going in and out at will through the small door. The two ate together, romped together, slept curled up side by side. It was a spectacle that brought incredulous visitors from all over the province.

(Yes, I know the story sounds fishy. But you will find it chronicled in Youatt's authoritative work on "The Dog," as well as in the Oriental Papers of Capt. Williamson.)

Finally the tiger died. Soor was unconsolable at the loss of his loved chum. For days he moped miserably in a corner of the desolate cage, refusing to eat. Bit by bit the gallant little dog pined away, dying in less than a month after his tiger comrade's death.

The Orchardist and the Deer.

Early in the winter two or three bills looking to a lengthening of the open season on deer and to allow a hunter two deer instead of one were prepared for legislative action in Massachusetts. A fish and game association sponsored one of the bills. Farmers and orchardists sponsored another. The avowed object was to reduce the number of deer in the State. To have heard testimony given before the committee having the bills in hand, one might have been pardoned for thinking that the State was overrun with deer. As a matter of fact, while Massachusetts has a goodly number of these beautiful animals of the forest, she could accommodate a great deal more. The interests behind these bills were selfish interests.

Testimony was offered to show that deer were exceedingly destructive to young orchards and that it is difficult, not to say impossible, to make an honest estimate of such damages for the reimbursement of the orchardist from State funds. It is easier to estimate the damage to a crop of vegetables destroyed, because this is a single season's crop. One can hardly blame the fruit growers for actively fighting in the interests of their business.

But it is not a question of whether a few fruit growers shall be protected by the State. It is a question of whether the State itself shall be deprived of an asset whose value can not be computed in dollars and cents. There is no question that deer are an asset to any State, especially when they exist in sufficient numbers to afford opportunity for people to see them frequently and to afford a reasonable hunting season in the fall or early winter. Certain Western States long ago exterminated their deer. Now they are doing their utmost to restock their forests. As the law now stands in Massachusetts, there is a six-day open season Only shotguns may be used, the State being so thickly settled that it is not safe to turn a few thousand hunters loose every year with rifles. To the everlasting disgrace of the State, the law allows the killing of does as well as bucks. The victims may be any age and either sex. And now the greed of hunters on one hand and the desire of fruit growers to protect their orchards, on the other hand, would double the slaughter by doubling the length of the open season, and in one bill would again double by allowing each hunter two deer.

Who Owns the Wild Things?

The situation in Massachusetts brings up in aggravated form the old question of "Who owns the wild things?" Isn't my right to enjoy a glimpse of a deer bounding away, only to turn and stare curiously, the picture of grace, beauty and timidity, the equal of the right of my neighbor to shoot this same animal? Hitherto in nearly all our wild life legislation it has been the man with the gun who has dictated. He is now aided and abetted by the farmer and fruit grower whose interests are obviously wholly selfish. Under the present law the fruit grower and the farmer have the right to kill deer caught damaging their crops. They are entitled to compensation from the State for such damage as these animals may do. This is as it should be, but I challenge the right of this one class of individuals, extremely limited in number, to deny to the people at large the pleasure which these same deer afford by their presence in our forests.

The Head of the Family.

"As I was following an old wood trail," writes a correspondent, "I came on a flock of grouse in the road ahead of me. There was a cock and six hens. I walked up to within fifteen feet of them and, as they showed no disposition to get out of the road, I stopped to watch them. The cock immediately spread his tail fanwise, shook out his ruff, dragged his wings on the ground and strutted for all the world like an old turkey cock. He crossed the road, turned and strutted back again. He did this several times, much to my wonder and amusement.

"But I soon found that the old fellow had a method in his madness. While he was engaging my attention his sleek little wives were quietly moving off. They did not fly, nor did they run, but in two or three minutes were out of sight. Then the old fellow's ruff dropped. His wings were placed in their accustomed position. His tail was no longer spread and he became merely the sleek looking bird he was when I first saw him. Then he quietly moved off in rather a stately manner. I verily believe this flock had never seen a human being before, yet to the denizens of the forest anything new means danger, and I must say I admired the courage of that old ruffed grouse in providing for the safety of his family at the risk of his own life."

The Squirrel and the Jay.

The competition that is continually going on among the feathered folk and the furred folk is always interesting. Now and again we get glimpses of it and discover that, after all, there are very human traits in these little people. "One day," says Mrs. Marie W. Manley, "I had been feeding a squirrel for some little time, so that his hunger was appeased and he had just buried the last nut I had given him. When he turned his back to come for another a vigilant bluejay swooped down and began to dig up that nut. Hearing the dry leaves rattle, the squirrel snapped squarely around in his tracks, as much as to say: 'My ears and whiskers! I believe that thieving jay means to have my nut.' And that was exactly what the jay did mean. The squirrel flew at him like a small fury, scared him off, dug up the nut and hid it in a different place. The squirrel scored that time."

This competition between squirrels and jays is most amusing. You will find it wherever the two occupy the same territory. More often it is the jay who scores. Those sharp eyes of his miss little and he has the advantage of watching from above, while the squirrel is burying his plunder. Usually when the squirrel scores it is through the mere chance of accidentally finding some of Sammy Jay's plunder.

Personally, I am very fond of the bluejay. I often hear him bitterly attacked as a destroyer of the eggs and young of other birds. He does offend this way at times, but I believe that he is no worse an offender than some other birds. He has lived about my home for some years and I have seen very little interference on his part with the domestic affairs of other species; and always he is interesting, which is more than can be said for some of his feathered neighbors. To be both beautiful and interesting is to be richly endowed.

Reason or Instinct?

Friendships between animals of different species are not infrequent, but are always interesting. The following incident has just come to me: A cat had been absent from home for two days. In that home was a dog, and the cat and dog had been great friends. Toward the latter part of the second day the dog was seen coming home with the cat in his mouth. He brought puss right into the house and saw that she was properly cared for. Apparently she had been poisoned, and, despite all efforts to save her, she died. Who will say that that dog did not reason? Instinct will not account for his action in bringing this friend of another species home to be succored.

A Naturalist's Question Box.

"How long is the bullfrog in the tadpole stage?" asks John Reddington.

Usually two years. That is, the tadpole lives over the one winter.

"Do any birds move east and west in migration, as they do north and south?" asks Don Messer.

Yes, but only erratically. The evening grosbeak, which occasionally is found as far East as the New England States, nests from Manitoba northward. This past winter these birds have been in the Northeastern States.

Should We Drive an Auto After Fifty?

Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, Says Persons of That Age Should Not Be Allowed to Drive Alone in Traffic—Plenty of Opposition to the Senator's Views Is Immediately Voiced.

By JOHN LEO COONTZ.

SHOULD an age limit be placed on automobile drivers? When a man is past 50 and desires to take a spin in the family car, should he be required to take some member of the family along with him in his peregrinations about the city, to keep watch and ward over his activities at the wheel? And what about women? Should they, too, be subject to restrictions? And who shall determine a woman's age?

There is no denying the fact that age is having its ups and downs in the world today. The world has gone over bag and baggage to youth. Starting with the famous dictum of Dr. Osler, of Baltimore, years ago that a man at 60 is no longer of value to the world and that he should be chloroformed, the philosophy of "youth" has of late years cut that age to 50, 40, and now the indications are that, before long, 30 will be the age at which a man's usefulness to himself and the world will end. "Men past 30 are incapable of 'réal love,' " said an eminent writer of the time, recently. Which is to infer that men past 30 should not get married, for what man should marry who is incapable of experiencing fully, the highest of human emotions in seeking a mate?

But this is mere bagatelle philosophy. More to the point is the statement of Dr. Royal S. Copeland, United States senator and eminent physician, that persons past 50 should not be permitted to drive automobiles in crowded city traffic, alone.

This statement has aroused endless discussion.

* * * *

DIRECTOR William H. Harland, of the Traffic Bureau, says, "Fifty to my mind, is not a deciding factor, nor should be, in determining a man's fitness to operate an automobile in crowded traffic. I have seen men and women over 50 who are expert drivers under all conditions. The qualifying distinction of a driver is, to my mind, physical soundness of the individual and his alertness. Many men and women at 50 are as 'keen' as those at 45 or under. We have no record of percentage of automobile accidents chargeable to the various ages of man, but if we did have, I doubt if those of 50 or over—say up to 60—would lead the list. The issuance of permits governs largely who, above 50, should drive. It is a question of making the grade, of qualifying for a driving permit; and once a person of 50 or more has qualified as a driver under our regulations—and they are quite stiff—I see no reason why they should not be accounted as capable drivers as persons of a younger age. Young people are more apt to be dangerous in crowded traffic than older persons, for the simple reason that youth is not hesitant, not so mindful, thoughtful or careful of its driving as are older people. A bunch of college fellows in a dilapidated car will swing down a street, cut around traffic at unnecessary speed, take chances at intersections and between cars that an older person would never think of. Life, and the experiences that it brings as to carefulness, safety and thoughtfulness, applies to automobile driving as well as to other activities and occupations that men and women engage in. The whole question is a physiological one, not one of age, granted the permit test has been eliminated by passage."

"THE very idea of such law is more or less fantastic, is the opinion of Thomas J. Keefe, general manager of the American Motorists Association, commenting on the senator's proposal.

"Assuming that Congress in all of its wisdom, could pass such a law—and there is grave doubts that such legislation would be constitutional in view of the fifth and fourteenth amendments, which prohibit the taking of property without due process—such a statute on the books of the Nation would brand probably the brainiest group of men in the world as being in the twilight zone of imbeciliity.

"The automobile industry itself, which gave the world this modern evil' about which the senator complains, is replete with notable figures in that field of achievement who are capable of driving the invention of their brain.

"While the citation might rebound as an argument for the senator, it is nevertheless recalled that Ford himself was driving one of his own cars two years ago when a youthful driver speeding past him upset the world's biggest automotive figure and sent him to a hospital for six weeks. Ford is now in his sixty-sixth year.

"Other outstanding automobile manufacturers who are on the sundown side of life and yet who drive their own creations and do a noteworthy job of it, include such 'novices' as Ransom Eli Olds, who built the first three-wheel horseless carriage in 1887 and who brought out a practical four-wheel automobile as early as 1893. Until 1924 he was president of the Reo Motor Co., and despite his 64 years, today still likes to pilot his own automobile as he goes about his daily routine of board and director meetings, quite innocently unconscious that he is mentally and physically 'unfit' to run an automobile.

"Another outstanding example of the 50-year-old 'menace' is Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, and despite his millions and 53 years of age, likes to take the wheel and do his own driving.

"Another 'horrible example' would be Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, who, despite his 55 years, not only drives an automobile but pilots an aeroplane and is a licensed pilot, having been a colonel in the Air Service during the World War.

"Depriving these 'incompetents' of a right to drive their automobiles, if they desire, however, is not of importance. Such a law, however, would deprive literally hundreds of thousands of competent so-called 'white collared' workers who are past 50, yet who use their automobile as an item in their daily habits of life.

"The question of fit or unfitness is not one of age, but rather of individuality, and must be regulated through the medium of permits, and not through class legislation which brands a motorist past 50 as incompetent.

"A day in your traffic court will convince

United States Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, who recently declared that no man over 50 years of age should be allowed to drive an automobile alone in traffic.

any one that the youthful driver occupies more seats than the man past 50, and the same is true of the feminine car driver," the motoring head declares.

* * * *

"WHY should any man, or woman either, for that matter, be denied the right to operate a car merely because he or she has reached the age of fifty," declares William Ullman, one of America's leading writers on motor topics.

"Studying that question from every possible angle in the light of my experience in the field of motoring," he continues, "I can find no answer to it that seems to hold the slightest relationship to rationality. My position is not based upon prejudice nor is it self-defensive, for I have not yet reached that ripe old age which Senator Copeland thinks should shunt one, as a motorist, to the side streets and the secondary roads. However, I have high expectancy of attaining 50, and believe that I shall be a better driver when I have put that much more experience behind me.

"I have never thought of 50 as a dangerous age, particularly with reference to operating a car safely. Why is 50 supposed to make a motorist, dangerously slow or dangerously fast? My observation of drivers of this age is that they are neither. They take all the law allows in the matter of speed, yet they temper their driving with that type of judgment that is born of experience and only experience.

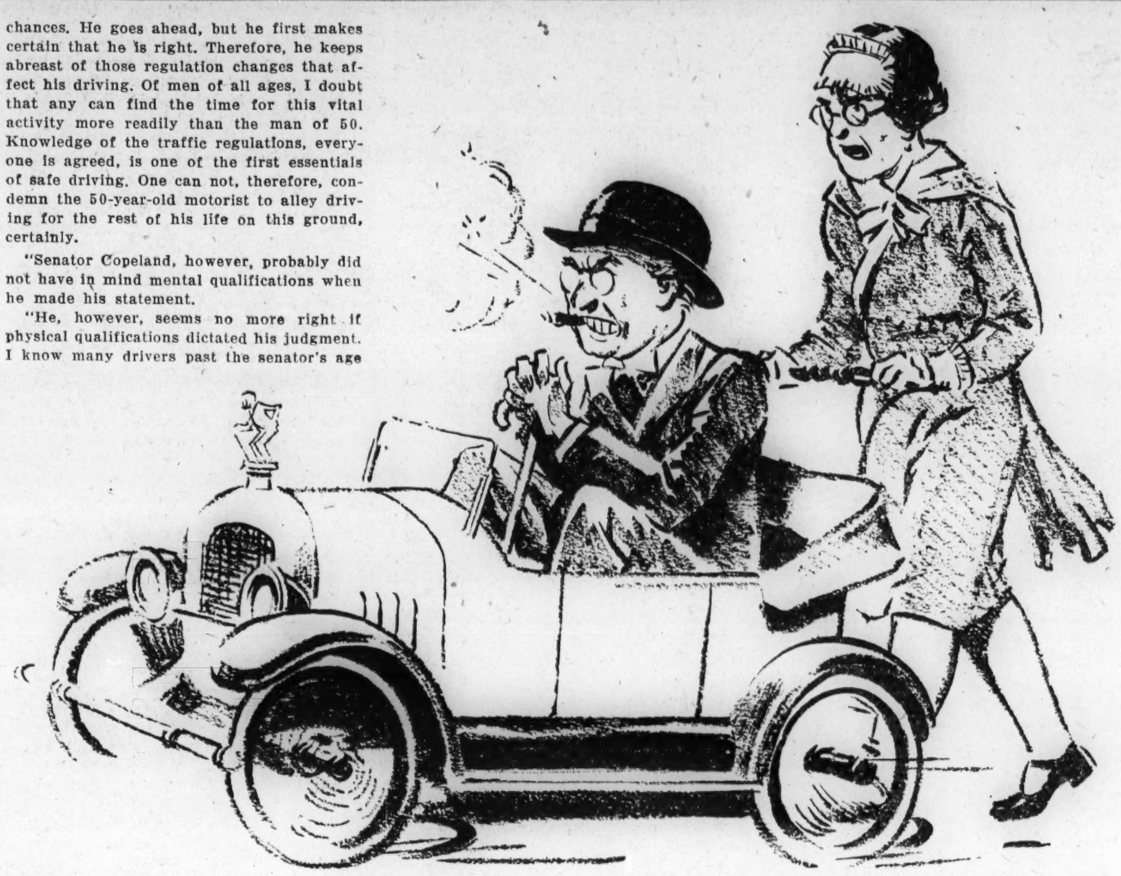

"They have passed the period of 'smartness' and seem happily far away from that state of physical decrepitude that would make them too slow on the trigger to conform to the need for quick reaction in modern traffic congestion. They have time to reflect somewhat upon the subject of how to drive safely and of this reflection there seems to be born a fairly good idea of what is precisely right and definitely wrong with the average man's car operation practices.

"I dare say the man of 50 need take second place to no one in the matter of knowing the traffic regulations. He is not, in the average case at least, the kind to take chances. He goes ahead, but he first makes certain that he is right. Therefore, he keeps abreast of those regulation changes that affect his driving. Of men of all ages, I doubt that any can find the time for this vital activity more readily than the man of 50. Knowledge of the traffic regulations, everyone is agreed, is one of the first essentials of safe driving. One can not, therefore, condemn the 50-year-old motorist to alley driving for the rest of his life on this ground, certainly.

"Senator Copeland, however, probably did not have in mind mental qualifications when he made his statement.

"He, however, seems no more right if physical qualifications dictated his judgment. I know many drivers past the senator's age limit. Without exception they are as physically qualified to drive as any other group I know. They are ruddy-cheeked, vigorous, athletic, and generally alive and alert. In this group, there is no one with whom I feel uncomfortable as a passenger. That is more than I can say for individuals in lower age classifications, which is merely a group appraisal and not a group indictment.

"Numerous tests have been made of driver's reaction time—how long it required them to respond to a given stimulus, such as a condition that required an immediate stop. The results of some of these tests which I remember are particularly interesting as applied to Senator Copeland's argument.

Artist Oden's conception of Senator Copeland's idea of how a man over 50 should negotiate Washington traffic.

"For instance, it has been found that a person with a quick reaction time—usually a highly strung person—may be a full second faster in putting his foot on the brakes than another whose reaction time is slower. Yet this same person is not rated as a better driver by these tests on account of this one exhibition. In one or two tests, his showing may be brilliant. In a third, fourth and fifth he may go all to pieces and forget all he ever knew about stopping the car. The second driver may be a bit slower, but day in and day out, he is a safer man because he never loses his head. The man of 50 seems to fall into this classification. He is neither fast nor slow, but, he gets there on time because he has an excellent idea of his possible limitations. He is not the type that tries to beat the gun, and, accordingly, he suffers none of the penalties attached to this temptation.

"I doubt that there is any need for legally barring the man past 50 from a right to drive. At that age, he usually is intelligent enough to act voluntarily if he is not physically and mentally fit to drive with safety to himself and others.

"On no ground, can I agree with Senator Copeland. Although his medical knowledge transcends mine, I am inclined to believe that the automobile has helped many persons to get past 50 years of age by opening to them new avenues to health. If they keep on using the automobile, it will help them to get past 60—and then 70.

"Instead of barring the highways to the man past 50, let us bar the cemetery by giving him more highways on which to seek a more virile old age at the auto's wheel."

RUDOLPH JOSE, veteran automobile dealer of the city, president of the City Club, past 50, and driver of his own car also disagrees with the senator. His disagreement takes a novel angle and is calculated to give the "anti-fifties" something to think about. Says he:

"I do not think Senator Copeland can have recalled how much the automotive engineer has contributed to make driving better when he made his statement that men past the age of 50 years should not be allowed to drive on crowded thoroughfares. Because of the remarkable progress in automobile design and construction, today's car can be driven with an amazingly small expense of energy. If the driver of 50 is not so quick on the brake pedal, the accelerator or the steering wheel, the car is so much quicker on all three that it makes his driving safer than it was five years ago when he was 45 years old.

"I, myself, am past Dr. Copeland's proscribed driving age, but never have I felt so well qualified to drive. I do not think I have gone back physically, but, if that is the case, the automobile has come forward sufficiently far to compensate for the difference. All other men past 50 undoubtedly have had the same experience."

Traffic Director William H. Harland, who also disagrees with Senator Copeland.

GOOD eyesight, it is quite generally regarded, is a necessary qualification for motor vehicle operation, and on the question of eyesight at 50, Dr. Edwin H. Silver, optometrist, chairman of the motor vision commission of the American Optometric Association, declared, when approached:

"There is no reason, where eyesight is concerned, why a man or woman at 50 should not be able to operate a motor vehicle in crowded traffic alone, as well as persons of a younger age. All that the eye does is to focus images upon the retina and if, during the changes of life, should those images become blurred, 99 per cent of them can be corrected with glasses.

"From the eye impressions are conveyed to the brain where vision is actually developed. From this visual center the physical nervous connections coordinate. Their quickness of action is dependant a great deal upon previous training. After a person has done a certain thing, such as operating an automobile over a period of years these acts become involuntary, so that when a mental picture of a situation is conveyed to the brain the person acts involuntary. This developed reflex of years, other things being equal, makes of a person of 50, as competent a driver of an automobile, as one of younger years, in so far as eyesight is concerned."

* * * *

OVER in the traffic bureau is a group of officers whose duty it is to conduct mental and physical observation tests of those who seek driving permits. Officer Charles Schreyer, chief examiner of the division, when approached as to his opinion of the fitness of persons of 50 and over to operate motor vehicles, said, "The only practical difference that we observe in persons of various ages seeking automobile permits is one of quickness in catching on to motor car operation. A person of 45 or over has a harder time of attaining his objective than one younger. Young boys and girls catch on the quickest. Women of 45 and over take a longer time to learn to drive than men of the same age. Foreigners have a harder time than anybody. I guess it is due to the fact that they do not understand our customs and ways as well as native-born individuals. Those over 50 seeking permits most always take three hitches at the problem of motor vehicle operation. Those over 60 fail in great numbers. From one-half to one-third of those making daily application for permits fail to make the grade. We have many amusing experiences with permit seekers. For instance, look at this application. Can you read it? And then there is the man of Jewish extraction who came in for a permit. He was taken on for examination as to his knowledge of traffic regulations by one of our men. Six questions were put to him. He answered one correctly and missed five. He was told to come back later after more study. He did so. Another examiner than the one who first had him got hold of him this time. This examiner also asked him six questions. He answered one and missed five as he had done previously. He was told that he missed them and that he would have to come back again. At this he threw up his hands with a gesture of despair and cried, 'How can I answer them correctly when you don't ask the same questions as the other fellow?' "

William Ullman (left), automobile editor of The Washington Post; Rudolph José, prominent member of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, and Dr. Edwin H. Silver, chairman of the Motor Vision Commission of the American Optometric Association, all of whom declare that the age of 50 should be no bar to the operation of a motor vehicle.

Fans for Drying Corn in Crib Latest Aid to Farmer

Powerful little ventilating fans have been adapted to the drying of seed corn, an outfit now developed being simple to install and considered practical for large raisers of the crop, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Unit heaters are employed, and warm air blown through the corn, or the grain may be carried through a tunnel and the air blown around it. When heaters are not used, the drying can be accomplished by fans only. They are arranged to distribute air under the grain through pipes on the floor of the crib. Farmers are coming to realize more and more the importance of proper ventilation in barns where stock is kept. It has been demonstrated that a cow needs 60 cubic feet of air per minute to keep it in a healthy condition, a horse needs 4,200 cubic feet per hour and a hog 1,500. Bees also require a regular air supply.

Pictures Painted on Windows to Save Washing

Members of an art colony in Boston have solved the question of keeping some of their windows attractive, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Instead of having to wash the glass constantly, they merely use a paint brush now and then, for the panes are covered with decorative designs of wide variety and color. The plan is especially well suited for windows that are not greatly needed to admit light, and even painting the glass does not shut out all the illumination, as there are open spaces in the designs.

Manicured Fingers May Stop Hold-ups

Perfectly manicured fingernails may secure for some woman hold-up victim the safety of her jewels from the would-be thief. At any rate, proper manicuring is as necessary from any other standpoint.

It is a day of gentlemen hold-up men, the Woman's Home Companion, in an article by Hazel Rawson Cades, suggests, and who knows but the next particular revolver bandit who calls upon one to "hold them up" may be so impressed by two sets of finely manicured nails that he will refuse to carry out the hold-up.

"I'm not sure whether it was the increase of stick-ups that brought women around to taking manicures as a matter of course," says the writer. "White gloves cover a multitude of cuticles—but then there's the gentleman burglar, too. One wouldn't like to shock the sensitive nature with the wrong shade of nail polish and they shouldn't shock their daily associates. Burglars, like calves' liver, have grown upstage."

Gave Death Toasts to Their Kaiser

Trapped Like Rats in Doomed Submarines, German Crews of Crippled Undersea Craft, During the World War, Drained Poison Cups to Evade Agonies of Slow Suffocation, According to This Former U-Boat Commander

HOW commanders and crews of German submarines during the World War had death pacts whereby they took their own lives by drinking poison when their U-boats had been crippled and sent to the bottom—taking their own lives rather than waiting for deadly gases to overcome them—is here told by a former U-boat commander himself.

Capt. Ernest Karl Becker, formerly of the Imperial German Navy, is now a citizen of the United States and an enlisted man in the United States Coast Guard, attached to the naval base at Cape May, N. J.

Deep down in the North Sea today, he declares, are hulks of battered U-boats in which, if reclaimed by divers, would be found the skeletons of their crews, and nearby the glasses from which they quaffed poison drafts taken to thwart the agonies of a slower death.

Every submarine commander had a special metal casket containing the poison, to be produced only when all efforts to raise a stricken U-boat had proved unavailing and death stalked the ocean bed in quest of the imprisoned seamen.

By STANLEY RUSHTON.

"TO His Majesty, Our Superior War Lord, the Kaiser!" Amid shadows cast from bulbs swiftly dying to flickering yellow upon dank cylindrical interior of a maimed U-boat, now to become a deepsea tomb, wine glasses, each hollow stem containing a lethal dose of poison to mingle with the sparkling bubbles of champagne, are raised in suicide pact made far down upon the ocean's floor.

Depth bombs had found their mark, tearing open the outer skin of the underseas assassin, crippling diving tanks so that now they acted only as anchors to hold the hulk a battered captive at a depth where tremendous pressure was already loosening rivets.

"Auf tiefe gehen" (to the deep again), had come the order just 71 hours before as a bright shining slug had left a white line of froth streaking across a leaden sea to leave a convoyed cargo-carrier swinging in aimless circles during frenzied rush of lower lifeboats. But the ripple made by a periscope awash had brought destroyers darting forward and circling as depth bombs were cast off astern to complete the submerging of the U-boat in lurching dive to the bottom.

Among the geysers flung upward there were none to glisten with a varicolored film of oil to register a hit and to bring a barrage of bombs to complete the kill.

* * * *

ONE hour yet remained to end the three days since the raider had received its death blow, only a single hour more in which sufficient oxygen might be obtained through the air-cleansing device to sustain life further.

Clad in somber uniforms of grease and rust-smeared black leather, which left no distinguishing mark as to rank, commander and crew had gathered for final conference.

In less than 60 minutes, the captain explained, death would come to take over the command. Death, he added, might come heralded by merciful stupefaction, or by a madness which would send his men tearing at each other's throats. Would they meet death in heavy slumber or as maniacs, or as sailors of the royal navy?

A guttural chorus of assent is the answer. The youthful Teuton commander himself brought the wine glasses in which glistening crystals of a deadly poison were eddied in the bubbling wine, pillaged from a French merchantman before the vessel was sunk.

Over the narrow mess table is spread the U-boat's tattered battle flag, and about the strip of bunting the men stand rigidly at attention as the toast is voiced. Glasses are drained and stems are snapped in the clutch of stiffened fingers, so instantaneous is their death. The captain's glass, however, has not touched his lips. He has waited to make certain that all of his men died as they wished. Then, faced only by a battery of dead, staring eyes, he, too, empties his glass. The last incandescent globe fades into darkness as batteries are spent.

It is in flight from phantoms born in graveyards of the deep such as this that a former commander of a German underseas raider, now enlisted in the United States Coast Guard as an American citizen, is sending a giant seaplane roaring high over a course once marked by the fleet of Rum Row.

* * * *

THIS was revealed at the Cape May (N. J.) Coast Guard base when tersely typed official announcement that Ernest Karl Becker had been assigned to the flying patrol formed the finale to a tragic drama of the underseas.

Although only 33 years old, Becker held a master's certificate for steam or sailing vessels before the outbreak of the war. He became commander of a U-boat after intensive schooling and service aboard a destroyer at Jutland. At 13 years of age he had gone aboard the Princess Eitel Friedrich as a cadet, and later as a youthful skipper he had fifteen times driven square-rigged clipper ships through gales around Cape Horn.

It was Becker's display of superb seamanship which aroused the keen interest of Commander E. S. Addison at the Coast Guard base and which led to the former U-boat captain being transferred from a cutter of the "dry navy" to the aviation unit with rank as chief boatswain's mate.

"Although divers explored many of the sunken submarines," said Becker in describing his year and a half of constant underseas duty, "there are some of the U-boats which today rest upon the ocean floor as sealed tombs and within which might be found skeleton forms still clutching wine glasses from which the toast to the Kaiser had been drunk with poison.

"Every commander of a U-boat had in his possession a small metal casket containing the poison, which would be used when facing certain death upon the sea bottom.

"The majority of the boats, of course, carried safety devices which would permit all or a part of the crew to reach the surface. Crews were all trained in use of the safety devices in a huge glass tank at the submarine base.

"These devices were like immense knapsacks to be strapped over the chest. A hose was clamped tightly over the nose and the teeth gripped a mouthpiece which was also clamped in place. Thus equipped, the men to leave the crippled sub would gather in a forward compartment. This compartment would be flooded, and as it filled completely the officer in charge would unscrew the hatch cover. After the first shock of the icy sea water creeping slowly toward the head and then over it, the escaping man would instantly regulate his breathing so that the exhaled breath would be forced through the nose into the device and cleansed until the very last bit of oxygen had been used.

"With the opening of the hatch, a can buoy with a line attached would be released. The buoy would dart to the surface and the line would act as a guide for the men who went upward with cork jackets.

"Unless the submarine was in distress quite near a coast or rescue ships were standing by, to reach the surface of the sea perhaps a thousand miles from land would only prolong life, bringing a death of great agony or perhaps the horrors of sharks attracted to the scene.

"Upon several occasions during our raiding depth bombs fell so close to my boat that the detonatious, magnified under water, played havoc with ear drums and shattered our instruments.

* * * *

"A SITUATION to which the commander might be compelled to poison his own crew rather than risk the danger of maniacal panic in the face of certain death might be occasioned by a depth bomb tearing open the outer shell and injuring the diving tanks so that the water the tanks contained could not be expelled.

"The U-boat itself was merely a cylinder in shape, but surrounded by an outer form like a ship in order that it might have speed. The piercing of this outer form might cause no actual damage to the interior of the submarine except to prevent it from rising again.

"There would be sufficient air to last us for 72 hours, and our first act upon being crippled in such manner would be to attempt to force the water from our diving tanks with compressed air and thus obtain buoyancy. Then we would use mechanism with which to release the weights which act as a keel.

"Failing at these efforts, the commander would call a conference of the entire crew, which might range from 33 to 50 men. Each man, no matter how humble his rank, would have a voice in the discussion. It might be that the engine-room men might insist upon remaining to wager their mechanical skill in a gamble with death. Others might insist upon donning the devices for the rebreathing of air and seek the surface to meet death under the skies instead of upon the floor of the sea.

"It might be that the depth would be too great for escape under such heavy pressure.

"Before the allotted 72 hours of air have expired the increasing absence of oxygen is noted. Reaction of the trapped men may be revealed in stupor or mad hysteria.

"All boats were equipped with a buoy fastened to the deck which, in event of trouble when in friendly waters or the cruising radius of a salvage ship, could be released from the interior. This buoy would be attached to a line. It would be painted red, inscribed in white lettering: 'U-boat is sunk here.' An acetylene-charged lamp would ignite upon the buoy when it reached the surface.

"To release such a buoy during time of war, however, would be merely to invite a deluge of depth bombs, such as destroyed U-boats caught in the steel nets at that time.

"In the majority of cases I know that the suicide pacts were carried out within trapped boats. There was nothing else to do under circumstances when the end might have come with horrifying scenes of a madhouse.

* * * *

"THERE are still furtive whisperings among men who served aboard U-boats of a commander who today, in a padded cell of an asylum for the hopelessly insane near Kiel, Germany, reenacts endlessly the death-pact scene with his crippled submarine.

"This captain, it is said, won high favor with the sea lords because of heroism and an advanced knowledge of the mechanism of the first submarines sent into service before the boats were equipped with the safety devices for reaching the surface.

"It was in the North Sea, according to whispers of the old sailors, that his U-boat struck a mine, but escaped with only the torn outer form and deranged diving tank. The explosion shattered all instruments, including the one which would have revealed accurately the depth at which the boat lay, stunning captain and crew.

"Occupants of the boat, without means of measurement, believed they had sunk to a depth far beyond hope of rescue, when, as a matter of fact, the crippled boat was resting less than 50 fathoms from the surface.

"Every effort to bring the boat to the surface had been attempted. Now, upon the third day, stupor and madness were seizing the trapped men, one of whom, in rushing back and forth like a caged animal, had released the distress buoy so that even then, unknown to those below, the brightly painted cylinder with its flaring light was marking the spot of their resting place.

"Desperately fighting off stupor, the young commander went to his own room and there prepared the hollow-stemmed wine glasses for the death toast.

"He reappeared with Bible and battle flag, conducting prayer service while some of his men breathed heavily in stupor and others glared wildly, paced the narrow confines and gnawed at finger ends until the bones were denuded of flesh.

"Closing the Bible, the commander filled glasses with the bubbling wine. Men sunk in stupor were aroused until they could stand and drink that toast to their war lord.

"Glasses were emptied and then, as the captain, ringed by dead men, raised his own glass, his arm halted and became palsied, because from the outside came the clang, clang of a hammer, swung by a diver from a German salvage ship, asking in Morse code if there was life within.

"Slings were placed under the stricken submarine and in a very short time the boat was lifted to the surface. When rescuers entered the U-boat they found the young commander with hair turned snow white, unconscious from lack of oxygen and his face buried in his battle flag as if to hide the stare from unseeing eyes about him."

SCHOOLS PURCHASE PLANES FOR BOYS

While plans are progressing to make aviation instruction a part of the regular courses in graded and high schools, as proposed by the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics, a number of American schools already are teaching the young idea how to fly.

Some have made the start in their manual training departments. In the Washington School in New York, for example, boys from 8 to 12 years old have completed eight flying models of various machines, including Col. Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis and Commander Byrd's America.

One or two schools have gone so far as to purchase full-sized planes for instruction in the theory and mechanics of flight and in actual flying as well. One of these, writes Edgar C. Wheeler in Popular Science Monthly for May, is the Galt Joint Union High School at Galt, Calif., near Sacramento, where a four-year aviation course was started last fall. The equipment includes a 90-horsepower Eaglerock biplane with a cruising range of more than 500 miles. Students have christened the ship the Spirit of Galt Hi. In addition, there are two nonflying planes and eight airplane motors. All equipment was obtained from the United States Government, and was formerly used in the Army and Navy air services.

For the first year there have been 32 students, and all have experienced the thrill of flying with an instructor. The training includes a rigid inspection of the plane after each flight. In this way the pupils become thoroughly familiar with all the mechanism.

A recent remarkable achievement of the Galt students was the assembling of a seven-passenger Fokker-type Martin observation plane, which the boys changed to a single-control plane of true passenger type. The skill they displayed was acquired in shop practice, which included tearing down and reconstructing the nonflying planes and the surplus motors.

Another California high school, at San Diego, recently purchased from the Government a $35,000 Martin observation plane. Received at Rockwell flying field, it was partly assembled and towed to the high school campus, where the schoolboys completed the assembly under direction of instructors.

KITCHEN REFUSE THEIR MONUMENT

When the Calusa Indians, who dominated Southern Florida when the Spaniards landed, and who were reported to have grown rich on the ship-wrecked gold of the Conquistadores, became extinct, they left behind them as almost their sole monument the refuse of the food they ate. Their principal diet was shell fish and the shell they threw out piled up into heaps 30 feet high and hundreds of feet long.

The Smithsonian Institution's recent expedition under Henry B. Collins, jr., determined the point about which there had been some uncertainty, that these shell heaps were really kitchen middens and not artificial structures with some other significance. The proof is that all the shell heaps investigated were stratified with ashes, small animal bones and other refuse from the kitchen.

The language of the Calus, except for a few isolated words and place names, is lost, little or nothing is known of their beliefs, customs or material culture. Some mounds of soft beach material and loose sand exist, some of which were foundations for houses, and others burial mounds. Mr. Collins excavated several of these. His most important find was of 75 well-preserved skeletons in a single mound.

Most of the bodies had been folded with the knees to the chin and burial was very close together. The skeletons were excellently preserved. The burials probably took place before the coming of the white man, since only one bone was found with any evidence of disease, and the artifacts associated with the burials were purely of native origin. The only objects in the way of mortuary offerings were pieces of broken pottery placed around the heads, an arrangement not known among other Indians. The mound contained no other artifacts.

The skeletons constitute an important find, however, since they are the first large series ever found, and measurements of them may throw light on what was the racial affinity of the Calusa tribe.

Seagoing Auto Boat to Aid Geographic Society

Scientists of the National Geographic Society have been experimenting with an automobile boat in their research work off the Hawaiian Islands, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The craft is 16 feet long and is propelled by light steel paddle wheels, 2 feet in diameter. These are turned by a small automobile engine. The outfit makes 27 miles on land and 2 miles in water.

The "Mystery Man" of Coolidge Regime

Story-Teller to the President—Spinner of Thrilling Adventure Yarns—Is Said to Be the Forte of Col. Osmun Latrobe, Aid to the Chief Executive, Holding His First Desk Job After Many Years in the Saddle

OFFICIAL and social Washington ponders the strange case of Col. Osmun Latrobe, aid to President Coolidge, a rough-and-ready Cavalry officer of the old school, who never held a desk job until the Nation's Chief Executive lured him from the hills of Dakota.

"Diamond Dick," as he is called, hates swank and fine feathers. Always he has been outspoken against military dandyism and "pink pants" soldiers.

What is the bond that ties so closely the President of the United States and this Cavalry officer, whom Washington had never heard of until the Coolidges set up their summer White House last year in the Dakota foothills?

"Like seeks like," is the old saying. Taciturnity—the conspicuous trait of Mr. Coolidge—is likewise the chief characteristic of his new aid.

But—hist!—the real secret of their attachment is out! Col. Latrobe is said to have fascinated the imagination of the President by his story-telling abilities, hair-raising adventures, narrow escapes, breathless moments in action.

Col. Osmun Latrobe—soldier, explorer, huntsman and adventurer—spinning yarns to President Coolidge—quiet New England Yankee farmer-lawyer-statesman. Such is the picture here unfolded.—Editor's Note.

By NELL RAY CLARKE.

LAST summer when President and Mrs. Coolidge were vacationing at Rapid City, in the Black Hills, a weary Cavalry unit wended down from Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., past the summer camp of the President, on its way to Fort Meade, in South Dakota. The men and the horses were dust-covered and weary, for the trip had been a particularly hard one. It was in the middle of the hottest season of the year and they were coming over mountainous country from a high altitude to a lower one.

The President went out to review the troops.

At their head rode the "Diamond Dick" of the Cavalry, a wiry, sun-bronzed colonel, with many years of the hardest service which the Army requires to his credit. Never in his career had he sought and almost never had he had a desk job with the Army. He sat his horse as only a man who has spent most of his years in the saddle can sit one. The smell of saddle soap and warm leather was sweet to his nostrils. He was at his best in action—Col. Osmun Latrobe, picturesque soldier of fortune, one-time adventurer, splendid field soldier and out-of-doors man, sureshot with both rifle and revolver, and firm adherent to the theory that "pink pants don't make a soldier."

* * * *

IT was perhaps a new experience for President Coolidge to see a mounted command moving under military orders and under almost wartime conditions from one post to another. Perhaps the very antithesis of conditions under which these men lived to his own ordered existence stimulated the President's interest. He seemed to get a "kick" out of it. So he invited the colonel and the colonel's wife to dinner at the summer White House. The colonel is reticent. He never talks about his "experiences" in the Army. But the President evidently wormed out of him tales of thrilling adventures and hairbreadth escapes during his services in the Cuban insurrection, in Porto Rico during the Spanish-American War, among the headhunters of the Philippines, in following Pershing into Mexico after Pancho Villa, and in France.

That the colonel has had thrilling adventures everybody who has ever heard of him knows. He can't escape his reputation as a knight of high romance. But few except President Coolidge know just what the vivid highlights of his career are.

* * * *

COL. LATROBE was born in Baltimore. In May, 1896, when he was just 21, he and Pennsylvania's beloved football star, Osgood, with whom he had chummed when he was studying architecture at the University of Pennsylvania, ran away and joined the Cuban insurrectos under Gen. Calixto Garcia. He was given a commission as captain in the Cuban rebel army and appointed to the staff of Gen. Enrique Collay. That was two years before America entered the Spanish-American War and at a time when the cruelty of the Spanish military chieftains was at its height. They attempted to isolate the insurrectionists by building intrenchments, barbed-wire fences and lines of blockhouses across the narrow parts of the island, and they crowded the noncombatants into concentration camps where they starved or died of disease.

When the United States went to war with Spain, young Latrobe joined the American forces and was commissioned a captain in the Fourth United States Volunteer Infantry. Later he was appointed aid de camp to Maj. Gen. James H. Wilson, and in that capacity participated in the entire campaign in Porto Rico. It was during his services in Porto Rico that he paradoxically was recommended for brevet for gallantry in action and was captured by the delightful senorita who is now the chatelaine of his home in Washington.

Being an excellent field soldier, he has naturally been ordered wherever American fighting men were needed or where it seemed that they might be needed for immediate action. Most of his service has been in foreign countries. When he has been stationed within the United States the detail was at one of the hard-riding cavalry posts west of the Mississippi.

In 1905 and 1906, while in the Philippines, he undertook one of the most daring pieces of work which has even been attempted by a soldier during peacetime. He made a reconnaissance trip across the island of Luzon over the mountains of Lampton Bay, mapping the country for the Army as he went. That was the country of the headhunters, the wildest of whom would gladly have treasured his skull as an object of worship or as a gift for some bridegroom for his bride. They would have dipped cloths in his blood and hung them over their doorways to ward off sickness and disaster.

* * * *

JUST what Col. Latrobe told the President no one has been able to find out, for the dinner was small and intimate, the President, Mrs. Coolidge, Col. Blanton Winship, the President's aid at that time, and Col. and Mrs. Latrobe being almost the only persons present. Col. Latrobe would never tell, and Col Winship is notoriously discreet. But some time ago, via the grapevine telegraph, word reached Washington that the President had sat spellbound while the colonel turned back to a few pages in his picture book of memory.

But whatever the tales were, they so tickled the President's fancy that he went out to the camp that night with the colonel to visit his regiment where it slept under the stars, and the next day the colonel returned to the temporary White House for luncheon before joining his command, which already was many miles on its way to its destination.

It was evident to everybody that the President had "taken quite a shine to the colonel." The colonel must have taken a shine to the President, too, to have accepted the most exacting assignment of "spit and polish" soldiering which the Army had to dole out. He has become aid to the President. His job now is to accompany the President at official and social functions in Washington and elsewhere about the country. If the President has a love of tales of hairbreadth adventure, of narrow escapes, of visits to the haunts of natives in America's foreign possessions, he is not taking a chance of missing them by keeping the colonel constantly with him.

* * * *

SUCH an assignment is entirely foreign to anything the colonel has ever done before. Wherever he had been stationed heretofore, the hardest-riding, toughest unit of the cavalry is to be found. His men may not be wearing the "last word" in what a well-dressed cavalryman should wear, the brass on their saddles may not be polished until it glints brightly in the sunlight, but the saddles themselves and the bridles of the horses will be well oiled. The seat of the trousers of the men may be a bit oily, too, but they will know how to ride. When he is putting his men and their mounts through their paces you will probably find the colonel in an O. D. shirt, with a yellow handkerchief around his neck—yellow, because that is the cavalry color.

It was when he was a student in the Cavalry School at Fort Riley, Kans., in 1924, that the colonel was moved to express in print his contempt for the soldier of the swanky variety. At Riley some of the officers devoted quite a bit of thought to the sartorial effect of their uniforms. They showed a marked preference for fine boots, spurs and light whipcord riding breeches. Inwardly the colonel snorted. Military dandyism wherever he sees it "gets his goat." Shortly after his arrival at the post, a philippic appeared in the post magazine, the theme of which was "pink pants don't make a soldier." The article wasn't signed, of course, but it was whispered about that Col. Latrobe had written it.

But ordinarily Col. Latrobe is a man of deeds and not of words. His official record in the Army files is one of the shortest for officers with his length of service. In submitting his reports, he merely writes: "Went such and such a place at such and such a time and did so and so." He is one of the best topographers in the Army, having made detailed charts of little-known parts of the Philippines. All the bits of description which would furnish local color concerning his expeditions he leaves out of his written accounts.

* * * *

ANY spare moments that fall to Col. Latrobe's lot are spent in the hunting field. He has prowled through many of the forests and over the plains in the American West hunting deer, elk and antelope, and he has chased nearly all the kinds of game that are to be found in the Philippines. Once the liberties he took in invading the haunts of the carabao, the wild water buffalo of the islands, were resented by that ordinarily sluggish beast, and the colonel, then a young lieutenant, found himself capable of a burst of speed which he had not previously suspected.

It was while on a hunting expedition in Mexico that Col. Latrobe, unmindful of his own life, saved Private James Lee from drowning. He had gone out to Mormon Lake in the mountains of Chihuahua to shoot water birds. One duck fell far out on the thin coating of ice over the lake beyond the colonel's power to retrieve it. Private Lee, who was a much smaller man than Col. Latrobe, argued that the ice would hold him and set out after it. He got quite a distance from shore before the ice let him through. The colonel went right in after him and with great difficulty got him to shore in safety.

* * * *

THERE he stood, huge and imperturbable, announcing to the President the names of the hundreds of men and women who filed past the receiving line. His ability to fill this position, which calls for unfailing tact and patience and official dignity, was suspected long ago by those who were close to him, for he has always been a stickler for the formalities as well as for the spirit of discipline. Once, when he was an instructor at Plattsburg training camp, he had been trying to impress some of the new recruits with the importance of observing certain formalities of the service, such as that of saluting a superior officer. One rookie who had taken the lecture very much to heart shortly afterward found himself in an embarrassing situation. He stepped out of an improvised shower bath at the encampment, to come face to face with the colonel.

He was wearing a bathrobe and his feet were stuck into an ill-fitting pair of mules. On his left arm he carried his soiled clothes and in his left hand he held his shoes. On his right arm he had his O. D. shirt and in his right hand a cake of soap. The question was how to salute the colonel, when he knew that salute he must. But he was not an unresourceful young man. Without cracking a smile, he tossed his precious soap up into the air, stiffly saluted the colonel and caught the cake of soap as his hand was lowered from the very snappy ceremony. The colonel said he didn't crack a smile either, but he quickly sought cover and almost kicked his tent down in his mirth.

The great bandmaster, John Philip Sousa, appreciates Col. Latrobe's picturesque career as a cavalry leader. One of the best of his recent compositions, "Followers of the Flag," was written for the men of the Fourth Cavalry and dedicated to the men of that organization and to Col. Latrobe as their leader.

Perhaps President Coolidge had just listened to a recital of one of Col. Latrobe's amusing adventures when this photograph was taken. It is one of the few smiling pictures of the Chief Executive.

The Price of Learning

by Edgar A. Guest

Said I unto a sage one day:
"What is the price if wisdom, pray?
How gained you knowledge, and can I
A portion of your learning buy?"

He stroked his silver beard and smiled
And said: "The price of wisdom, child,
Is not so very much to pay,
Just read a good book every day.

"But if you're asking me to sell
You thoughts and dreams to serve you well
And make a wise man out of you,
You're asking what no man can do.

"The rich, who'd know what's in a book,
Through every page of it must look,
For vain are all their crowded shelves
Unless they read the print themselves.

"Here, for the willing man, there lies
The means at hand to make him wise,
Who wants to learn can quickly find
The books which will improve his mind.

"But none, for silver or for gold,
Can buy what knowledge he would hold,
By countless pages, often turned,
The thing called wisdom must be earned."

"Hot Ice" for Skatitng Rinks To Keep You Warm

"Hot ice" has been invented recently by a Berlin (Germany), chemist, for use on the floors of skating rinks, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The ice looks like hoarfrost, and has a melting point many degrees above the temperature at which ordinary ice melts. The inventor claims that, exercising on this ice, skaters will feel quite warm even if they are wearing scanty clothing, or a bathing suit. A new skating rink at Breslau will have the first floor to be made of this material. It is poured onto the wood, where it "freezes" or sets hard in a few minutes.

Oil From Grape-Seed Waste Used in Making Paint

Adapted to almost all kinds of paints, varnishes, linoleums and for illumination purposes, a cheap oil is extracted from grape seed waste by a process developed in Italy, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The average yield is said to exceed 13 quarts to each 33 pounds. Seeds of the black grapes give more than those of the white variety.

Grease on Trolley Wires Helps Remove Ice

Overhead wires of electric car lines are made to last longer and ice is more easily shaken from them in winter by keeping them greased, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The experiment was tried in Toronto, Ontario, ice laden wires proved a source of great trouble. It was found that the passage of the trolley wheels readily dislodged the sleet. Besides reducing arcing, the wear on curves was lessened about 60 per cent.

Money

By ALMA and PAUL ELLERBE

LOUISE WYANT slowly straightened from bending over the too low oven of her old stove and realized that by the time supper was ready she would be in for another backache. She loathed back-achy, perspiring women. She was fastidious and rather exquisite when she had the chance to be.

As she closed the oven she checked a sigh—remembering Charline. She could see her through the open door, sitting beside the dining-room window in the chair with the four ducks on the back of it that Charlie had made for her three birthdays ago. This was her seventh birthday. The cake in the center of the dining table with the seven little pink candles waiting to be lighted, the tea roses on table and sideboard, the pink tissue shades around the gas-jets, and the chicken roasting in cream, were all in honor of it.

Louise hoped to keep the day cloudless. She and Charlie had quarreled in the morning, but upstairs, in their bedroom. They had never quarreled before Charline. As she hung up the gay little cretonne apron that she had made, she told Charline, "out of a piece of economy," she resolved that they never should.

She went into the dining-room and gave it a last appraising look, then looked out the window where, down the street, she saw her husband coming slowly, with a kind of serenity sticking out of him even at that distance. Old Mrs. Dearborn was on his arm—old Mrs. Dearborn in a stiff black silk dress, a lace fichu and a very long gold watch-chain and a kind of Charlie Wyant look on her face. There was a Charlie Wyant look, Louise thought, unconsciously assuming it: a slightly amused, somewhat benignant, affectionate look, that the whole town gave him whenever it met him.

He had worn out a portion of the soles of every pair of adult-sized shoes he had ever owned, on that walk between the office and the house, and yet she knew he never took it just to get there, but always for its own sake. He liked weather—all sorts—and trees, and the faces of people he knew changing along down through the years, and ugly, comfortable old houses of the kind the town was mostly built of that got imbued each with the flavor of its own people, and old ladies, and most other kinds of human beings, and he liked their liking him.

There were a lot of other things that cost money that he would have liked too if he had let himself, but he didn't, because, possessing no particular ability (or so he thought), he didn't expect to have them. He believed (and sometimes said, as he had this morning until they quarreled) that the only thing to do was to want what you had, if you could. He could, when she would let him. How easy it would be to let him, to help him, to share every joyous impulse that came to him, if he could only make a little more money!

Charline greeted him effusively and even Louise seemed to forget her grudge as they sat down to the birthday meal.

Things got pleasanter and pleasanter as supper went on. And then Charline and Charlie washed the dishes together as they did every night, while Louise sat in the Morris chair by the sitting room window. The baritone laughter and the treble, running as freely as water from the tap, came to her pleasantly and rested her. Her face as she listened was completed by a kind of loveliness that belonged to it, but of which it was often deprived.

"Well, that's done!" Charlie said, and closed the kitchen door. Their laughter-cleared eyes had a new depth like the air after summer rain. "And now for the big surprise! Shut your eyes when you hear me coming and don't open them until I say so!" And he went away to get the present he had made, working nights in the attic, and that no one had seen yet.

When he came back his steps sounded as though he were carrying something heavy.

"Just one second," he said, breathing fast.

The center table creaked as he eased his burden down upon it; there was the scratch and spurt of a lighted match, and,

"All right," said Charlie, trying to keep his tone free from pride; "there she is!"

Delight and surprise rushed audibly from Charline in a long indrawn breath. It was an ingenious, cleverly made and really charming puppet show, lit with its own miniature candle footlights.

There was an ecstatic moment, and then Louise said—she couldn't help saying—in a voice as hard and dry as the branches of a dead rose bush:

"And how much did it cost, Charlie?"

* * * *

LOUISE stood in her chemise before the bureau, winding her hair in a careful coil about her head. Her bare arms moved slowly. There was too much flesh on her small, neat bones; already she was a little tired.

Charline came in, and stopped and stared; one side of the bed was smooth and one pillow was unrumpled. Her eyes grew wise, and their quality reflected itself almost exactly in her tone.

"Where is father?"

The light outlined her slim body, as sexless and straight as an elf's, beneath her long white nightgown.

"Father went back to the office last night after you had gone to bed and hasn't come home again."

There was a little catch in Charline's breath. She stood still while her mother went on putting up her hair.

"Then," she said at last, "he must have slept on that awful old sofa down there!"

"Yes, I suppose he must."

Charline crossed to a chair and curled her feet up under her. Louise was aware of the exact shade of accusation in the child's feeling for her; but she knew too that a tide set between them and, all the resilience being gone out of her spirit this morning, she trusted to that.

She finished wrapping her hair about her head. It was dark and as soft as moleskin. She had very white skin and the shining cleanliness of the glass bottles of the bureau. She knew that Charline thought her the most beautiful woman in the world and loved to watch her dress. The tide set strongly from her to Charline.

"Are you and Father having—having money worries, Mummie?"

"Yes, dear. We're always having money worries."

"And is that why Father didn't come home?"

"That—that's part of it." Louise sank suddenly on her knees and gathered her daughter close. "You love me, don't you, darling?" she whispered. "You do love Mother, don't you?"

Charline put her arms tightly about her and buried her face in the sweet flesh of her throat. "Oh, I love you, Mummie! I love you! I love you!"

They cried a little, wrapped in each other's arms.

But the ache in Louise's breast when she got up was greater still. She had let the child in on it now, and she hadn't meant to do that.

And Charline, after she had the tub full of water and was about to step into it, put her nightgown on again and came back and said, very red in the face, "I love Father, too, Mother."

THE next night, when Charlie didn't come home for supper, Charline volunteered to go down to the office after him. Louise let her go and then, half an hour later, went down herself.

The office door was unlocked. Louise opened it and stepped quietly into the outer room. It was almost dark. Through the other door she could see Charlie lying on the old sofa, with Charline in the curve of his arm. The fading light lingered on their happy faces. They were always happy, she thought with a pang, when she would let them be. A tide of tenderness flooded into her heart. She started toward them.

"Why do people have to have so much money, Father?" Charline said thoughtfully, as she stopped.

"Well, they don't really. They just think they do. Money's not so very important." The words and cadences were as familiar to Louise as a childhood hymn.

"Now, take you and me, for instance——"

"Oh, yes, do take us!" Charline begged.

"Well, we'd get along splendidly, if nobody would bother about us. We don't mind an old house, and old clothes, and living in an unfashionable part of town, and all that, as long as we have each other. Just things don't make you happy. It isn't the amount of money you have, you know, but what you buy with it. Now, if you and I can buy happiness——"

The tide of tenderness ebbed away. Louise slipped out as she had come, silently, and went home, and sat beside the window until they returned, while things banked up inside of her.

* * * *

THAT night she said to him seriously and quietly, "You've got to make more money, Charlie."

He sat down and looked at her from the midst of an immense quiet despair. She knew all he was going to say, and he all that she was going to say in reply, and each knew that the other knew. The dreary futility of mouthing it! But patiently he began.

"I can't go out and drum up trade! I'm not a grocer, or a laundryman, or a baker. God knows I wish I were. There are too many lawyers in town, and I've been squeezed out between the very able and the unscrupulous, but I've got a pretty fair practice, at that."

"Drawing up wills for old ladies," said Louise, "and writing out mortgages, and acting as notary public! And it's not pretty fair. It just doesn't pay enough to live on, and you know it!"

He let his hands drop to his sides and his eyes flashed an angry spark. "What's the use? We've been over this a thousand times! Hundreds of thousands of couples all over the country are living on it—couples just like us. We've got to make it enough."

"We can't," said Louise. "I need a new stove, two new dresses, and a hat, and Charline——"

Charlie started from his seat and began to walk up and down. "If you go over that again, I'll lose my mind! Don't you suppose I'd make more money if I could?"

"It isn't a question of could," she said; "it's a question of got to."

And there they left it.

There they always left it—though there were desperate moments when each was convinced that the other was right.

And so their little drama worked toward its Third Act, which might be called:

THE COMING OF SALLIE MAYHEW.

"She's only going to be in town two days," said Charlie, looking up from the letter that had come by special delivery while they were at breakfast, "and she wants to see us whether she sees anyone else or not."

Charline stopped eating her oatmeal and her eyes shone. "Does she know about me?"

"Sure she does; I wrote her. She says——" He found the place among the scrawled-over pages. "Breakfast, dinner, supper, tea, a box of ginger snaps in the corner of the yard under the maiden blush apple tree, or condensed milk out in the grape arbor (do you remember how we used to eat it from the can, with the wooden spoons you made yourself?), broiled sparrows, like those you shot with your air-rifle, hot dogs and coffee, or what have you? Only let me come, and make Charline and Louise like me a frightful lot!"

He laid the letter down with a look on his face that cut back through all the shabby years.

"People like Sallie," he said to Louise, though he looked at Charline because he liked the way her eyes shone; "People like Sallie—if there are any others—never change. I thought we'd have her to dinner. The day she got here. In the evening, after she'd had a chance to get rested, and——"

"Are you crazy?" said Louise. Her repressed resentment poured into the casual moment was like vinegar in cream.

He thrust the crumpled letter slowly into his pocket, staring at her. He often forgot—after all the telling!—the real cause of the trouble between them.

"To want the oldest and best friend I have to come to my house?"

"To want anybody to come here who doesn't have to! And as for dinner——"

"Oh, I know we're poor and all that, but she wouldn't care a rap."

"Well, I'd care! I wouldn't be conscious of anything else!"

Charlie got up. "God knows I believe you," he said quietly, and went into the hall.

He took his hat from the rack and came back and stood in the doorway, turning the hat with his fingers. "I won't ask her to anything. I doubt if I have the heart even to see her. I——" His voice grew flatter and flatter. "I was a fool to suggest it."

He walked matter-of-factly down the hall, but at the front door anger boiled in him until he shook, and as he went out, he slammed the door so hard that he broke one of the small panes of glass in it.

* * * *

SALLIE MAYHEW came without being asked. At 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

They had finished dinner and were all in the living room. Charlie was reading by the window in an old smoking jacket with threadbare elbows; Charline lay on her stomach on the floor in a welter of newspapers, rooting out the "funnies," and Louise was on the couch in a dress she had made of off-color brown cotton crepe, which she would never have bought if it hadn't been so cheap. Soon she was going to sit up and change her dress and get hold of herself, but in the meantime she lay with her eyes closed. She had had a backache all day.

The table in the dining room was clearly visible through the cane and bead portieres that hung between the rooms. One end of it was littered with the debris of an eaten meal, and the other with a box of water colors and some paper dolls that Charline had been painting; a pipe and tobacco jar and a ball of blue yarn with a crochet needle in it.

When the taxi stopped at the curb and Sallie got out, Charlie gave her a startled glance, a more startled one to his rooms and family, and said quietly:

"Here's Sallie Mayhew."

Louise sat up so vigorously that the couch creaked. The scene had been peaceful and flat, stale and depressing; at the utterance of Sallie's name it became tawdry, humiliating.

"She can't come in—with things like this!" She went to his side and looked over his shoulder. "She mustn't come in, Charlie. She mustn't!"

"Don't talk so loud; she'll hear you. And don't be a fool; she's got to come in. She's seen us."

Their eyes had met. The essence that was Sallie had come in to him through the window and stirred the quick of him. He had some of the same sort of feeling for her that he had for Charline; nothing could change it. Good old Sallie! They had met in a lightning-flash—after all these years—through the window.

But they didn't meet again. Louise fixed that. She couldn't help it. Things had got beyond her now. She didn't want to, but she sent him to the door a shabby man, who had failed at home and in his work and had no heart for talk.

And Mrs. Aldington (that was her name now, when one stopped to think of it; she was married to a very rich man in London) came in, beautifully, perfectly, exquisitely dressed and millinered and shod and bobbed and manicured; perfected indeed, in every way known to wealth and taste and ingenuity.

When she went away the littered ugly room became real again. An immense clatter seemed to have died out of the air. Charlie had had no heart for talk but he had said a great many words. While Sallie had looked at him strangely, puzzled, probing for the boy she had known; appealing now and then, first in one way and then in another, to Louise to help her find him.

Well, he hadn't come out! He was sick and miserable, curled up away down at the bottom of Louise's husband. The latter stood in the middle of the room now, looking around him at his home—taking care not to see Louise who had thrown herself face down on the couch again—and then went and picked up his pipe and stuck it in his mouth and started for the door, meaning to take a walk; but Louise brought him back.

She raised herself suddenly and said: "I want to talk to you." And then, "Go and play in the garden, dear," she said to Charline, "and don't come in until I call you."

Charline moved toward the door. Louise swung her feet over the side of the couch.

"No; you better stay, after all."

The soft dark coil of her hair slipped until it was like a little toque stuck on rakishly just above her right eye. One of the straps on her flat-heeled slippers was loose. Her dress was drawn up until one plump white-stockinged leg showed to the knee. She looked sick or drunken.

Charline wavered toward her to pull down her dress and straighten her hair, and then edged almost imperceptibly toward her father.

"The time has come when she ought to know the truth!"

Charlie took the pipe out of his mouth. "She won't get it from you now; you're too excited. If you keep her here you'll regret it."

"There's very little about my life that I don't regret!" Her voice was as shrill as metal. She was almost too angry to know what she said. "She's seen me slaving and skimping and saving—going without everything I need to keep me decent—thinking of only her and you—and now I want her to realize that she's seen what happens when a woman is such a fool as that! Maybe it will help her a little bit when her own time comes to pick a husband. She's seen her mother subjected to the most humiliating, the most degrading, the most shameless——"

"You talk as if I had arranged it."

"I'm not blaming you because she came. You couldn't help that. But if you are not to blame for the way things are with us, the heart-breaking, degrading, miserable poverty we live in, then who is?"

Charlie had a slight nervous twitch in a muscle near his left eye, which wasn't noticeable sometimes for weeks at a time. It began to flutter now at the top of his cheek. But his voice was still quiet.

"Nobody. Nobody on God's green earth. I've done the very best I could, and you know it.

"I don't know it!"

A bleak, pinched look came into his face. "Do you mean that?"

"Haven't I been saying it to you in a dozen different ways for years and years? Of course I mean it!"

He looked at her for a long moment, while the muscle beat, beat, beat at the top of his cheek.

"What do you want me to do?" he said painfully.

"How do I know what you can do? I know what I'd do in your place! If I couldn't make more than you do at your precious old law, I'd open a garage, or a butcher shop or learn how to lay brick, or go into the undertaking business. Heaven knows what! But I'd do something that would give my family a decent living!"

"You sound like a lunatic," he said slowly, almost to himself, and not angrily. It was their first bitter quarrel in which he had not lost his temper.

"I'll probably be one if this kind of thing goes on."

"You must send Charline away or stop talking like that."

"She shan't go away! And I won't stop talking! She's going to hear this out! Come here, darling, to Mother."

But Charline didn't come. She closed her fingers tightly around the hand her father slipped down to her over her shoulder.

Charlie made a beginning sound in his throat but Louise swept on.

"You ought never to have married! You're too easily satisfied. Anything will do for you, as long as you have your pipe and a good light to read by and Charline and enough to eat!" She was close to hysteria now. "And you can't learn that other people aren't like that. I'm not like that! And I'm through. I'm going to Longfield tomorrow to Mother's, and I'm going to take Charline with me! I've seen myself with another woman's eyes, and I'm through."

"So am I," said Charlie levelly. "I'll send you enough somehow for you and Charline to live on in the wretchedness to which you are accustomed, and I'll see Charline, of course, as soon as possible, but it isn't likely that I'll ever want to see you again."

His face was white and slapped looking. His eyes glittered angrily. There was a stillness about his whole body; as if he had gone a long way off.

He bent and kissed Charline. "I'm going out now, and I'm not coming back until you've left." And he walked out of the room neither quickly nor slowly, and was gone. His shutting of the door was more ominous than when he had slammed it. It seemed to put a firm, quiet period to what the three of them had known as life.

* * * *

"ARE you asleep, darling?"

It was long after they had gone to bed that night, in the quiet bedroom at the back of Louise's mother's house in the little nearby town of Longfield, Louise in the big bed and Charline in the cot over against the wall.

Charline didn't open her eyes, but lay still and made her breath come as regularly as she could. But she couldn't keep her eyelids from twitching. She did not want her mother to kiss her.

Louise saw and understood. She tucked the covers in and lightly touched the child's hair and sighed and went back to bed. Her heelless slippers scuffed wearily over the floor.

Charline's heart wanted her to slip out of bed and run after her and try to comfort her; but her body stiffened. She shivered and pulled the covers over her head. She was trying to shut out the picture of her mother sitting on the edge of the couch with her hair awry, her eyes blazing and one white-clad leg showing to the knee. She began to cry softly. She felt that she had lost her mother as well as her father.

Louise settled herself on the pillow, but she didn't sleep.

* * * *

LOUISE finished making the salad for midday dinner and slipped it into her mother's refrigerator. She sighed as she closed the refrigerator door. She had been away from Charlie three weeks, without a word on either side.

She walked through the house to the front porch where Charline sat on the top step, her hands in her lap and a new quietude about her, and sat down beside the child.

"Is 4 o'clock when the mail man comes, Mummie?"

"Yes, dear."

"Do you think——? Don't you s'pose he might possibly bring a letter——? Just a little one? Maybe to me?"

"He might, darling. He never has, but he might."

"He didn't say he'd write, did he Mother? He said, 'I'll see Charline, of course, as soon as possible,' but he didn't say he'd write. Not even to me."

"No. But we never can tell. He might."

"Oh, if he'd only write down on a piece of paper, 'I love you, Charline!' Or 'Your loving Father!' Or even just 'Father!' That would be ever so much better than nothing, wouldn't it?"

"Yes, dear, ever so much."

She slipped an arm about her daughter and they fell silent. Her mind was like a shaken compass: whenever it was left quiet it crept back toward its north, which was Charlie. She could lose all sense of time and locality by beginning to think of him, she wanted him back so intensely.

She had taken him to pieces in those three weeks and examined him minutely. She had sorted him out, trait by trait, and totted him up pro and con, and, along with him, herself and life, the past and the future. For some time she had known that the Q. E. D. of the process was waiting below the surface of her mind. It came up now, quiet and clear and dreary.

"I've got to give up. I can't change him, and I love him. We'll have to get along without a lot of things we ought to have. I've got to give up—and do it for good."

"Why, Mummie, you—you're crying."

Louise gathered her up until it hurt. "Let's go back to him, Little Charlie!"

Oh, Mummie, would you?"

* * * *

IN the taxi, rolling along the familiar streets, Louise saw that this had been coming ever since her marriage, that it was inevitable. It would be easier always, now that she had accepted it. After she had tried long enough and honestly enough, she might even get the same kind of serenity that Charlie had; might learn to want, not what she needed, but what she had. It was a big, hard thing she meant to do for Charlie. It would have been impossible if she hadn't loved him a great deal.

As they turned the corner by the "Mortuary Home" there was a new peace in her heart. "Whoso loseth his life shall find it." She saw now what that meant. She looked at the old landmarks with a new tolerance. They'd make out well enough. * * * Charlie was worth it. * * * "The kingdom of heaven is within you * * * "

"M-mummie!" squeaked Charline's startled voice. "Wh-where is the house?"

Louise realized blankly that she was staring straight across the place where it had stood, and that there was nothing there but a rubble of bricks and a gaping hole which had once been a cellar. A sign on one of the trees read: "Manson & Sharpless will erect a new, modern bottling works on these premises." Her heart rose and choked her. Her blood was singing in her ears.

"What'll we do for a place to sleep?" Charline said in a little scared voice.

The taxi driver had got out and was looking in at her curiously. "Is this the place?"

"Drive to—to the Mills Block, on the corner of Main and Lincoln," she said, and took hold of Charline's hand, and they sat up together straight and stiff while he did so.

The letters of the sign, white on a green background, kept jigging before Louise's eyes, "A New, Modern Bottling Works on These Premises"—just as she had adjusted herself to remaining there for the rest of her life.

"What do you s'pose did it—an earthquake?"

"No, dear," she said with an effort. "It wasn't an earthquake. Father has sold the house to somebody who's going to build a bottling works there. Try not to think about it until we see him. We'll get to the office now in just a minute, and he'll tell us all about it."

"But s'pose he's not in the office?"

"He's always in the office until half-past five, and it's not four yet."

"For rent." The words leapt at her from Charlie's window, and slowly the street began to turn around. Through the welter of it she searched the wall for the old familiar sign. There was only a lighter spot in the bricks to show where the first Charles Stearns Wyant had bolted it there sixty years ago. And the other sign was gone from the balcony. The street turned slowly, and the buildings leaned forward over her.

The man was holding the door.

"Take us to the Saddler Hotel," she said. "Something has happened. My husband is not here."

"If you're Mr. Charlie Wyant's wife——"

"Yes, yes; I am."

"—he's over at the garage. I saw him there a while ago. It's across the street from my stand. Half a minute!"

He jumped back to his seat and started with a jerk. "Right around the corner," he called in through the window.

She sat as rigid as if she had been frozen. She was cold from head to foot. The taxi swung around the corner.

She saw his back first, with "Modern Methods Service Company" stitched across it in bright yellow script. He wore brown denim overalls and was bending over the tank of a touring car, filling it with gasoline. One hand held the end of the hose and the other rested on the lever that controlled the pump. He was looking up at the indicator. "Five," he said. "That's all she'll hold. A dollar thirty. And remember that we've got the best mechanics in town when you need repairs."

"I'll do that same," said the man in the touring car, holding out a two-dollar bill. "How do you like it, Charlie, as far as you've gone?"

Charlie handed him back seventy cents. "I like it fine. And, as for the law, I feel like the youngster who went off to law school and stayed two weeks: I'm sorry I learned it."

The man laughed and let in the clutch. "You can count on my trade," he said as he rolled away.

And then Charlie turned and they faced each other. Little candles lit in his eyes. "Why, Louie!" he said, and stuck his head and arm in the taxi window and held her tight and kissed her first on the cheek and then on the lips. He hadn't called her that since they began to quarrel.

"Hello, little duck," he said to Charline. "Out with you!" He opened the door, and Charline jumped out and began to climb him as if he had been a tree.

Louise followed. "Go on into the office there where we can talk. Here you are, Joe." He disentangled himself from the arms and legs, set Charline down with a pat and paid the taxi man. "Never mind the bags; just leave them there. I'll bring them in later."

"You don't work here, do you, Father?" Charline said on a long, frightened breath as the taxi driver went away.

"Don't I though! I work here about fourteen hours a day!"

He shut the office door behind him and turned to Louise.

She held out her hands to him with a smothered sob. "Oh, Charlie, I've smashed your life! I've been terribly wicked! I——"

He took her hands. "You've jarred me out of a rut three generations deep. It was so deep that I couldn't see anybody's point of view but my own. I couldn't see that a man hasn't got the right to decide that his wife and child must do without money just because he doesn't care about it. I——"

"Money!" she said with a little moan. "Money's not as important as I thought it was!"

"Well," said Charlie, "I'm making about twice as much of it here as I used to, with every chance of making more."

"By working fourteen hours a day and wearing the uniform of a servant! In a town where your father and grandfather——! I'll do anything on earth to help you. I'll take in sewing or study stenography—or anything! I'll live on whatever you make! Only you must get out of here and go back to your profession! I—" she looked around her and shivered—"I couldn't stand this!"

"Poor old Louie," he said gently. "Did you think the scion of the House of Wyant was hired here? I own it. I'm it!" An old grim came up out of the past. "'The Modern Methods Service Co.'—that's me. That"—pointing to another man outside, in a uniform like his own, dispersing gasoline to a truck—"that is one of my minions. Do you see that arrow on the gasoline tank? Watch it. Every time it passes a gallon mark, that's four cents profit for me—that is, us—you and me and the hop toad here."

Staring at the fascinating red arrow, Charline's eyes got bigger and bigger. And then she noticed a second tank. "Is that yours to?" she said in an awed voice.

"Everything's mine," said Charlie, grandly, with an inclusive gesture. "And, Louise, look here." He pulled out a sales sheet from a drawer. "Yesterday we sold 445 gallons. I'm going to make more out of gasoline alone than I used to make at the law. And in addition there's storage, and parts, grease and oil, repairs, and every prospect of getting an agency for a good cheap car by the 1st of September."

"But how——?"

"I sold the house dirt cheap—I had to get the money quick—but it was enough to make the first payment here; and—I've been an awful fool, Louise! The Middle Western Security Co. took a mortgage for the rest without batting an eye. I could have done this any time I wanted to! And I'd never have done it if it hadn't have been for you!" He gave her a long, honest look, free from any touch of rancor. "There'll always be money enough now."

"Oh, Charlie," she said humbly, "I'm so—so sorry for my part of it!"

"Don't be sorry," he said gently. "Money's far more important than I thought it was. It's a hard thing to get at the truth about—money!"

Louise sat up so vigorously that the couch creaked.

25,000 Churches for Rent

More than 25,000 churches—one-fourth the total number—in the United States are vacant because "people don't go to church any more," according to John Clover Monsma in May McCall's.

"People know a lot more than they did a generation back," declares Mr. Monsma. "The church has failed to realize the vast increase in popular learning and is sending out thousands of men for whom well-read and well-schooled farmers can not possibly have much respect." Telling why the churches are empty, and how to remedy this situation, he says:

"There is the minister who is well educated and who still doesn't give the people what they want. I have received countless lamentations from laymen in this connection. They tell me that what they want is soul food, while their ministers give them nothing but brain food. They want a preacher in the pulpit, not an amateur scientist.

"I still remember the time when the rural church was practically the sole medium of social intercourse. But now the farmer is no longer shut up in his own little world. Automobiles, newspapers, the radio, have in a sense placed the great world itself at his feet. His mental horizon has widened to an enormous distance, and the little church or meeting house doesn't loom up half as large as formerly.

"There is another thing the rural citizen will call your attention to, and that is the multiplicity of church organizations.

"In my own territory where I carried on my investigations there is a little town with four little churches, all of different denominations, and all so close together that on Sunday they disturb one another in singing. They're all in the same block! And today they all preach and pray and sing the same thing. The situation hardly appeals to a sensible man or woman.

"There is also noticable among the American people a growing dilike of what I would call a religion of prohibitions, a religion that says, 'Don't do this; refrain from that; do not go there.' Many of them have no objection to 'Not Allowed' and 'No Trespassing' signs, but they want to see the sensibleness and the reasonableness of the injunctions.

"The remedy?

"You can divide the thousand suggestions in two well-defined groups.

"Here is what one group proposes: The country church has not kept pace with the humanity of the new day. She is lagging far behind. She is too narrow in her views and methods. She should branch out into all sorts of social work. In other words, bring the modern institutional city church into the country, and see what happens.

"The other group champions a different plan. They say the church must remain true to the ideals of her Lord. The great trouble with the church of the more recent past has been that she busied herself too much with things that were not of her immediate concern, and the only way in which the country church, and any other church, can get back to her early florescent condition is for her to tend strictly to her own particular business. That business is purely spiritual in nature.

"Our national life in all its remifications is too closely wrapped up with the fate of the country church.

"The two groups described a moment ago will get a chance to work out their different ideas, and one or the other will succeed. A steady, progressive movement will develop in all parts of the country.

"The country church will regain its glory and live."

Bathing Costumes Take on Importance

Paris (A.P.).—One bathing suit is no longer considered enough for a sojourn at a fashionable resort, so two and oftener three are included in the new wardrobes.

One is a substantial swimming suite of two-piece variety, wool shorts and wool vest, with matching cap and shoes. Another, also two-piece, consists of shorts and a vest of brilliant modernistic design or bright cross stripes. The third costume is a beach suit of bright printed silk or equally bright jersey.

All have matching robes and all are cut to the lowest decollete worn in the evening, so there will be no hiatus between the evening dress and the sunburn acquired by day.

The Bedouin beach cap is an innovation. A square silk is worn, shiek fashion, under the bathing cap to protect neck and shoulders from the sun.

White sailor's caps, turned up abruptly from the face, are favorite beach headgear for men and women.

Vogue of Anklets Increases in Paris

Paris (A.P.).—The popularity of slender gold or platinum chains worn under the stockings around the ankle, grows daily in Paris. Many clients of the exclusive dress houses, particularly if they be French, regard the anklet as a conventional piece of jewelry, as chic as half a dozen bracelets.

Unlike bracelets, the ankle chains are worn with all types of costume, except sport. They must be of excellent workmanship and smoothness for the sake of the chiffon-weight hosiery which slips over them.

Undyed Panamas Revived for Summer

Paris (A.P.).—Straw hats, particularly natural colored panama and peanut straws, are back in high favor.

Of medium size, with plain ribbon bands tied in a bow or tailored knot, the uncolored straw hats are seen with many kinds of costumes. The most frequent form is natural colored straw of fine, flat weave, tied with a band and bow knot of black cire ribbon. The under side of the hat is unlined.

Paris (A.P.).—A coat designed by Cyber has fullness fitted in at the waistline by applied bands of material. Below the waist the skirt is amplified by godets. Raglan sleeves exaggerate the breadth of the shoulders so that the effect is that of a shaped coat. The material is black satin.

Paris (A.P.).—Paris likes unevenly draped dresses of flowered chiffon. A model designed by Louiseboulanger is of grass green with a printed design in orange, blue and red. The puff sleeves, sewed on at the elbow, and the deep scarf collar are characteristic of the designer's dresses.

Paris (A.P.).—In order to give it the fashionable unlined look, Paul Caret puts a black georgette doublure in a coat of black crepe roma. The fur cuffs, set on flared bell foresleeves, and the shawl collar are of white ermine. The back is plain.

Paris (A.P.).—A white evening gown, designed by Paul Caret, has a deep and uneven hemline of black tulle. An elaborate design is carried out with gold beads on the white georgette of corsage and long skirt. The waistline is nearly normal and is fitted in with tiny tucks.

Paris (A.P.).—The color of a three-piece suit designed by Premet is orange-red, with trimming of metallic gold cloth on the blouse. The material of coat and skirt is wool jersey with a thread of artificial silk in it. The sleeves of the cardigan are novel, cut seven-eights length to show the cuff of the blouse.

Paris (A.P.).—Yteb makes a reversible coat in royal blue woolen with the alternate side of blue and gray check. The wrap, like many reversibles, is cut on straight lines, with raglan sleeves. The same type of coat frequently is made in waterproofed silks and light-weight kasha of same or contrasting color.

Paris Uses Green In Many Shadings

Paris (A.P.).—Pewter green is a new color used for spring. It is close to the lava green introduced last winter.

Jade, chartreuse and lizard are other greens used extensively. The most fashionable shades are a composite of gray, yellow and blue. They are usually dull in tone and are nearly always used in dull surfaced materials.

Built in Jewelry Gains With Women

Built in jewelry to the modern woman is as important as built in bookshelves to the book lover.

Costume jewelry is a phrase to be taken seriously in the planning of modern wardrobes, says the Woman's Home Companion, and trinkets—small pieces of jewelry—are being considered by women everywhere in advance plans about the clothes they will wear.

By built in jewelry is meant the accommodation of perhaps a single pendant to a costume.

"Do you dislike the weight of a pendant suspended round your neck?" asks the magazine. "For you was designed the simple frock unadorned save for a harmonious pendant—lapis with blue, jade with green, topaz with brown—hung on a ribbon of fabric like the dress, fastened at the shoulder seams."

The suggestion is made that in the future women will choose their semi-precious stones with the idea of fitting them into some particular costume that is being planned.

Summer Styles Deal Short Skirts Blow

The back to the cloth movement in women's clothes will be indorsed in wash dress styles appearing during the next few months.

Tight-fitting skirts, skimpy sleeves and close-fiting waists should be guarded against, says Farm and Fireside, calling attention to the imminent need of planning wash dresses.

While cotton, linen or silk will be used in these early summer dresses, cotton probably will be used to a very large extent due to the vogue it established during the season's openings at Palm Beach. Plain and printed linen is as popular as ever. While silk always will be favored by some the fact that two or three cotton dresses may be purchased for the price of one in silk doubtless will aid in establishing a permanent liking for cotton goods as a pleasant summer material.

"Cotton suitings printed in imitation of linen are seen in many shops," says the magazine. "Such cottons styled as carefully as linen make very satisfactory frocks and of course are less expensive. Then, too, one must not overlook ginghams and the modern prints that are so charming and yet so reasonably priced."

ON GARDEN TOOLS

Dear Jimmy—Now that you've been at the game a while you probably realize that in a real garden the various tools and appliances used for cultivation and maintenance receive such hard use that only the best of materials and workmanship can stand up under it. The strain of the work itself is severe enough, even if it were not complicated by exposure to all kinds of weather conditions.

So it is a point of ultimate economy to invest only in first-class tools and other equipment. Good quality in the beginning, coupled with a reasonable amount of subsequent care in the way of cleaning and oiling metal parts and painting wooden ones means many years of real service and satisfaction instead of the one or two seasons which often are enough to bring about the finish of inferior implements.

Matters like these may not seem particularly important, Jimmy, but in the long run they count for a lot.

Yours always, GARDNER.

Auto Protector Stops Motor When Oil Fails

Efficient protection against burned out bearings, and other troubles resulting from attempting to run an automobile without lubricating oil, is afforded in an attachment which stops the car when the oil is exhausted, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It is connected with the vacuum tank at the top and functions through a valve which shuts off the gasoline when the oil pressure fails. An emergency screw permits the driver to obtain sufficient gasoline for driving to the nearest service station, should the shut-off occur while he is on the highway.

Pads Save Workers' Knees and Clothing

To spare the knees from bruises and soreness and to protect the clothing, pads have been devised for wear when tasks require kneeling, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. They are made in different styles, a waterproof variety being furnished for such work as laying concrete.

"Canada Dry," the drink of connoisseurs

"CANADA DRY" is served at the embassies in Washington. It is served at the Savoy in London . . . at St. Moritz . . . in tens of thousands of homes in the United States. There must be some reason for this universal appeal.

"Canada Dry" is made from pure Jamaica ginger and other absolutely pure ingredients! It contains no capsicum (red pepper) to give it a bite and tang. It is blended with a care and skill which comes from generations of makers.

This is really the reason for the distinction of "Canada Dry." The result? A really fine ginger ale which you can distinguish from all others—inferior imitations too—as you distinguish a rare old wine. No wonder it is drunk wherever distinguished people gather! No wonder you will want to serve it to lend that final note of elegance to your dinners!

"Gas and 'sour' stomach can now be corrected without the use of burning, irritating soda, or vicious, habit-forming cathartics."

Calcium carbonate, in tablet form, is the ideal anti-acid: sure, swift and positive in its soothing relief, yet utterly safe in its use. It is the only remedy which does not upset the acid equilibrium of the body and is incapable of over-dosage.

Stuart Tablets are calcium carbonate in its best and most convenient form blended with other soothing substances. That's why we urge their use as the only kind for children, and best for men and women.

STILL TIME TO WIN THE "MELODY WAY" CONTEST

Dewey and Musical Essays to Win Prize Money for Post Boys and Girls

Dear Post Boys and Girls—This has been a wonderful Eastertide with cherry blossoms on the trees in the Speedway, egg rolling at the White House and lovely weather. Is it any wonder that thousands of visitors, many of them boys and girls, came from other cities to spend the holiday in the National Capital.

I am sometimes afraid that Washington boys and girls do not appreciate the privileges which are theirs in this magnificent city. The historic landmarks, the great pu'lic buildings and many scenic beauties are passed by Washington young people with hardly a glance, while other persons travel thousands of miles to view them.

Boys and girls have until April 20 to win the $2 prize on the subject "How I Learned to Play by the Melody Way." So get busy and give your experiences in learning to play through this simple but effective way.

The Junior Post is anxious to complete the distribution of the membership pins to the members of The Washington Post Junior Writers Club. So please fill out the membership blank in today's issue and send it in as soon as possible.

It is very gratifying to have such a fine response as The Junior Post is experiencing. Please do not be disappointed if your work does not appear immediately, because those entries which have any element of time must, of course, have the preference.

Do not forget the Dewey contest. The life of this great hero is an inspiration to all of us, and just in writing about him you will learn a great deal of American history.

Bird Princess Learns to Fly.

(Honorable Mention.)

Little Princess Bluebird would not learn to fly. She was a very lazy princess, for she would rather sit in the nest and gaze at the blue sky and the snowy clouds than flap her wings and fly.

It was getting on in the summer and Big King White Feather was afraid his beautiful daughter would have to be left behind when the fall came and all the birds flew South. Therefore he was very anxious to teach her to fly, but she would not be taught.

Finally it was suggested to him by a bird who called himself a traveling wise man to call an assemblage of all the young mateless males in his kingdom and let each have a turn at trying to teach the beautiful princess to fly.

Force was forbidden, but any other means was to be permitted. The one who succeeded could have the princess as his wife.

"This," thought the king, "is a very good plan, because if Little Bluebird marries a bird she does not love it will serve as a punishment for her stubbornness and the trouble she has caused us."

Now, Little Bluebird had not been contented in watching the fleecy summer clouds roll by. She had been very unhappy, but the king had not noticed this.

In fact, she was so sad that her heart felt like lead, and she was afraid she would fall if she tried to fly.

Why was she unhappy? You guessed it. Because she was in love. She was in love with a big, strong-winged bird named Giant Wood Thrush, whom she could not marry.

Her father had told her that a wood thrush was not of the same class as a bluebird. So she had seen Giant Wood Thursh only once in a while when Big King wasn't near. Big King White Feather had forgotten all about Giant Wood Thrush now in his worry over Little Bluebird.

This bird, however, was in the crowd of nobles who were going to try to win the princess by teaching her to fly.

When the great day came and the crowd was assembled, who should be the very first to approach the beautiful bird but Giant Wood Thrush.

She was so happy that her heart became light and she wanted to fly.

She wanted to fly to the very top of the highest cloud and have him with her. So, as the others saw that Little Bluebird was going to submit they sadly went their way.

After she had learned to fly, one lovely morning she and Giant Wood Thrush were discussing their good fortune in finally being able to marry, when Little Bluebird asked thoughtfully:

"I wonder how father ever got that idea of marrying me to the bird who could teach me to fly?"

"Do you wish me to tell you?" asked Giant Wood Thrush.

"Why, yes, if you can," replied the puzzled princess.

"I disguised myself as a traveling wise man and told your father that plan when he asked me the question that I knew was first in his thoughts. You see I just had to have you," he explained, giving her the sweetest bird kiss.

How the Sea Got Its Name

(Honorable Mention.)

Somewhere in this world, no one knows exactly where, there is a land where the fairies lived. The fairies named this place "Awinding Rivers," because the rivers all wound here and there and everywhere, making islands of the land.

One day two rivers started out for the same place. Of course, the rivers didn't know it, or they would have turned to go some other way. When they came at last to a large shallow place, they went in. This was to be, forever after, a very memorable incident.

All the fairies jumped up and down. "See! See!" they cried with glee. "Two rivers met. Go and get our queen. This a lucky place shall be."

The fairy queen came on a beautiful yellow butterfly. She had a golden buttercup crown, a pink cosmos dress, a purple violet robe, stockings of pink spider lace, and green leaf shoes.

She was indeed lovely, for all these clothes became her fair complexion. She had raven black hair and eyes the color of the sky after a rain. Her lips and cheeks were like roses.

The fairies formed a circle and told the queen what they wanted her to do. She said, "This shall hereafter be called the 'Sea,' because you cried 'See! See!' when you first saw it. It shall be spelled s-e-a. Should any one chance to see the sea for the first time, they too shall cry, 'See, sea!' "

Then she cast a spell over the sea and caused other rivers to flow into it, which made it larger, day by day.

The ceremony ended and the queen flew away.

That is why the sea is called so, and why, when we go to the sea it seems to put a spell over us. Whenever you go to the sea after this, just think of beautiful Queen Alma Christina, who christened it.

How Bob Won A Great Victory

(Honorable mention.)

There was once a boy named Bob, who was loved by everyone but a group of boys who were very rough, which hated him.

One day his mother sent him to the store to get some meat. On his way back he had to cross a bridge.

While he was crossing it he saw in the canal a boy struggling and screaming.

Bob could plainly see that he couldn't swim, so he dropped his meat and dove in. He caught the boy and swam safely to shore.

The boy was taken to the hospital and soon could breath freely.

When the boy got out of the hospital Bob saw that the boy whom he saved was the captain of the rough boys who hated him.

The rough boys soon became good. Bob became captain of No. 10 Boy Scouts and was also awarded a medal as a prize from the Boy Scouts.

"Playing Happy in Spring."

(Honorable Mention.)

The woodpecker taps on my window,
Sweet and low the bluebirds sing,
While winter fades away to a green foe,
They tell me, here comes the spring.

The green grass grows on the hilltop,
My bunnies new families bring;
When the sweet clover fields bud a new crop,
I play happy all the days of spring.

Spring Arrives With the Lilies

(Awarded $1 Prize.)

When the world was young there was everlasting summer. The flowers always bloomed and the trees always blossomed. But the flowers were not particularly beautiful to the people, for they were used to nothing else. Thus they grew and spent their fragrance on an unappreciitive world.

This angered one of the gods very much and he decided to punish the wicked people. "I have sent flowers," he said, "for the people to enjoy and this is the way that they treat my gift." He was very wise and knew that they would appreciate them more if they were taken away.

Deciding thus, he sent heralds into the world to issue his proclamation. They went to every orchard and stream where the people were wont to enjoy themselves. They told the people that no longer would they eat fruit and bathe in bubbling streams all of the time. They said that the god ordered that all flowers would wither and die, that the fruit should rot and fall to the ground and that the leaves should fall from the trees. And, to add to this, they were to work hard to stave off a painful and awful thing called cold.

And so it came to pass that all happened as the god had command. The people worked from morning until night to keep alive and warm. They mourned for the days when there were blossoms and fruit everywhere and when men did nothing harder than sitting under the shade of trees eating luscious fruits.

When the god thought that they had suffered enough he thought of a new scheme. He sent the pure white lilies out of the earth and gave them gentle breezes to wave in. At this the people rejoiced thinking that the god must be appeased. The lilies continued to wave in the breezes telling nothing of the coming seasons. They just nodded to and fro, smiling a lilyish smile and humming a lilyish tune.

ROBERT R. LANE (age 13).
1708 Thirty-seventh street northwest.

Curls

(Honorable Mention.)

Johnny sat on the back steps and scowled fiercely at the world in general.

Although very few realized it, Johnny had a great trial in his life, one that sometimes made him very unpleasant to live with.

Johnny had curls, big, soft, golden-brown ringlets, and, being thoroughly masculine, he hated those even more than he hated school.

As he sat there there came back a memory of a certain tall bottle of greenish liquid which was at that moment reposing on a shelf in the garage and which, according to old negro Sam, would "take the kinks out 'n a corkscrew."

"Why, then," thought Johnny, "wouldn't it take away his own wave, which did not resemble a corkscrew in the least?"

With him to think was to act, and a few moments later he was standing in the garage eyeing the bottle reflectively.

Quickly he made his decision and, uncorking the bottle, poured a liberal amount of its contents on his head.

He rubbed it in thoroughly and slicked his hair down contentedly. At last there would be no more teasing from either the gang or his pesky sister!

At supper time he entered the dining room anticipating a sort of mild surprise at the slick state of his locks. What really happened was beyond all his imagining. The effect of his appearance on the family was terrible.

Sister let out a little shriek, mother and Aunt Nan gasped and Aunty dropped her cup, and father began to choke. Finally his father managed to speak.

"John," he said, "you are absolutely incorrigible! Can't you go for one day without getting into some outlandish mischief?"

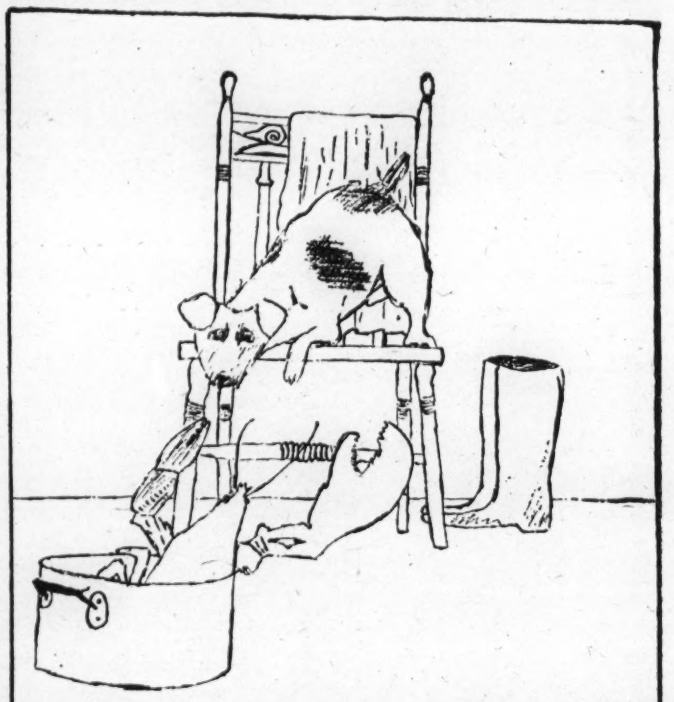

"Oh, your beautiful hair!" wailed his mother.

"You ought to be whipped," put in his sister, disgustedly.

Astonished at this outburst, Johnny glanced from one to another helplessly. Then he caught sight of himself in a mirror and what he saw made his mouth fly open. His hair had become several shades of bright green!

After several hours of painful and exhausting scrubbing and clipping, all of which left his hair as curly as it had ever been Johnny resigned himself to a lifetime of curliness.

NEXT TIME SHE'LL KNOW

(Honorable Mention.)

"Going to senior prom, Betty?" asked "Reds," so called because of his flaming red hair.

"Don't know—yet," answered Betty, smiling.

"Suppose you're waiting for an invitation from that stuck-up Bob Holrien," grunted Reds, sticking his hands in his pockets and swaying back and forth. "Well, you'll probably get one, too!"

"See here, Reds Ferris, don't you say that again to me. Bob isn't stuck-up. He's nicer than any of the other boys, and he's president of the graduating class," flung back Betty.

"Yea, who cares about that?"

"You have to be popular to get elected president." Then as though she couldn't think of anything more cruel to say, she added: "I don't see you holding any office," and walked away.

"What's on your mind? You look as though you just lost an arm," said Bub Whalen, coming up and slapping Reds on the back.

"Aw, nothing. Don't girls get your goat?"

"Do they? And how! Bet Betty turned your invitation down, judging from the gloom on your face."

"Well, not exactly, but she might just as well. Come on, let's go over to the gym. Guess the bunch are there by now. We're gonna select the committees for the prom," and turning abruptly, Reds walked over to the gymnasium, followed closely by Bub.

It was three days before the dance and the whole senior class was agog with a lively interest in everything. Everybody was in a hurry, girls were shopping for new frocks and boys were seeking last minute dates!

"Who are you going with, Betty," asked Marie and Ruth, almost in the same breath.

"Why, Reds has asked me, but I couldn't tell because I was hoping Bob Holrien would ask me," Betty answered slowly.

"Oh, don't be so stuck-up, Betty. You know Bob will never ask you if he had to stay home. There's only one girl he'll take, and if she doesn't go, he won't," answered Marie, impatiently.

"Certainly. You have one chance in a million. Better take Reds," put in Ruth.

"Just the same, I'm going to try," haughtily declared Betty, as she walked away to meet Reds.

Two days more and Bob hadn't asked her yet. Still she kept putting Reds off. Still he kept asking. Finally, the night before the prom, as the two young people were sitting on Betty's front porch, she spoke to Reds in her very sweetest manner:

"Reds, do you still want to take me to the prom?"

"Gee, Betty, I'd love to——"

"Then you may!"

"——but I've asked Lorelei." Because he couldn't bear to see the disappointment she must feel, he hastily got up and walked across the porch to the other side and stood watching the moonlight play across the lawn. Suddenly a smothered sob came to his ears, then a soft hand was laid on his arm. He turned and looked straight into the eyes of the girl he had had to turn down.

"I'm awfully sorry, Reds. Truly I am. I didn't realize what I was doing. I never stopped to think about your fun," and turning swiftly, she started for the door.

"Betty," called Reds, as he ran after her, "it's all right. Really. I'm awfully sorry you couldn't get Bob to take you, but I've asked——"

"Never mind, Reds. I'm the one that's wrong. The old adage, you know, 'You can't eat your cake and have it.' I hope I'll know better the next time," and smiling through her tears, she stepped inside and softly shut the door.

"Next time," mused the unhappy young boy, as he slowly walked down the road. "Next time."

Accidents Will Happen

(Honorable Mention.)

It was the day before Easter. Mary Johnson, whose age was 9, had gotten a new dress, a pair of shoes, a hat, and coat for the occasion Mary thought Easter would never come. After 24 long hours it did come. Mary arose bright and early and after completing her Sunday duties she visited a friend with her mother's warning in mind, "Don't get your dress soiled."

She found her friend, Dorothy, dressed in her Easter outfit also. Dorothy said, "Hello Mary, let's play tea party." Mary agreed, for she liked to play tea party. The table and chairs were placed in the dining room and everything was gotten to have a tea party.

The girls were talking merrily when Mary swung around and hit the teapot accidentally, the tea falling on her new dress, leaving a large spot. What must she do? Tell her mother? "Yes," she thought, "If I don't she will find it out anyway." Mary said "good-by" to her friend and went home nervously. She told her mother, who did not scold her, for she knew it was an accident.

You may be sure Mary's next Easter dress was worn to no tea party.

Famous Boys and Girls

A little Indian princess of 12 years of age stands among the immortals in the annals of child heroines. It was little maiden Princess Matoaka or Pocahontas, the 12-year-old daughter of the Great Chief Powhatan, who not only saved the life of the leader of the Jamestown colony of 1607, but who established between her people and those of the English colonists and England herself, the first friendly relations.

Not only did Pocahontas spring forward at the crucial moment to claim Capt. Smith by personal appeal, when a warrior was about to kill him with a huge club as he lay helpless with his head on a block, but she insisted that Smith be given into her keeping as her servant. She sent him back to Jamestown with a guard and her best wishes.

This pretty little Indian maid who was only of the age of most of our Junior High School girls, showed rare tact and presence of mind. We owe to her a debt of gratitude for, if Capt. Smith, the leader of the little Jamestown band, had perished, there is no doubt that people in England and other nations would have been reluctant to come here It took courage to come into a strange land. Certainly some of those who were about to embark on this great adventure were cheered by the story of the brave and generous act of this child who made herself, even at that date, notable among the women of the world. It is no wonder that so many of our most patriotic men and women point with pride to the fact that they have the blood of that Indian princess in their veins.

Pocahontas was really much like a princess in a fairy story anyway. She looked like the Indian version of one. A Jamestown record described her as "a little girl wrapped in a robe of deerskin lined and edged with pigeon down, a white heron feather in her black hair, a forest maid truly, but royal every inch of her."

It is not hard to picture her, coppery of skin and with faint color in her cheeks, her black and shining hair in braids, with the sparkling eyes and ready smile showing red lips and white teeth we see on the pretty Indian girls of the present day Pocahontas must have had much personality, for her father loved her more, so legend tells us, than any of his twenty sons and twelve daughters. In those days sons were the greatest factors in an Indian family.

The Princess Matoaka was a fearless, lighthearted little maiden. She liked to hunt and was acquainted with every inch of the forest. She passed many months going from one capital to another with her father and in visiting his people.

When, as a matter of self-preservation, the colonists, after John Smith went to England, were obliged to capture Pocahontas and hold her as a hostage for their safety, the first real American romance was born, unless, of course, the story is true that Pocahontas was in love with Capt. John Smith. Anyway, while she was a captive, most kindly treated by the colonists, John Rolfe, a fine man, fell in love with her. He worked hard to convert her to Christianity and if you ever go to the United States Capitol you will find in the rotunda a picture of the baptism of Pocahontas which tells its own story.

So John Rolfe and Pocahontas were married and even Powhatan was pleased. He sent an old uncle and two brothers to Jamestown to attend the wedding ceremonies. It was before the marriage that the baptism of Pocahontas took place. She was christened Rebecca and was thereafter known as "Lady Rebecca," but we like to call her the little maiden Pocahontas. The Rolfes lived along the James River in a home built by Rolfe and here their son, Thomas Rolfe, was born. When Mr. Rolfe took his wife to England she was received as a princess and given almost royal honors. Her retinue of redskins, men and women, attracted much attention. Here she again met Capt. John Smith

Pocahontas died in England at an age when most of our American girls of today are graduating from high school. Capt. Smith wrote in his epitaph of her: "It pleased God at Gravesend to take this young lady to His mercy, where she made not more sorrow for her unexpected death than joy to her beholders to hear and see her make so religious and godly an end."

Her child, Thomas Rolfe, was left in England, where he was educated. He returned to America afterward. Among his descendants and, of course, of Pocahontas, are many of the men and women who have made history during the years of this Nation, including Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the war President; the famous John Randolph, of Roanoke; the Murrays, the Flemings, Whittles, Gays, Robertsons, Bollings and Eldridges

Leaves From Mother Nature's Book.

Dogs were the first tame animals known by man. The English mastiff or its ancestor resembles greatly the pictures of dogs drawn by the ancient Assyrians on their walls, and the Irish wolfhound and Scotch deerhound were familiar sights to the Romans, who conquered Britain long before the Christian era, in that land.

Lapis-lazuli, or azure stone, comes from a rock which must be split by fire. This precious material used to be considered tribute money. But very often is of a rich blue color and shows specks of iron pyrites of a golden hue. Its color is very intense, and while not always of a deep blue shade, varies from a pale blue or greenish blue to a pure green.

The water boa, or anaconda snake, of South America, often grows to 40 feet or more. It can climb a tree, and big ones have been known to seize human beings. Often they disguise themselves to look like trees, and therefore can not be detected until their victims are beyond chance of escape.

Did you ever think how important a thing is grass? Like air and water, it is necessary for mankind, for the seeds of certain kinds of grasses, such as rice and wheat, are used for bread and food, and it serves man in other ways most generously.

A Roman Holiday

A talkative child was disturbing the audience in a movie theater while the screen was showing a photoplay ased on the burning of Rome.

"Who is 'at man?" she insisted.

"That is Nero," the mother whispered. "Doris, do be quiet."

"What is he doing?"

"He is playing the fiddle."

"What is that burning in the park?"

"Hush, dear; those are martyrs."

There was a silence for a few moments; then the youngster created a small-sized commotion when she insisted vociferously:

"Mamma, are all martyrs inflammable?"

A Real Hero

(Honorable Mention.)

"Ding, ding!" heard Fred Briggers, as he was riding past a fire engine house on his bicycle.

Fred stopped at once, because he realized that the engine would have to pass.

No sooner had they passed when he was leaning over the handle bar following them as fast as he could.

Long before he ever reached the place where the fire was he saw smoke rising high in the air.

He was now just about at the hotel which was on fire, so he left his bicycle at a corner store.

After this was done he pushed his way to the fr of the crowd. He saw that the fire had gotten too much of a headway and nothing could stop it now.

"All out!" cried the chief of the firemen, "All out!"

"No, no, my Johnny; you haven't got him out yet."

"But there's no living creature in that furnace," said the chief. "Take your ladders down, men."

"Oh! oh!" cried the woman pitifully. "You can't leave Johnny in there to die. Please send your men in to get him."

"But I tell you," said the chief, scornfully, "there's no living body in there, and besides I know that none of my men are daring enough to go in there."

Now, Fred Brigger was much touched at the woman's trembling words and he gave another look at the building.

"What is that?" he said to himself. He looked hard again, and, to his surprise the object moved.

Fred gave one bound over the rope which held him back and made for a ladder which would take him to the room.

But the firemen were now taking this ladder down, so he had to make a jump for the window. But the ladder slipped from under him and he missed his aim. However, he succeeded in landing on the window below.

He climbed in this, and, looking around him, he saw a fireman's ax. Also, lucky for him, he saw a step-ladder in the room.

He said to himself: "If I can climb to the top of that ladder, I can cut a hole in the floor and get in that room."

Soon he was pecking away on the floor of the room above him. The floor seemed to be rotten, so he had no trouble in getting through.

As he climbed through he saw by him a pale-faced boy. Seizing this boy in his arms he called to the firemen to make a net ready for them.

This was soon ready, and Fred jumped. How glad was he when he felt himself hit the net.

He and the other boy were soon all right, and Fred learned that he had rescued the son of a millionaire.

When the millionaire heard of the rescue, he told Fred that he would give him a new home and everything he wanted. Fred invited his mother and father to live with him.

Our Flag

(Honorable Mention.)

I think that our flag is an article on which every American citizen should look with pride.

When we see it floating over buildings, we should think of all the perseverance many men have had to have to secure and keep the 48 States, which our flag now represents.

Think of the pioneers, Daniel Boone, Lewis and Clark and many others who ventured forth into the gloomy unknown wildernesses and settled a small village later to become some important city.

Think of all the trouble many Presidents have endured to keep peace with other nations.

Then Abraham Lincoln deserves a great deal of credit for keeping the union united after a terrible struggle.

This all shows us that our flag represents, besides loyalty, purity, truth, justice and sincerity, perseverance on the part of many men.

"Kitty"

(Honorable Mention.)

One bright day in September after coming home from a pleasant outing of watching the boat races held on the Potomac, I heard a faint "meow" at my back door.

I beheld, to my surprise, a pitiful sight—a half-starved little waif of a kitten; she had a darling little face, but she was so thin that you could count every rib in her body.

Taking pity on the little forsaken waif, I cuddled her in my arms, where she had begun to purr gently and gave her some milk. She lapped the milk greedily until she licked the last drop from the plate.

After petting her I told the little waif "goodby."

My mother who had gone out earlier in the afternoon had not yet come in, and as I had an engagement I thought no more of the dear little kitten.

Later in the evening after returning home, I was indeed taken aback at the little kitten lying contentedly in the arms of my mother. Mother again related to me the very same experience which I had had, I in turn told her of mine, and it was then decided we would adopt her.

"Kitty," as we called her, became the most important member of our family, all eyes and attention were focused on the new member.

She had grown very shapely and her once scrawny sides were bulging out. I have neglected to give you a picture of our little kitten. She is snowy white with gray and brown spots on her body and has large bluish-green eyes, that stare at you innocently. She makes a very pretty picture.

"Kitty," as she grew older, became my boon companion; we played hide and go seek, eye spy, tag and tussling; we were very much attached to each other.

Grandmother told me that when I went out she would cry and cry for me, but as soon as I would come in, she would jump at me and begin to purr loudly, for so great was her pleasure.

"Kitty" is now eight months old. She and I are still companions, but the cry of her race is in her blood, and she is out quite frequently, but I knew that she enjoys herself with the ones of her race, for so great is instinct in the animal kingdom, even so is it in humans.

"Kitty" is now happily married to "Mr. Thomas Cat," a gentleman of a great coat of gray fur.

Every day early in the morning they greet each other in the language of the cat race, they nose about each other, and lick one another in the mouth; it is a great pleasure for me to watch them caress each other, for their affections are so genuine.

As I write this "Kitty" is now stretched peacefully asleep on the rug, enjoying the heat of the lighted gas logs.

The Potomac

I'm sure many of you have never seen the Potomac River in summer so I'll tell you about it. It is about 20 degrees cooler there than it is in Washington. There are various houseboats on the shores which sell cold drinks and things to eat.

All along the banks there are camps, large and small. Some of the campers go up in April and stay till October, but the average season is from the twentieth of June until the first of September.

There are many canoe houses where you can rent canoes or store your own. Then there are one or two where you can rent rowboats or fishing boats.

There are a few swimming pavilions with low and high diving boards. There is excellent swimming in the river. The Red Cross canoe goes up and down so if anything happens they are on the spot to help.

The water is clear and green and not at all cold. Many canoeists paddle up and down the river and there are also speed boats and outboard motors. It is easy to get to the river.

Just take a Georgetown car and go to the end of the line. Then walk across the Aqueduct Bridge and down the steps and there you are!

If you want to go across the river, take a canoe or boat. The Potomac River is the nearest summer resort to Washington, because it is right in our city, so ask your mothers and fathers to take you up there.

How Theaters Are Cooled

One of the most familiar achievements of the new art of "air-conditioning" is the cooling of theaters. Nearly all of the more pretentious motion-picture theaters in our cities are now comfortable in the hottest weather. The air is drawn by means of a great fan through a chamber where hundreds of nozzles spray a cloud of refrigerated water upon it. By passing it through the spray three results are accomplished. Condensation removes the excess of moisture that makes the outdoor air muggy. All dust is removed. Lastly, the air is cooled. The air leaves the spray chamber at a lower temperature than is desirable in the theater. A certain amount of warm air is therefore mixed with it by means of automatically controlled dampers. A fan next draws the air through metal ducts to the top of the theater. Through carefully designed diffusers located at intervals in the ceiling the cooled air is poured gently over the audience. There are no drafts. Lastly, the air is removed through openings in the floor under the seats.

Real Optimist.

"Pa," said Clarence, "what is an optimist?" "He's a preacher, son, who gets a lot of comfort, as he looks over the empty pews, in thinking that all the absent ones are listening to the sermon over the wireless and will send in their collection by post."

Mary's Lesson

(Honorable Mention.)

One day two little girls were walking along the street. One was named Mary and the other Jane.

"Can you come over and play with me?" asked Mary.

"I will ask mother," answered Jane.

As they were going to Jane's house they heard a frightened cry, as of some one in great alarm.

They hastened to the spot where they had heard the cry and found a big, mean looking man who was dragging a little boy by the hand as fast as he could.

The little boy was screaming loudly, so Mary and Jane ran and found a policeman, who took the man to jail and the little boy was returned to his parents, who were very rich and gave them a reward, and so, although Jane could not go to Mary's, they were both entirely repaid. As you already know, "A friend in need is a friend indeed."

Little Dew in Dew-Ponds

The Down country of southern England is one of the few places in the world where the people go to the hilltops to seek water in time of drought. On the summit of the Downs are found many artificial shallow ponds, most of them very old. The bottom of these ponds consists of a layer of puddled chalk or clay and is impervious to water, so that there is no loss by seepage. It is a remarkable fact that when wells and springs in the valleys below fail on account of protracted dry weather the upland ponds still contain water.

According to popular belief, they are fed by dew, and hence they are known as "dew-ponds." Kipling refers to them in his poetical description of Sussex:

"We have no waters to delight
Our broad and brookless vales—
Only the dew-pond on the height
Unfed, that never fails."

In recent years some careful studies of dew-ponds have been made by Edward A. Martin, and he has published a book about them, besides several papers in scientific journals. The net result of his investigations is that dew contributes little to the water supply of these ponds. The rainfall on the hilltops is somewhat greater than in the valleys, and the principal part of the water in the ponds is undoubtedly derived from this source. It is supplemented, however, by wet fogs which frequently drift in from the sea. Water from these fogs is caught by vegetation and then drains off into the ponds.

Needed Inventions

Fame and fortune await the inventor who will supply any of the following inventions, says Dr. Henry Smith Williams, of Popular Science:

A way to harness the immeasurable energy manifested by static in the radio.

An inexpensive way to refine aluminum from the limitless rock and clay in which it exists.

A method to convert water into fuel gas at moderate expense, as can now be done at prohibitive cost.

Practicable ways to extract potassium from rocks and manufacture phosphorus, thereby fertilizing barren fields.

A way to produce power by controlling gravitation.

Opportunity.

The key of yesterday
I threw away,
And now, too late,
Before tomorrow's close-locked gate
Helpless I stand—in vain to pray!
In vain to sorrow
Only the key of yesterday
Unlocks tomorrow.

Loveliness

Once I knew a little girl,
Very plain;
You might try her hair to curl
All in vain;
On her cheek no tints of rose
Paled and blushed, or sought reposse;
She was plain.

But the thoughts that through her brain
Came and went,
As a recompense for pain,
Angels sent;
So full many a beauteous thing,
In her young soul blossoming,
Gave consent.

Every thought was full of grace,
Pure and true;
And in time the homely face
Lovelier grew;
With a heavenly radiance bright
From the soul's reflected light
Shining through.

So I tell you, little child,
Plain or poor,
If your thoughts are undefiled,
You are sure
Of the loveliness of worth;
And this beauty not of earth
Will endure.

The Manuscript of the Chapel of Aachen

(Aix-la-Chapelle.)

(Honorable Mention.)

In the ruins of a tiny church which had stood for centuries since the time of Gaul's foremost ruler and warrior, Charlemagne, I came across a small iron box which had evidently held holy manuscripts diligently compiled and illustrated by the later followers of St. Francis of Assisi.

There was, of course, no key, so with the aid of my knife I managed to pry open the crude lock with which it had been secured.

The box contained, to my dismay, what seemed to be no more nor less than a small silver chalice, at one time studded with precious stones, but now with only the dust-filled holes, and a collection of holy medals whose ribbons had half rotted away.

As I was only interested in the collecting of ancient manuscripts I let the box fall to my feet and was about to turn back to my hotel on the outskirts of the little town when I noticed that a thin piece of metal had been dislodged from the bottom of the box, allowing an old and faded piece of parchment to slide out at my feet.

This, to my joy and amazement, would revolutionize the archeological world, for it contained the following astounding facts:

"I, Charles the Great of Gaul, do give forth this royal mandate to the people of the provinces of Gaul; that when I die I shall be put in one of the many caves which are in this——"

"Oui, monsieur, ze bump on ze head, she will be well soon!

Around the feet of Jesus
The little children played.
Upon the thirsty verdure
The olives cast their shade.

The children romped and shouted;
The Master loved their noise,
And shared the mirth that rippled
From laughing girls and boys.

And then He told them stories
Of prophets and of kings,
Of wild beasts on the mountains
And timid pasture things.

Until they wended homeward,
Content to joyful rest;
And thus by their dear Master
The children all were blessed.

Alfred the Great

(Honorable Mention.)

The Danes and Norse pirates continually plundered ships and towns when Alfred came to the throne at the age of 22. Alfred determined to put a stop to all this.

One time he went into the Danish camp as a singer. While he was amusing the soldiers he carefully noted the defects of the camp, also he listened to what the soldiers had to say. With this knowledge he was able in an all-day battle to defeat them.

Alfred was a wise father to his kingdom. He disguised himself in many ways so as to learn what his people would like him to do. When he found out what he wanted to know he would perfect his rule. In this way he kept his people contented.

He caused books to be translated so that his people might become educated. He himself translated many of the books. The most famous is the book of philosophy by the Venerable Bede. In translating these books Alfred laid the foundation of English prose.

He kept a standing army, but so arranged it that at least one-third of the army could be at home tilling the soil and collecting their harvests.

Alfred's motto was "While I live, I wish to live nobly, and after life to leave the people who came after me a memory of good works."

Spring.

(Honorable Mention.)

From out the merry woods she comes,
A vision of delight.
Her clothes are soft as the summer breeze,
And her feet as the winds are light.
All dressed in lovely green is she,
And gold is her shining hair.
Who is this dainty damsel?
'Tis Spring I do declare.

Spring

(Honorable Mention.)

The birds are coming,
The bees are humming,
And birds of all colors, bright and gay,
The cardinal, blue bird and the jay.

The birds are singing,
The bells are ringing,
The willows are weeping,
The frogs are leaping,
For jolly spring is here.

April Showers.

(Honorable Mention.)

April is here and the sun shines bright,
Birds are singing with all their might;
But suddenly a dark cloud is seen in the sky,
Frightened birds to their little nests fly;
We wait for a moment, and then comes the rain;
April is up to her old tricks again.

April.

April brings the gentle showers,
April brings the pretty flowers,
And hoards them into sunny bowers.

April brings the Easter bunny,
With his colored eggs so funny.
In April we see robins in their nests,
I think I like April best.

Wild Flowers.

Oh! how I love the sweet wild flowers
And like to roam in fields with them too;
So many grow in beautiful bowers,
With a stream of clear water running through.

The violet, primrose, daisy,
And forget-me-not and bloodroot, too,
Make me not want to be lazy
And live like the wild flowers do.

And oh, such marvelous colors
All of sweet sunset hues
To make such beautiful prisms
Is more than we mortals could do.

They sway so gently in the wind
Like graceful dancers do.
They dance to the tune of birds and their kin
Giving people a happiness due.
The lives of these demure little flowers
Are as pure as the white, white snow;
They give me more happy hours
Than any person I know.

A Queer Occurrence

Yvonne, Elizabeth, La Vera and Isabelle all went up to the woods to play. They had a pine camp. In this camp they had a pipe into which they put fire. They cooked lots of different things on this stove.

As they were sitting there cooking "hot dogs" and eating bread, they were suddenly startled by a noise. It went pit-a-pat, pit-a-pat, pit-a-pat. They paid no attention to it. The sun was going down and it was getting dark. Soon they heard the noise again. This time it came more distinctly and louder. This time it sounded as though it were a person walking.

La Vera said, "Let's go home, for it is getting dark and those sounds are getting on my nerves. Maybe it is a kidnaper."

"Pshaw, that's not a kidnaper. You are foolish to think so," said Isabelle.

"What is it then?"

"I don't know." Just then it came again breaking through the bushes into the camp. The girls got up and ran. They ran home as fast as they could.

When they reached Yvonne's home, they stopped and looked behind them. They saw, trying to keep up with them—guess what? You can't, so I will tell you. It was a little, fat puppy. The girls kept, fed him and named him Rover. They adopted him as the mascot of their club.

The Easter Bunny

"Easter's coming, child, and with Easter comes the bunny that brings the eggs you like so much," my mother called to me. "You may run out and play now. I'm going downtown to do some shopping."

I went out. Didn't I know that she was going to buy me a new Easter basket? The Easter Bunny? Huh!

As I was walking along a voice called—"Come 'ere, boy, did ye know dat de Easter Bunny was comin' tomorrow? Ah bet dat bunny brings ye some nice fresh aggs, ah suah does."

I turned and saw a colored mammy trotting away, dragging a pickaninny by the arm.

On I walked. All I heard was talk about Easter, the Easter Bunny and Easter eggs. It sure was awful, b'cause most of it was to me; me a boy of 8 years The Easter Bunny? I haven't believed in the old thing for a year.

Our Adventures

(Honorable Mention.)

Last year our family went to a small town in Virginia. My Father works for the forest service, and he was down there on some road work. We joined him and set up a camp.

We had a delightful place for our camp. Right in front a creek rolled by. There were lots of wild flowers, grapevine swings and birds.

Now, for some of our adventures. One night, Mother went down to see if the kitchen tent was safe, because a dog visited us at night and ate our food. Mother had a flashlight.

Just then she heard a noise. She threw a stone. "Woof," was the reply. The next morning we found bear tracks all around, so we had a bear visit us.

One day we went over the mountains to get provisions. When we returned my glasses and several other things were missing. We looked all over for them. I knew where I had put my glasses.

Later we found out that a colored boy had them. My Daddy went over to get them. On Daddy's way over there he passed the colored boy, who had hidden in the bushes.

The boy was afraid that Daddy might arrest him, so he laid the glasses in the path.

Mother and I started out to meet Daddy. Just as we got to the top of a hill Mother saw Daddy

She said. "There is Daddy, and here are your glasses," as she picked them up.

We had many other exciting adventures. We all had a lovely time, but I think we were glad to get home.

As onward to slumber we go.

The Martian Canals

(Honorable Mention.)

The surface of the planet Mars is crossed in various directions with what Schiaparelli, the great Italian astronomer, who discovered them in 1877, called canali, which word when translated into English means channel, but which we incorrectly call canals.

Though no one knows what they are and whether they were formed by nature or by living beings.

They have in consequence given rise to much discussion as to whether Mars is inhabited or not.

This planet gets his name from the fabled god of war, Mars, and the ancients so named it because he is of a fiery red color, as this has been the symbol of war ever since men began to fight among themselves.

It is at an average distance of 141,000,000 miles from the sun and revolves around our celestial luminary once in about 687 days.

Recently a report came from the Harvard Observatory that the astronomers there had observed, through the powerful telescope, a five-pointed star, 300 miles in diameter.

Maybe some day the inhabitants of this earth may get sense enough to understand that the Martians are trying to communicate with us and that we should make some attempt to signal back to them.

The Junior Post.

(Honorable Mention).

How nice it is to get a weekly letter,
Bringing news of children far away;
And then—yes, something better,
It teaches us to work, not play.

It prepares us for the business world,
So that we may be up and away
Whenever some one needs a boy or a girl
To perform some act, with out delay.

Oh! then may we proclaim
We owe it all to The Junior Post,
Which taught us to take one definite aim
And wade through the darkest waters, to the bright and shining coast.

Each His Reward

(Honorable Mention.)

A yellow crocus leaned nearer to a white one and said timidly:

"What are the violets quarreling over?"

The white crocus shook his head with vexation:

"The same old story," he answered, "as to whether the white lilies are going to open before Easter. The irises have already."

"Were you mentioning my name?" a giant iris asked, yawning.

The white crocus swayed as the breeze touched it.

"Yes," he replied softly, "I was talking to Goldie of you and the Easter lilies."

The iris sniffed in scorn.

"The lilies are late this year," he said, and I shall be the center of attraction."

A daring crimson geranium, set out on the porch for the air, laughed gleefully.

"You won't," he cried; "I heard the mistress say she was going to cut wild cherry blooms to deck her table with Good Friday; and the hothouse will supply lilies for Easter."

"Who cares?" a big blue violet asked crossly; "the honor always goes to some of you big flowers."

There was a gentle rustle in the leaves, a new face smiled up, and a new voice tinkled out gayly.

"Hello, violet," it cried; "I'm glad to see you all this year again."

Iris would not look down from his height, but two pearly tulips called back cheerfully:

"Hello, hyacinth—yes—we're all here quarreling as usual over who will be picked to deck the table this Good Friday."

"Sssh!" a new voice cried. It was arbutus, who had wandered from the woods into Nancy's garden. "Sh! here she comes."

Down the walk came the little mistress bearing a large pair of shears.

"I want these, Muddy, and these," she said, and tulips, violets and hyacinths fell for her share.

"Muddy," she asked, "aren't these the most springlike?"

"Yes," came the answer, "but you've left one out."

"Crocuses," cried Nancy. "The dearest of all—for they by right own Good Friday. But Muddy," she said after a minute's pause, "let's leave them growing here just because they are Good Friday's flower."

Schooldays.

(Honorable mention.)

Little tots swinging on the gate
Calling to large one, "You'll be late,"
Little they know and little they care
That schooldays, too, they'll have to share.

They are happy, gay and free
As small children ought to be.
They love to play; they are teachers, too,
And care about school as much as you.

As they climb from 6 years higher and higher,
The time of school comes nigher and nigher.
They seek with all their strength to earn
"Cat" and "rat" and such to learn.

As they climb upward through the years
They look back down (and some with tears)
On the time they strived to know "two times four,"
And they think that this time will never be more.

The Lucky Shot

(Honorable Mention.)

In the night the Princess had been stolen by a Dragon. The guards had run away, they were so freightened. The King gave the Prince his best horse and saddle to help him find his wife. Away went the Prince and soon came to an old hut by the roadside, in which lived a very poor old woman. The Prince asked her if she had heard or seen anything in the night.

"Yes," she said, "I saw a queer monster come up the road."

The Prince gave her some money and rode on. When it grew dark he heard weird noises ahead of him. He dismounted and crept up the road. He saw a castle guarded by two fierce lions. He knew that he could kill the lions, but that the noises of the fight would bring the Dragon and the other castle guards and that they would kill him without mercy.

He thought for several minutes, then he took some meat and walked up to the lions. They were about to jump on him when he threw the meat past them. They stopped, ran to it and started eating it. The Prince then slipped through the gate unnoticed.

He saw his wife trying to escape from the Dragon, which had four heads He had heard of this Dragon and knew that if one head was cut off, two new ones would grow in its place. However, it had one spot no larger than your thumbnail, which, if injured, would mean instant death to the Dragon. But nobody knew where that spot was.

The Dragon saw the Prince and attacked him. The Prince shot arrows at him, but they broke without hurting him. The Dragon made a leap for him just as he was aiming his last arrow The Prince did not have time to aim, but let it fly. It hit the Dragon in the armpit, and instantly he fell dead.

The castle disappeared and they returned home safely.

A Son of the Meteors

(Honorable Mention.)

A great dead star rushed through space, cold and lightless. With its very planets torn away millions of years ago. It was a derelict of the heavens, a frozen wreck in space.

It had once been a beautiful star, burning in the heavens with a myriad of colors, having dozens of glimmering planets swinging slowly about it while it swept majestically through space.

But for millions of years it had rushed thus aimlessly except for the gravity currents, and now the dead and brittle remnant itself was on the verge of destruction.

For, with a suddenness uncommon among the stars, it doubled its speed and gradually began to assume as an orbit an ever-narrowing circle. It was in a whirlpool of the stars.

For several centuries it continued to circle about. But at last it began to disintregate into meteors.

And all that left the narrow end of the whirlpool a hundred years later were two huge meteor clouds—"dark nebulae."

But, in the wisdom of He Who Moves the Stars, there is no beginning and no end. So, after two million years of traveling in courses more or less parallel, the two meteor clouds began to separate.

When they were ten million miles apart, they commenced to rush together.

A century later, they collided with a force almost inconceivable. The potential force of their gravitational attraction was instanly changed into heat, and equally fast a great new star blazed forth in the heavens, ready to begin development—a son of the meteors!

Birds.

(Awarded $1 prize.)

Hark, the birds are singing,
The music in our ears is ringing,
As we watch them in the tree,
Baby birds we hope to see.

Birds at last have come,
Robins, there's always some,
Blue birds, black birds and the jay,
All seem to want to welcome May.

Bobolinks, swallows and the dove,
All of them we truly love,
When we hear their cheerful singing,
Spring, her joy, this way is flinging.

Last Day of School

(Honorable Mention.)

The day of our last lesson had arrived and it was to be a great day. Mary was going to bring her little lamb, Jack Horner was going to bring a big plum pie and Tom, the piper's son, was going to bring his pig.

I was the first at school and I couldn't keep still until I saw some of the other children coming.

I saw Mary with her lamb following close behind her heels. Miss Muffet dressed in her best. She had hoped to bring the spider, but she was afraid it would bite her.

I saw Tom coming running toward us with his pig squealing and wiggling under his arm. Jack Horner brought a plum pie, too.

When the children had all arrived we began our lessons. We did them very well, only a few accidents occurred. Tom's pig stuck its foot in an ink well and the lamb started eating some flowers and upset the vase.

Jack Horner gave us a piece of plum pie and we all thanked him for it, too—because we only got plum pie on Christmas.

Then we recited poems. One little girl raised her hand and said, "Teacher I can say a poem," so she said:

"Twinkle, twinkle little star,
How I wonder where you are,
Up above the world so high,
Like a diamond in the sky."

We all clapped and said it was a fine poem, after which the teacher said we could be excused.

When we went outside what a sight met our eyes. There was Mother Goose herself with her big gander and she said, "Children I am going to take you all for a ride on my goose."

And that night when mother had tucked me in bed I said to myself, "this has been the best day of the whole year." Then I dropped off to sleep to dream it all over again.

A Visit to the Gods

(Honorable Mention.)

It was very cozy in the big overstuffed chair, especially when I looked out of the window at the rain, which was pouring in torrents.

I was studying my history lesson which was about the Greeks and the Romans. All at once I opened my eyes wide.

I seemed to be in a strange land. Several people were standing near me and by their togas I knew that they were Greeks.

As I stood and looked around in amazement the rain stopped, and a beautiful rainbow suddenly appeared across the sky. The end of it came down and stopped at my feet. I started to climb it. I thought I would never reach the top. But at last I did.

I saw a darling little bridge. I crossed it and I found I was in a great hall where a meeting of the gods was being held.

I recognized Thor and his mighty hammer, Lokyi, the mischievous one; Apollo, the beautiful lyre player and God of the Sun, and many others.

Thor beckoned for me to come close to him. He asked me if I would like to know how he made the thunder, then he took his mighty hammer and pounded upon the ground. The sound rolled and echoed through the great hall.

I asked Apollo where the gods kept all their gold, silver and jewels. He took me through three halls, then three rooms. The first room was full of gold, the second silver and the third jewels. Then he told me he would have Lokyi guide me back to earth. Lokyi and I started down the rainbow.

Lokyi, who loved to tease people, said that he was going to draw up the rainbow, so that I could not get back to earth. I started to run down the rainbow. I reached the end and had to jump to reach the earth. I felt myself falling. What a terrible feeling that was. I seemed to hit the ground and opened my eyes to find myself lying on the floor beside the chair. How nice it was to find that I had been dreaming.
